Lost Children Found. Three little children, the eldest a girl of nine years, with a brother and sister younger, were picked up yesterday in the outskirts of the city, where they were wandering, evidently lost. They were taken to Lucas' store in North Omaha, where they now are. They have been in Omaha about three weeks only, and do not know the streets. Their names is, we understand, Williams. Their parents can find them by applying to Mr. Lucas or to Marshal Westerdahl.

Attacked by highwaymen. Sunday evening about 11:30, as Mr. George W. Boyden was driving with Mr. E. D. Spears and wife, near the barracks, three burly ruffians sprang from the bushes by the roadside and two of them seized the horses by the bits, stopping the carriage. Mr. Boyden sprang to his feet and struck at them with the butt end of his whip, knocking one of them over. The horses then ran away and left the highwaymen in the lurch. It was a bold and desperate attack, and the villains were foiled only by the prompt action of Mr. Boyden and the fright of the horses. None of the party in the harness were hurt. It is dangerous to drive out late in that locality.

MARRIED. FRENCH—BATES—Victor French and Margaretha Bates were united in marriage by Justice Gustav Bencke on Saturday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Hottenroth, on Eleventh street.

THE TERROR OF TWELFTH.

A Raid Upon the Faro Banks and "Gilt Edge" Houses by the Police.

Someone remarked to our reporter last evening that there seemed to be a peculiar and sudden change in the atmosphere. He thought we would have a storm before morning; it felt just like the calm which precedes the violent tempest or is the precursor of the earthquake. In this instance the barometer was a correct one, as the storm broke upon the city about half past two o'clock and raged for three hours with unprecedented violence. It was not a storm of wind and rain, however, but one of those periodical visitations of municipal wrath, which, coming so seldom, are all the more terrible to experience. The like has not occurred before in ten years, and probably will not occur again in as many more.

During the evening Marshal Westerdahl notified a few of his force to be on hands at Brash's corner at 10 o'clock, as he wanted to go out and bring in some traps. This harmless fiction brought together Officers Gorman, Jacobson, Donahoe and O'Donohoe, who were at the time in utter ignorance of the nature of the expedition upon which they were about to embark. The chief, however, had a big scheme in his head and ordering his men to follow him he proceeded to take a due northerly course on Twelfth street, starting from the northeast corner of Twelfth and Farnham.

He stopped in front of a stairway in that block and posting three of his men at the foot of the stairs, which was lighted up brilliantly by Officer O'Donohoe went up to the head of the flight and entered the room which had recently occupied by Captain Smith as a faro bank. Here was found a motley crew, numbering eighteen in all, who were busily engaged in the bold work known as "bucking the tiger." The officers proceeded not only to capture the ferocious animal, but to pull his teeth, and to take tiger, bunners and all away with them. From here the party proceeded to Dan Allan's place, a few doors north in the same block, but here nobody was found by the proprietor and Mr. Goudley Booker, who were playing cribbage across the street.

"What do you want here?" said Dan as the marshal entered the room unannounced. "None of your business," said the chief, "I want you to come along with me," and two were added to the company of eighteen already waiting below, and the march was resumed until the establishment of C. S. Higgins, on Douglas street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth, was reached. Here a similar halt was made adding ten to the complement of men below.

There was no kicking anywhere, although at the latter place the dealer very naturally tried to secure a dark leather wallet which the marshal seized upon and afterwards found to contain fifteen golden double eagles, $300. At the first and last named places the drawers, boxes and cards were seized, and when the procession marched up Douglas street Officer O'Donohoe had his arms full of apparatus and wealth, the latter in every shape from a copper coin to a bank note of large denomination. At the corner of Twelfth and Douglas Officers Bellamy and Dahleron joined the force, the latter having been telephoned for by the marshal.

