HAND COVERINGS. SOMETHING ABOUT GLOVES IN CLUEN

The only real mode-t and unobtrusive thing about the modern toilet arare not recommended as a remedy "for Jot very well be simpler or could passments may take us by the hand. Immense "crams" are told of Queen Elizabeth's gloves; one pair of white kid are said to have been embroidered with gold thread, large pearls and colored silk. They were slashed with yellow satin at the elbows and stiffened with bullion gimp. One peculiarity of these gloves was that they had five holes in the hands to permit the perspiration to escape. We have often seen sheepskin gloves—six buttons for fifty cents the pair, you know-that had more holes than that in them before they were well buttoned around the wrist. That they followed a royal precedent appeared to be very little consolation to the wearer. Another historic glove of Queen Bess is that which dropped and that was restored to her by the Earl of Cumberland. She bade him keep it as a mark of her favor, and the gellant old beau had it set with jewels and wore it in his hat at tournaments otever after.

A very dainty pair of gloves were given to Lord Campbell, in 1855, when he chanced to be presiding judge at a maiden assize. They were white, exquisitely embroidered, and trimmed with Brussels lace; the arms of the city were embroidered in silver on the

Gloves, in the olden time, meant something more than a covering for the hand. Bishops were put in posword at the coronation of a glove, and at the coronation of a French king the gloves are blessed. Son why I named him Judus. I've got Who want glossy, luxuriant when a sovereign of England is de Bible ter and wavy tresses of abundant, crowned, the herald throws down a dat name." beautiful Hair must use glove by way of a challenge to any LYON'S KATHAIRON. This elegant, cheap article always makes the Hair grow freely and fast, keeps it from falling out, arrests and cares grayout, arrests and cures gray-ness, removes dandruff and itching, makes the Hair curly har that is quoted at as much as strong, giving it a curling tendency and keeping it in is quite too precious to be bestowed any desired position. Beau-

The highest novelty in the way of gloves to-day are the English Silk taff-tas. They are of the length of a six-button kid glove, and have three bands of delicate lace-work about the wrist. Cream, pearl and white are the choicest tints, but old gold is a favored co'or in these as in all other gloves. They are from the famous London house of Dent, and are called he Maltese glove.

There is a special line of silk mittens, reviving the old-fashioned picnet manufacture of our grandmothers. They are shown in strong colors, scarlet, blue, and in deficite shades of and sells real estate. Beom 8, Creighton pink, rose, gold and blue, as well as in all the shadowy tints. The hand. both palm and back, is in very firm silk, the wrist and arm in open work only, or the whole is of lace-work. These high novelies abroad are always worn over a finely-fitting kid glove, not too highwristed. This gives an added elegance to the teilet, shows off a beautiful srm, without that bare handed appearance that always recalls to the thoughtful mind the idea of a cook taking her

Sunday outing. The cheaper qualities of these gloves are not serviceable; $1 20 buys a good article, and from that the range is upward to $2.
Lisle thread gloves promise to be again popular, and the mistakes of last season are all duly corrected. They did crawl down the arm, everybody knows. This season this crawling tendency is corrected by bands of elastic very cleverly disposed, that are relied on to keep the things in place. The German gloves are cheaper, but they by no means equal the French article. One should be careful in buying to see that the finger is fitted by woven gores and not by seams. Pretty lace wrists in two shades, gray and white or Isabella and brown, are a late fancy. Twenty-two different styles are shown, ranging in price from 60 cents to $1.50 and in size from 51 These silk and lisle—the latter are finished to look precisely like silk-are, after all, but a fleeting fancy. The gloves of standard value are those of good kid, and they appear to have attained absolute perfection in manufacture.

Much difficulty is found in match ing the heliotrope shades, but a certain Chinese pink is an exact match for evening wear, though quite unlike by day, and of this shade there is a supply.

Kid gloves match the monochrome dress stuffs as a general, the two most popular being coachman's drab and coachman's gray to match the colors of the walking coats.

Love in Pa's Hat. Hair Dresser's Chronicle.

Mr. M. was a retired manufacturer and possessed of considerable fortune He also had a daughter nineteen years of age of great personal attractions. What wonder, then, that she should have made many a young fellow's heart beat quicker who tried to gain her virgin affections? But "papa" M. took care of his treasure as if she were the pupil of his eye, and many were the unhappy mortals who left his hos-pitable table never to return. "Plenty of time," said he, "when the right one comes, and I approve," etc.
But the right one had come long
