affections of the Liver, and in all Billous Complaints, Dyspepsia, and Sick Head-ache, or diseases of that character, they merable and irresistible temptations she is obliged to resist every moment. To be wise with regard to dress is to be sublime. To pass by an attractive shop and to see hung in the window a fascinating toilet that excites your admiration; to devour this charming prey with your eyes; to build all kinds of castles-in-Spain with regard to it; to dress yourself, in your mind, with its coquettish laces, its gay ribbons, and to say to yourself: "I'il will put two resetttes in my hair; the white ribbon will serve for ascarf, and I will use the lace for the waist and the sleeves," and then suddenly to tear yourself violently away from such culpable thoughts, to reproach yourself about them, as thought you had been committing a crime, and then to fly coursgeously and heart broken away from the temptation, without even stopping to ask its price. This re-quires more strength of soul than to wage in terrible combats. A remark which we heard the other day, made with a tone of stoical resignation and noble humility, seemed to us to equal the grandest words of the auique Spartans and Roman heroines. A woman was going to a ball, to a magnificent fete, and she was busy select ng materials for her dress from a quantity of soft, shimmering silky stuffs, which her eyes were devouring with delight. She asked the price of them; it was very high. Then, pushing them sadly away with the tips of her fingers, she said with a sigh: "It's too dear; I will wear my old dress!"
My old dress! Do you feel how much

A Race for a Bride.

POLLOCKSVILLE, N. C., May 3 .- A novel wedding occurred here to-day.

It seems that Messrs. John Miller and

Alexander Bibb, two well to do farmers, were in love with the same lady, Leonera Loyd, a beautiful girl of this place. She was not able to decide as to which she liked best. On Sunday morning Bibb walked home from church with her, and left under the impression that she said she would marry him Last night lover No. 2, Miller, went to see her, and understood her to say she would marry him. Both men this morning went to the court house to get out the marriage license, and there men. Each one armed himself with the necessary documents, and each left with a license to marry Mies Loyd. After some talk they agreed that the first man who reached the lady's house should marry her. The residence of Col. Loyd, the lady's father, is one mile distant, and both men started on the race for the bride. Bibb soon left the main road and darted into the woods, expecting to make a short cut and reach the house before his rival, but Miller kept the road and got in on A TIORNEY AT LAW-Office in Hanscom's the home-streach, eight minutes before his rival. Both men were in eight of OMAHA, NEB. each other going up the lane to the house, and Bibb's efforts to overtake his rival was almost superhuman. When they reached the house Bibb. from sheer exhaustion, fainted on the porch, almost at the foot of his lady When the matter was state! to her she said he had come to the onclusion that she liked Mr. Bibb the best, and therefore she would marry him. Her sympathies were A TTORNEY AND COUNSELOR AT LAW. Won over by seeing him faint. She office. OMAHA, NEB. loved her; but that he who faints at the danger of losing a bride must love her more than he who is cool and unconcerned in the midst of it all. The affair causes intense excitement in this small place. To-night the Rev. Aaron

Jasper, the well-known Baptist minister, married Bibb and Miss Loyd. So ended one of the most startling romances in real life ever known in the nistory of North Carolina. Reminiscences of Early Railroading. Mr. J. H. Jackman, in a recent letter, shows that in the matter of speed locomotive engines of to-day are not greatly superior to those of earlier times. He says: "In 1849 Ross Winans, of Baltimore, built a locomotive for the Boston and Worcester railroad. It had a seven-foot driving-wheel and was intended for very high speed. It had steel springs to support the weight, and was fitted with many new devices. I was sent to Baltimore to look after the construction and delivlook after the construction and delivery of this locomotive, and also to study the matter of coal burning, which was a new thing on roads in New England at that time. I ran the engine for about six weeks, and should have run her longer but from the fact of her driving wheels breaking. They were made entirely of cast-iron, with chilled faces. These broken drivers were replaced with imported wrought iron wheels, the first of the kind ever imported. The locomotive was named the Carroll of Carrollton. Its speed under favorable circumstances was one mile in sixty seconds, the fastest I ever ran it; the trial was not accurately noted, I having enough to do to attend the machine, and those with me were too much flustered with the excitement worthy. It is not less singular that in the circumstances was one the machine, and those with me were too much flustered with the excitement worthy. It is not less singular that in the circumstances was one and the carroll of carrollton. Its speed under favorable circumstances was one mile in sixty seconds, the fastest I ever ran it; the trial was not accurately noted, I having enough to do to attend the machine, and those with me were too much flustered with the excitement ery of this locomotive, and also to the machine, and those with me were too much flustered with the excitement to accurately note anything. I have traveled many thousand miles on ocomotives since that day in order to test speed; and while I have seen some high speed made, still I have never seen the locomotive that could lay right down to it and outrun the "Carroll of Carrollton." In those days we had no power brakes, and to run at such high rates of speed sometimes became dangerous. I remember one instance in the night time of rounding a curve at about sixty miles an hour, when a danger signal met my view; I shut off steam and whistled down brakes, but they did not seem to check me. I whistled again. Still the speed kept up. I gave the third signal for brakes, and then freversed my engine, saying to her: 'Do your duty, my beauty, or in twenty seconds it is good-by to rail-roading. We came to a stand still eighty rods from a train on the main track, having run one mile and a track, having run one mile and a quarter from the place where I first discovered the red light." Colored Men-Heroes

Martyrs. Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier. Two colored laborers, named Telfair and Stewert, went downinto a fire-well in Charleston on Thursday morning. A few moments later, overcome by poisonous vapor, they were lying in the mud and water gasping for breath. A colored laborer named Simons hasten-Foldants from any states at in and to as in divide of one eight (b) interest in the following described one eight (c) interest in the following described one eight (c) interest in the following described one of the state of the naxious gas he are liked on the liked of the liked of the state of the naxious gas he are liked on the liked of t ed to their relief. friends. Brave and loyal hearts had throbbed under their dusky skin. Knowing that they risked their lives, they demanded that they be allowed to make an effort to rescue the men of their own race who were breathing their last. They shared the lot of the man whom they hoped to preserve to his wife and children. Their own dressed; you do not know what innuwives are widows and their children are orphans. When white men bear themselves as Seymour and Robertson did, their names ring through the land as heroes and martyrs. Shall less honor be paid to the two colored men who, with no hope of reward or expectation of fame, sacrificed their lives on the altar of humanity! They are heroes and martyrs-an honor and example, and we trust an inspiration to their race! The spirit of true freedom is indeed abroad when unfettered colored laborers can rise to such a height! But something more is needed than words of praise. The men who gave up their lives for their comrade, the aborer who died at his post and the laborer who narrowly escaped and was sent to the hospital were the sole support of their families. For their relief, a Charleston firm, who insist that their name shall not be known, sent us last night $50. They say: "Death overtook these men while at honest labor, and we hope the charitable of our city will see that their families are not wholly penniless and destitute.' From another source we have received $20 with a similar message. We trust other citizens will follow these good examples. It will give us unfeigned pleasure to see that the contributions are properly applied.
