AN ICE FIRE.

A St. Louis Blaze Destroys Nearly $200,000—Two Firemen Killed, Three Injured.

Special Dispatch to The Bee.

ST. LOUIS, September 8-1 a. m.—About 6 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in the foundry of Huse, Loomis & Co.'s ice house, which is supposed to be from sparks of a passing locomotive and in a few minutes had communicated with the foundry. At that time the engines were six different storage houses, all adjoining each other, and three of them belonging to Huse, Loomis & Co. The fire started at the north end of these buildings, and spread rapidly. Nearly the whole fire department was soon on the ground. The regular water supply in the vicinity is at present, comparatively limited but several engines were placed upon the scene, and the fire was kept under control, while the engines were at the wharf increased the water supply. The location of the buildings was unfavorable for fighting the flames and the consequences were, notwithstanding the facilities of the fire department, one of the largest in the country and situated upon a narrow street took fire at the southern end. At this time the flames covered the larger portion of two squares. The stove foundry was a large brick story building, and was partly used as a storehouse for stoves. A party of five men got upon the roof of the small building adjoining the stove foundry to better play on the building, when the stone wall came in, carrying with it the roof, and the entire party fell. One man was taken out dead, being terribly mangled; Sanders died after he had been removed to his home; Collins was hurt about the head and spine; Tilton was seriously injured and is suffering comparatively slight injuries.

It required about an hour and a half to get the fire under control. The six engines which were well checked, were completely destroyed. The loss to Huse, Loomis & Co. will be about $200,000, insurance $18,000. The Mississippi ice company loss $10,000, and the loss to the city of St. Louis, including the damage to the building and stock is $150,000, which is covered by $169,000 insurance.
