THE LAST DEAL. LEAP FROM THE EXPERIENCE OF PACIFIC COAST GAMBLER.

Leadville (Col.) Chronicle. "I never dealt again!" The words fell from the lips of gentleman well known in Leadville, yet few recognize in the elegant, easy going man who now commands the deep respect of his fellow-citizens the once cool-headed, imperturbable gambler who in his day figured prominently along the Pacific coast, and was almost universally recognized as the shrewdest tare dealer in the west. "As for the game's morality, that's neither here nor there. When dealt upon the square it is much like any other game. It is not to be thought that the law will hinder men a bit if they want to play, and often they are forever cured of playing when they find it doesn't pay. I've dealt the game for twenty years, but I've quit now. I made nothing nor lost anything, and but for a sight I once saw I should probably be a gambler still. Hereby hangs a tale. Let me tell it: "Some three years ago I ran a hightoned game at a certain place you probably know, for it strikes me that I saw you there. It was a square game, as I will leave any one to say-a thriving game—for I dealt for half the bloods in town, and often had as many 25 00 as five lay-outs at a time, with too 45 00 much business on hand to even get time to rest. One vening a young chap strolled in, with a sort of curious stare on his face, and I concluded right there that he was green. He was fair-headed and had a pair of blue eyes and clean cut features—an innocent looking young fellow, if ever I saw one. It only required a glance to con-vince you that he was a stranger in the gambling room. He was soon at home though, for I saw in his blue eyes the love of play, and after that wening he was a constant visitor. He played his pile right up and never growled if his luck was hard, and on every second card he' stack the limits up in blue. Take it aitogether his uck was hard—sometimes the hardest think I ever saw. I've hnown him to lose at a single deal seven double omehow it seemed almost too bad. I ouldn't say a word, though, and yet I liked the boy. He had lots of the filthy. I think from the day he began he must have dropped a cool $100,000 on the game, and he never growled. "We both quit gambling the same night—he, poor lad, for sufficient reaons, and I because I loathed the game. It was in this wise: "His coin gave out in a deal or two, and he put up a diamond ring, just to see his ill luck out, you know. The chips soon went. He had a pin, a flaming stone in massive metal. He pa-sed that in without a word, and drew $50, gold. So help me God! I wished him luck as heartily as any player there; but no, his last stake went my way on a losing ace. He drew $300 more I think, on his watch and chain, and tried his line at bets again, but his luck was gone. My God! I'll never forget the pale, haggard look that crossed his face, but he living weve which sweeps along with was game. He never uttered a word, the power of a tornado, followed by and kept his chair like a pillar of others more fierce and strong, and for this circlet seemed to cling even and when the last of the herd had faster than the flashing gem he had passed in before. He at last stripped nothing on that spot of wood or iron t off his finger and handed it to me.

It came reluctantly, this worn old ring. 'What can I have on this?' he asked. 'I don't know what it's value is, but I'll redeem it first of all.' It might have cost five dollars new, but it was worthless then. "Still I passed out a fifty stack in return, just to let him try again. He planked it down in the pot, and then low upon the table he laid his face on his folded arms. Well, for a wonder, his luck changed and he won three times. He took no notice of me as I told him when the limit barred, and so he played two fifty on each card. Would you believe it? In the deal the pot won out and never lost! And still he lay with his face hid in his arms. The deal was out and I shook him up, but not a muscle moved, and raising his face I started back in horror at the glassy expression of his eyes, for the boy was dead!

"I've often wondered to myself since that night what thoughts went flitting through his brain as he bowed his head and hid his face from our sight; what pledges of a better life, regrets for a fortune he had thrown away with lavish hand, and loathing of his irrevocable course. Who can tell? We can but guess at them, but may never feel. His face showed years of hell endured in that brief game, but it was not until the coroner's jury sat that I learned all. Be-5 00 fore them was developed the fact that 5 50 the ring which had changed his luck as it did his existence was given him by his dear dead mother years before. Poor boy! I never dealt again."

"WIPED OUT." A STORY OF THE PLAINS.

What is that! Look closer and you will see that it is a gaunt, grim wolf, creeping out of the little grove of cottonwoods to-wards a buffalo calf gamboling around its mother.

Raise your eyes a little more, and you will see that the prairie beyond is alive with buffalo. Count them. You might as well try to count the leaves on a giant maple! They are moving foot by foot as they crop the juicy grass, and living waves rise and tall as the herd slowly sweep on.

Afar out to right and left—mere specks on the plain—are the flankers; brave old buffalose, which catch a bite of grass and then sniff the air and scan the horizon for intimation of The BEST SALVE in the world for danger. They are the sentinels of

One instant it seems as if 10,000 solid acres of prairie were moving b dily away-again waves rise and fall as the cowards behind rush upon those in front who wait to sniff the air and learn the danger. In one minute the alarm runs down the hard to the leaders-further than the eye can see, and the entire herd is the Simmons' Lives going off at a mad gallop, heads down going off at a mad gallop, heads down. eyes rolling, and no thought but that f escape. If Lake Erie were to dash itself against a wall the shock would be no greater than the awful crash with which this mass of rattling hoofs, short horns, and hairy bodies would meet it. The clatter of hoofs and rattle of horns would drown the noise of a brigade of cavalry galloping over stone-paved road. Ride out on their 'rail. Here where the stampede began the ground is torn and furrowed as if a thousand cannon had been firing solid shot at targets. Here and there are calves which have been gored or crushedhere and there older animals with broken legs and disabling wounds. Here, where the herd was fairly off, you might as well hunt for a gold doilar as a blade of glass. You look for three miles as you look across it. It is a trail of dirt, and dust, and ruts, and furrows, where half an hour ago was a carpet of green grass and smiling flowers. The most dreadful evelone known to man could not have eft more horrible scars behind.

Miles away, on the banks of the winding growling river, are three white topped emigrant wagons. A camp fire blazes up to boil the kettles -men wemen, and children stand about, peering over the setting sun at the distant mountains, and glad that their journey is almost done Butterflies come and go on lazy wing, the crickett chirp cherily on the grass, and the eagles sailing in the blue evening air have no warning to give? Hark! Is that thunder!

Men and women turn in their tracks as they look in vain for a cloud in the sky. That rumble comes again, as they look into each other's faces. grows louder as women turn pale and men reach for their trusty rifles. The ground trembles, and afar off-comes a din which strikes terror to the heart.' "Indiana!" they whisper. No! A thousand times better for them if savage Pewnee da.ed ride down wher those long barrelled rifles could speak a defense of the ceaceful camp."

"A stample of buffalos!" gasped one of the catches sight of

from three rifles, and a shout as each bullet tells. Next instant a shaggy head, followed by a dust browned body, rushed through the camp. Then another, and anoth r. The men shout and wave their arms; the women and children turn paler yet. The roar and din shut out every other sound, and the wagons jar and tremble with the concussion. Now another shaggy head-another-halfa-dozen-a score-a hundred-a great
