DANCING—Lemieux's dancing school social at Standard Hall, Fifteenth and Franklin, every Saturday evening. None but the well behaved and respectable are admitted. Ladies are respectfully invited. The statement of The Herald which the building occupied by Charles Higgins' fur bank stands is utterly false. The Y. M. C. A. used to own a lot on 13th street but never owned anything on Douglas street. Snow is reported on the S. C. & P. road, and we will probably get a little here in time for Christmas sleighing. The rain and sleet which began falling Thursday about 10 o'clock has covered the ground with a fresh white substance and made walking extremely dangerous. Owing to the continued storm of rain and sleet in Iowa, and to other causes, trains were all late Friday. The "N" was an hour and a half late, the Rock Island four hours and the overland train delayed by them, two hours and a half behind time leaving this city. The overland train from the west was reported on time, however. From our Lincoln exchanges we learn that Mr. K. O. L. Edholm, of this city, who for two years past has been busily engaged in writing up the western country, especially Nebraska, has purchased a half interest in The Nebraska States-Anzinger, a thriving German weekly published at the capital. Mr. Edholm has had considerable journalistic experience, and with his acknowledged ability will make a valuable acquisition to the paper. In the United States court Thursday Emil Hoya was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of one hundred dollars. W. H. Reed, convicted of making counterfeit money, was sentenced to imprisonment until February 1, 1881. Julius A. Bronson, of Fort Snibara, pleaded guilty to selling liquor without paying the stamp, and was fined $52. Bedford Kuchner, of North Loup, pleaded guilty to selling liquor without paying the stamp, and was fined $10. Of the actor who appears at the Academy to-night, The Boston Daily Advertiser says: "Mr. May's Davy Crockett really deserves both study and admiration. In it there is something of the highest artistic feeling—perhaps of the highest artistic power. It is a good piece of acting in a hundred ways. It constantly reaches that all-golden quality which no single word describes, but which comes from the actor's seeming loss of self-consciousness. One could reasonably believe that the actor was Davy Crockett and not that he was playing the part of Davy Crockett."

An incendiary's Work. The grocery, saloon and residence of Philip Koch, at the southwest corner 13th and Cass streets, Bowers Hill, was last night burned to the ground. The fire was well advanced when the engineers of the Union Pacific switch engines in the Tenth street yards saw the glare, and gave the alarm by sounding their whistles and ringing their bells. Fire engines No. 2 and 3 and the hooks responded, going down as far as the depot, but owing to the distance, and the steep and slippery roads, not any further. This is the third time within a few years that Mr. Koch has been burned out, and indications all point to the hand of an incendiary. The house was in the form of a T, the top of which, the saloon and grocery, faced the road, and was 30 by 45 feet in size, while the wing was 18 by 24, and still to the rear of this stood the summer kitchen, attached to the house, but not in use at this season. The family had retired, and were all asleep when Mr. Koch was awakened by the barking of a little dog. He went out, but saw nothing. A second time the fire engine called him out, and this time he saw a small flame in the summer kitchen, which a moment later burst forth and spread with wonderful rapidity to all portions of the building. The family, who occupied the wing, were awakened and escaped by an east side door. Neighbors came to their assistance and a small portion of the contents of the house were saved. The flames, fanned by a strong wind soon leveled the entire structure to the ground, no resistance being possible. The family found refuge in a small building adjoining the house, which escaped destruction, where they are domiciled to-day. In addition to the house, saloon fixtures and furniture a large amount of meats and groceries, including seventy bushels of potatoes, all stored in the cellar, was a total loss, the estimated amount of which is $1,800. Fortunately there was no house within fifty yards of Mr. Koch's, and the fire was confined to the one piece of property. All the facts in the case indicate that an incendiary fired the building. Choice fresh Oysters direct from Baltimore at Wm. Gentleman's. Five dollars reward will be paid for the return to the Bee office of a yellow tapeworm guard worm; or 25 cent reward, between corner of 21st and California and U. P. headquarters. O. K. The contested election case which was held at 9 a. m. yesterday, closed at 1 o'clock this afternoon, with the testimony of County Clerk Manchester. By agreement of counsel two certified copies of the stenographic report of the testimony and proceedings, will be prepared and forwarded to the secretary for use, one in the House, the other in the Senate, the same testimony to be presented in each case. The ballot boxes and papers were sealed up and deposited in the Omaha National bank subject to the order of the examining court. Some very interesting testimony was adduced to-day which for want of space we are unable to reproduce, but will give to our readers in another issue. She Struck It Rich. As a lady was passing the corner of 13th and Farnham street yesterday, she stopped at the drug store of D. W. Saxe & Co., and there found the finest line of holiday goods she had seen in this city. The first article which