DANCING—Lemley's popular social evening, Brady's hall, 12th and Farnham, every Saturday evening. Dancing from 8 to 12 o'clock. Good music provided by Prof. Mathews. Hall provided with the best dancing. New programs with most plain quilts for those wishing to learn. A prominent musician from Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany, is expected in the city in a few days, where it is expected he will locate. The gentleman, who is Prof. August Waldner, is a very fine pianist and teacher and will be giving an acquisition to the musical district of the city. He is expected to-day or Sunday.

The next meeting of the Saratoga Literary Society will be held Wednesday evening Oct. 27th and will discuss the question "Resolved, That water is more destructive than fire." The officers of this society are: President, Jacob Olsen, vice-president, C. W. Towles, secretary, Wm. Towles.

Governor Nance has commissioned L. P. Derby as captain. Allan P. Varney as first lieutenant, and Edgar N. Cobb as second lieutenant of the Bennett Rifles, of Bennett, Neb. This company numbers 75 men, and the men are all provided with the regulation uniform of blue coat and pants. Adjutant Alexander has shipped forty sets of Springfield muskets and forty sets of accoutrements to them for use.

Judging from the reports of street-car drivers along the green line the locality on F. 13th and street, north of the creek, is an absolute state of terrorism. We understand that a policeman has been ordered to accompany each of the last two runs over this line and that the drivers sit with revolver in hand, cocked and ready for business. A driver Thursday told us of a party of three men who had been lying in wait for him and which were probably the "loafs" alluded to above. It seems as if something ought to be done to check so glaring a state of brigandage in the center of the city.

A well-known young Farnham street druggist had an adventure in North Omaha Thursday, at an early hour, being at that time returning from a call upon a lady friend. He was just approaching the bridge on 18th and Farnham streets, when four men sprang out in a menacing and threatening manner in his pathway. He had the nerve to draw his revolver, and thus aroused the villains under his escape. It is possible that the gang was there awaiting the chance to fire the Oil Mill, and they did not lose the opportunity.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

The Omaha Oil Works Take Fire at Midnight and are Partially Destroyed.

Heroic and Successful Efforts of "The Department."

Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday the slumbering whistles were awakened by the shrill whirling of a locomotive near the Northwestern depot. Those who were awake at that early hour recognized the warning from the experience of the past few months, and a man who happened to be coming down the Farnham street hill, looking in the direction of North Omaha, saw the lurid glare of fire and ran at once to No. 3's engine house, where an alarm was rung by hand and the whole department promptly on the way to the scene of destruction. On the run up Sixteenth street the flames could be seen pouring, as it were, from a funnel of smoke and ascending straight towards the sky. Not a breath of wind was stirring, yet the smell of oil could be distinctly recognized for blocks in either direction of the fire, which was finally reached and found to be raging in the storage department of the Omaha Lined Oil Works, on the bank of North Omaha street, near 12th and Seventeenth streets, and owned by Taft & Woodman.

THE OIL WORKS were among the most important of Omaha institutions, and gave employment to about thirty men, running a day and night force steadily. Their capacity was recently increased by the addition of new machinery costing about $12,000 and four hydraulic presses, each having a power of 400 tons were in use. Last spring the firm loaned about 10,000 bushels of flax seed to the farmers and the fall crop, raised on this seed was just beginning to come in rapidly, about 30,000 bushels being in store in the portion of the works attacked by fire.