The cortege wended its way up Douglas street toward the city prison with the steady tramp, tramp, of an army but about half the captives escaped in eluding the vigilance of the captors and the seven policemen arrived at the jail with just sixteen out of the thirty captured, the other half having vanished up alleys and side streets along the route. The rather unclenchingly squad were ushered down the steps into the corridor of the dingy jail and their names soon taken by the deputy marshal. Fifteen of the sixteen men were namesakes of Pocahontas' nicker object of affection, and the small quartet assigned them probably contained more of the Smith family to the square foot than any other equal area on the face of the globe. There were calls for the police judge and demands for release, but being readily offered by scores of their friends, while a few were sending for Judge Savage, and taking out their victims on a writ of habeas corpus. While the judge was being hurried up the money was counted, and it was found to amount to $24,700 for the first outfit, and $415,750 for the lot, the latter one probably representing the winnings of the evening.

MISS—A case of constipation by using Hamburg Fig.

TO P. W. HITCHCOCK.

I am amazed that a political leper who the republicans of Nebraska buried in disgrace four years ago should dare to obtrude his festering sores into the political arena and arrogate to himself the right to arraign honest republicans for their efforts to purge the party primaries. I am shocked that a notorious political harlot like you, should publicly boast of his devotion to the republican party and mortified that such an infamous corruptionist should vilify and slander me for doing my duty as a republican journalist. I can only resent this insult and punish your insolence by reciting your political history for the information of those whom you have imposed upon by your false pretenses and especially for that class of republicans who have settled in Nebraska since 1876. You assert you have been a republican from the infancy of the party, and I don't dispute that, but you were one of those republican vultures that almost literally tore the flesh from the bodies of the patriotic defenders of the Union; who remained at home shedding red ink for $3000 to $5000 a year, while republican soldiers were shedding their blood at $17 a month. You were one of those mercenary turncoats who, during the most critical period in the history of this country joined the copperheads—for the sake of getting a fat office from Andy Johnson. Let me quote from history: At the outbreak of the war you enlisted heroically by procuring a commission as United States marshal for the territory of Nebraska. You held on to that commission until after your election as territorial delegate to congress in 1864. You distinguished your self chiefly in that capacity in the cadetish trade and tradeship huckstering, disgraced Nebraska and robbed her of the educational privileges of West Point, by recommending William Woodruff for appointment to West Point as a resident of Nebraska when he never had even seen this state. In other words, you deliberately deceived Edwin M. Stanton, was subsequently detected and Cadet Woodruff, by his own testimony, convicted you of lying under your official oath.

You were remanded to private life at the end of your term and soon thereafter secured a commission from Andy Johnson as surveyor-general of Nebraska under a bill gotten up by your self. This appointment was a reward for your apostasy to the republican party which you had betrayed and sought to overthrow by supporting J. Sterling Morton's copperhead and Johnsonian coalition. When Grant came into power in the winter of '69 he promptly kicked you out of office with other cowards and from that time until 1874 you were one of the most bitter anti-Great men in Nebraska. In 1871 you made a still bluff for the U. S. senatorship then held by General Thayer. You secured the coveted prize by breaking up the republican legislative caucus, and uniting the solid democratic vote with the republican bolters upon yourself. It is a notorious fact that you bought the senatorship with money. The price paid for the votes of democrats and seizable Independents was $22,000. The names of the bribed members, amounts paid to various individuals and the circumstances connected with this wholesale bribery were published by the Bee, and other papers. Your senatorial career was a chapter of infamy. You were an active supporter of nearly all the rotten schemes before congress voted for the back pay street car, and other papers. The sheriff and his charge were due in Kansas City at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, when the perilsous part of the journey would really begin. Sheriff Bender did not anticipate any immediate violence, but thought that if they were identified beyond doubt they would probably be strung up unless the state promptly disposes of them or gives them ample protection. "There seems to be a feeling in Kansas," he added, "that the wrong persons have been arrested, but this is doubtless because all hopes of ever catching the Benders had long since been given up." However, he himself believed that he has got the right persons, and thinks before many days John and Kate will be in the clutches of the law.

