The Scene Changed, From the Star House to Hawes' Judicial Palace,

Where the Entire Tribe Air Their Immorality.

Yesterday's issue of THE EER contained a harrowing tale of the raping of a young and delicate girl by one Pete O'Brien. The deed was mmitted in an old building in this city known as the Star house, where the girl had repaired to make up some beds in the rooms rented to lodgers by her parents. To make the case more deplorable, the girl swore out a complaint Thursday evening against her father, on the charge of incest. Below we give an account of the preliminary examination:

THE PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION. The time for the preliminary examination of the case of the state vs. O'Brien, was set for 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Long before that hour the crowd began to gather about the police court, and all available standng room outside the railing was soon

During the delay occasioned by the non-appearance of the district attorney, the wife of O'Brien made her way through the crowd, and approaching her husband, who was at the time matter bearing on every phase of the consulting with his attorney, General O'Brien, grasped him by the hand and burst into tears. She was handed a chair, which she accepted.

My name is Clara Wirth; I live on Tenth street since we sold out the Omaha house; I will be sixteen years of age the 14th of next October; I have always heard that Mr. Wirth was my father. I saw Pete O'Brien at the Star house, in room 10, Wednesday morning; I went there to make up the beds in some of the rooms; I left my hat in Mrs. Boss' room, No. 10, and shortly after went back to get a pail. Mr. O'Brien and Mrs. Boes had a jug of whisky in the room and were drinking. They asked me to drink, but I refused. They said if I did not drink

COZZENS' CONFLAGRATION.

The Old Ark Withstands Heated Term.

At a quarter before one o'clock this. that that ancient land mark was indanger of being swept away by a conflagration. There was some delay in giving the alarm, and in the meantime the Cathedral bell was tolled. The fire started in the old laundry flames soon enveloped the structure their thanks to their defender, Mr. and lighted up the neighborhood, de- Green ceiving the crowds of people that swarmed there into thinking that the old hostlery was on fire. However the routh wing did catch fire, and burning brands falling on the roof, kindled a little blaze there. But th firemen worked well and soon had wa ter playing, which wet down the building well, and ere long the burning building was a smouldering heap f charred timbers.

It seemed almost incredible that the old weather-beaten ark could be saved for it is a regular tinder-box, but th fremen seemed to realize all this and worked with vim, and were success-

The amount of damage done is small, the loss on the main building being very slight, only a hole in the roof and a charred corner of the west wing. The stable was entirely destroyed, but the loss on this was not great, though there was considerable difficulty in saving the four mules and one horse stabled there. All were driven out, however, with two of the former only slightly scorched.

The origin of the fire is unknown but is believed to have been incendia ry. Mr. Gillen, who has slept in the barn for some time, told a BEE re porter that from some cause he waked. and found the stable full of smoke He got out of it as soon as possible. when it was instantly wreathed in flames. He says that he saw traces of coal oil on the outside of the building, as though splashed there in order to feed the fire. Others who were early at the scene express themselves as being of the same opinion.

It is most likely then that this is the explanation of the origin of the fire, since there is none other that can be reasonably attributed.

The many dwellers in the old hotel were badly frightened, and the building presented every appearance of a bee hive with awarms of bees crowding through the front entrauce.
