It was not long since that the Pacific coast papers chronicled the arrival of an eccentric female, who had walked from Omaha to San Francisco. The Bee to-day notes the arrival here of a female pedestrian, who can discount the one above mentioned in several ways. She came all the way from Pennsylvania on foot, and put in an appearance in this city yesterday, after a journey of several weeks. She came accompanied by her two little sons, aged respectively six and eight years, and a child not yet two years old. This child she had drawn after her in a small two-wheeled cart, in which also were her provisions, such as they were, and her carpet-bag, stuffed full of old and dirty clothes.

The two boys likewise had walked the same distance with their mother. She was a woman apparently forty years of age, ugly as an alligator, and one who probably had not had the luxury of a bath for many a month. The same can be said of her youngsters, who were the sauciest little rascals that ever crossed the Big Muddy. Yesterday morning this forlorn family of pedestrians camped on the sidewalk at St. Joe ticket office and there partook of a frugal breakfast, washed down with some milk, which was very likely being begged from some charitable person. A reporter of the Bee approached the head of the wandering family, and addressed her thus: "Madame, where do you hail from, and where are you going?" "None of your d-d business," was the polite reply.

Further than this we could not learn, as she seemed too much engaged in her breakfast. The older boy spoke up and said, "Give me five cents and I'll tell you!" "Tell him we are going to hell," chimed in the old lady, who by this time had exhibited evidences that she was not exactly in her right mind. The reporter handed him a nickel, and in reward learned as above stated; that they came from Pennsylvania, and wanted to go to Cass county, Iowa, after they had seen Omaha. Neither the mother nor the boys would tell their name, or anything further.

The family found their way to the depot, where they excited considerable sympathy and curiosity, especially the little child in the cart, who was terribly sunburned, and who seemed to be suffering from the effects of the trip. They were sent over the river by Captain Payne, in the dummy, and are now tramping on Iowa soil.