There seems to be a good deal to support the theory that the prisoners were impostors, although it would hardly seem possible that such could be the case. Some years ago the associate editor of the Atchison Champion was a member of a party of citizens of Topeka, that while traveling in California he met a former resident of Montgomery county, Kansas; that this gentleman claimed to have been one of the Benders never left Montgomery county; that they were suspected first of connection with horse-thieves; that they were seized by a company of citizens who had formed a horsethief detective association; that the Benders, in view of death constituted the murders; told where the bodies were buried and were executed by these regulars. Mr. A. H. Blanchard, of De Kalb, Mo., tells a story confirming that narrated by the Topeka gentleman. He says the bodies were buried in a shallow grave at Fremont do not agree with the description of the Benders. The man described is too large for old Benders, and too old to be Kate; and nothing is said, in the descriptions, of the right hand. Old Bender had lost his finger.

Mr. J. O. Partridge, who now lives at Salina, but who, like Mr. Blanchard, lived in Parsons in 1873, tells an apparently straight story concerning the fate of the Benders, which the Champion believes to be reliable. He (Partridge) belonged to a vigilance committee organized in Labette county to ferret out and punish horse-thieves and other criminals. The members of this committee had suspected the Benders for some time, and had been keeping a watch on their movements. Some of them saw the Benders returning from Drum creek, after disposing of the body of Jones, one of their victims. Suspecting some crime, they followed the dish-wagon tracks, and it length discovered the body of the murdered man. They at once called the descriptions of the parties before the members could be assembled the Benders had taken alarm and were off to the Indian territory. The vigilantes overtook them a few miles out of the line, as they were descending a steep hill. The Benders were in a wagon and their pursuers on horseback. The Benders, whipped up their horses and made frantic efforts to escape, but one of the animals stumbled and fell at the foot of the hill, throwing the occupants of the wagon out. The leg of one of the women was broken by the fall. The old man and John were armed and made a fight, but were soon overpowered. Both were wounded during the struggle. The vigilantes took their prisoners to a creek near by, and bound them. One of the committee

THE DEVIL'S DARLINGS.

They Disappear From This Part of the Country at Last.

En Route to the Infernal Regions, via Kansas City.

The Whole Family Shot and Hung by the Vigilantes.

The train from the west Saturday afternoon brought among its passengers the notorious outfit arrested at Fremont on the suspicion of being the Benders. Sheriff D. M. Bender, of Labette county, Kan., and Dan Congdon, who caused their arrest, were in charge, the former setting by the old lady and the latter by her husband, who was handcuffed. Old Bender, alias McGregor, is apparently a broken down old man with one foot in the grave. He is stooped and walks with seeming difficulty and generally supported by his wife. He was dressed in a shabby suit, an old cap and pants rolled up above his old shoes. He was unshaven and has long, shaggy grey hair and beard. One of his eyes is apparently sightless. His wife is a very large, muscular woman, coarse featured, with large hands and brown hair done up in "papers." The observer would take her for the "man of the outfit," as she is much taller and stronger than the old man. But while the old man gave evidence of being a shrewd and cunning, his wife is illiterate and cunning.

The aged couple were objects of much curiosity along the route and quite a crowd assembled at the depot in this city to take a look at them. Among them were Mr. E. B. Carter, of this city, formerly of Kearney and Senator J. D. Seaman of Kearney. Both of these gentlemen recognized the old folks as the couple who lived in their city in July 1878, and whose sudden disappearance, so like that from Cherryvale, Kan., was related in the Bee several days ago. Mr. Carter climbed up the side of the car and had a talk with the old lady, who admitted having lived in Kearny but said having had no little girl with them. The old man denied ever having been there.

The old man having made no much fuss about going to Kansas, declaring he would sooner die, the prisoners were given to understand that they were being taken to Jacksonville, Ill.

At the transfer a large crowd had assembled to gratify their curiosity by a sight at the Benders who were there transferred to the train of the Washab, St. Louis and Pacific road. The old man was rather inclined to be cross and ugly, and got mad because Sheriff Bender would not remove his handcuffs. The old man remarked: "I want these things taken off; they are rubbing my wrists, and I don't want to get away." When the officer said that he had lost the key of the bracelets, the old man remarked: "You needn't be so tight that way. I ask you to secure the handcuffs, and I want them off." But he did not succeed in getting the officer to remove them.