The works comprise several buildings, that occupied by the machinery on the north, and the warehouse on the south being the largest, and both of considerable size and of frame. The office adjoins the warehouse to the west, and near it are the tanks and oil house. The flames were first discovered at the southwest corner of the warehouse, and when seen by Prof. Tozer, who was one of the first on the ground, were raging fiercely in the interior and just bursting through the roof. Up to this time the night force, which was engaged in the building occupied by the machinery, knew nothing of the catastrophe and Mr. Tozer, procuring an ax, with their assistance broke the lock of the door and gained an entrance to the burning pile. There had been no injury to this portion of the works during the day or night, and there was no stove or fire there, so that the cause of the conflagration is unknown. The department soon got to work and threw two steady streams on the fire, one of the engines being stationed near the two main buildings and the other subject to fearful loss. At this time the sight was as grand as it was fearful. Dense clouds of smoke and volumes of bright flame rolled heavenward, while overhead,

A DOME OF FIERY SPARKS, hundreds of feet in height hung, in its centre the moon appearing like some great lamp, suspended, and beyond, the blue vault of heaven with its myriads of glittering stars forming a background for a picture more sublime than was ever conceived by an artist's dreams. A shower of fire fell continually from the fierce fountain in the centre, the charred shingles and boards being often as large as a man's two palms, but burned to the crispness of sun-dried autumn leaves. Of the many gorgeous pictures drawn by the fire demon in Omaha, none was ever so beautiful as this. The flames flashed like lightning on the crevices in the building and swept up the sides of the tall tower containing the elevator, fed by the oil from the rich store of flax within, and

THE EFFORTS OF THE FIREMEN were confined entirely to saving the adjoining buildings. They were so successful that not even the office which directly adjoined the warehouse was burned, it was scarcely scorched. An hour after the alarm the side of the elevator fell in and from this time on the fire waned gradually as the material which fed it was exhausted, until it was finally subdued.

The loss is quite severe, aggregating perhaps $30,000 on the seed and $9000 on the building, on which there is full insurance. The greatest loss to the firm, however, is the occurrence of the calamity at a time when their milling operations for the winter, for which large preparations were made, had just fairly begun. They will begin at once the erection of a building to replace the one lost. It is due to say that but for the heroic exertions of the department the whole establishment must have been destroyed, with perhaps many of the adjoining buildings. Had there been a brick wind the damage must have necessarily been much greater despite all efforts.

REVENUE MATTERS.

A Prisoner Brought to Omaha to Answer to Serious Charges.

Reopening of the Nebraska City Distillery.

The deputy sheriff from Dakota county arrived in this city Thursday with a United States prisoner in charge. The prisoner is a man named Emil Hoy, an ex-amateur detective, brought to Omaha to answer in the United States courts to the charge of falsely personating a government revenue officer and of obtaining money of a Jackson saloonkeeper, in a manner stronglyavoring of blackmail. We understand that Hoy went to a saloon in Jackson next by a woman and finding one or two cigar boxes which had been emptied of their contents and on which the stamps had been cancelled according to law, he represented that he was an officer and accepted $50 as a bonus for overlooking the swindle of Uncle Sam. He claims on this point that the man, whose name was Riley, offered him the $50 hush money without solicitation, and he is a like manner had taken it. As the punishment for such an offense is a fine not exceeding $50 and imprisonment not exceeding six months, it will be seen that Hoy drove a pretty good bargain. He also claims that he did not personate a revenue officer, but was acting in the role of his profession, a detective, which was his own affair. The latter offense charged is a felony of a pretty grave character, and is punishable by a fine of $500 and imprisonment not less than six months, nor exceeding two years. The prisoner is also said to have been involved in other trouble of a somewhat similar kind, and it looks as if he had got himself into a box. He seems to have been at no very distant date a man of affluence and respectability, still possessing a gold chain and some other jewelry, which he carries concealed under his shirt. He is also a member of several of the leading secret societies in the city. He will have his preliminary examination before U. S. Commissioner Watson B. Smith on Tuesday next.

PREPARING FOR WORK. Mr. A. D. Morris, assistant surveyor of distilleries for the district of Nebraska, was in Nebraska City last week to make a survey of the distillery at that point, preparatory to its contemplated reopening on or about November 1st. It will have a capacity of about 1200 bushels of grain per day. Mr. Ira Hixby will be assigned as ganger to do duty at that point.