attracted her attention was a gentleman's morocco covered toilet and shaving set, rubber lined and complete in every particular, with French plate glass mirror, adjustable at any angle, "just the thing for her husband," she said, as she added the clerk to buy it aside for her. Her attention was next called to the beautiful display of toilet sets which filled the shelves of the store, and she was attracted to the elegant black walnut show cases on the west side of the store. She was at first dazzled by the sight which met her gaze, but on recovering was shown some of the handsomest and most elegantly finished sets. Satin and morocco lined with old gold, pink, blue, maroon and white silk and filled with the latest designs in celluloid and diatle brushes, mirrors and combs; spriged dressing and odor cases, covered with silk and jewel cases, covered with silk, morocco and velvet, containing cut glass bottles filled with choicest odors. Baby sets decorated and painted by hand, children diatle sets, ladies work boxes, fans, hand mirrors, card cases, etc., etc., all were shown her by the obliging clerk, who took particular pains to point out the beauty and usefulness of each article. Passing to the other side of the store she was shown the elegant assortment of cut glass bottles, just received and being unpacked at the time. She was struck with the beauty and uniqueness of the designs and at once selected a pair which were also laid aside for her. The perfume which filled a case twelve feet long, containing all the leading odors in the market, were next shown her and were, after being tested, declared the finest in the land. Next in order were the ladies' and gents leather and morocco pocket books, seal skin, alligator skin and box skin letter cases, Russia and morocco card cases, cigarette cases, photograph cases, etc., many of which were lined with satin and handsomely decorated and painted. She was "paralyzed" at the idea that any one should for a moment conceive the idea that they could do as well anywhere else in the city, and asked a Bee reporter who called in to make a note of it. CHRISTMAS SLIPPERS AT WHITNEY'S. Beautiful Celluloid sets, morocco covered and lined with richly ticked silk and satin, all shapes and sizes at C. F. A Brilliant Success. Masonic hall never looked so well nor contained a larger and happier crowd than on Thursday at the opening of the fair given by the Congregational ladies' society, of which Mrs. C. B. Rustin is the able chief executive officer. Every available portion of the large room was filled with booths constructed and decorated to the very best advantage and presided over by a very charming young lady. Brilliantly lighted, glowing with colors from the thousands of fancy articles displayed for sale, fragrant with the breath of fresh flowers and melodious with the hum of voices and the magnificent music of the Union Pacific band, the visitor could imagine himself on an enchanted ground. Especially complete and interesting was the department of useful articles, all of which were manufactured within the space of four weeks by the ladies of the committee. To encircle the room was to meet rare surprises on every hand. A gypsy fortune-teller, a market which advertised "Anglo's Food," a genuine "fairy lake," a doll department that would drive the average little maid wild with delight, a spacious and complete book department, three booths devoted to the display of fancy articles, a flower stand, coffee, cake and ice cream stand, oyster room and banquet room, all presided over by ladies and gentlemen in elaborate and significant costumes, were encountered on every hand. The most pretentious display of the evening was that of brass made by the young ladies of the church, and offered for the prize offered by the B. & M. Co. to the best brass maker. A Fatal Plunge. Yesterday a singular accident occurred on the ice, below the U. P. bridge, which resulted in the drowning of a team and the loss of the wagon to which they were attached. A number of men and teams are engaged in hauling and storing ice for that part of the Missouri, and during the forenoon as one of the teams, with an empty wagon, was crossing the ice, a wheel went into a rut or hole in the frozen surface and threw the driver off. The frightened team then ran away and directed their course down stream to the edge of the ice field, at the rate of fifteen or twenty miles an hour. Off this edge they plunged at full speed and the murky waters of the big muddy cloud over them forever. We were unable to obtain the name of the owner of the team. WHO IS PILLBURY & CO. A Fine line of samples of New Year Cards at The Bee Job Room. Call in time and leave your orders. Whipple, McMillan & Co., the jewelers, are still ahead and have just opened another choice lot of elegant presents, at Creighton block, Fifteenth street. Always fresh Oysters at Tizzard's. A Grave Joke. Let's one night last week as a police officer, who has been on the force less than a year, was wending his way homeward he overheard men talking in an alley just ahead of him. The "peeler" was on the alert in an instant, and cautiously made his way to the entrance of the alley, and as the night was dark easily crept within hearing distance. The valiant guardian of the peace soon heard enough to satisfy him that on the night following a body was to be snatched from what was supposed to be its last resting place and brought to the city, and left at a room already prepared. After hearing this the officer cautiously made his way to the street and hurried homeward. Next day he confided the secret to a brother cop, and it was arranged that the two should proceed with an expressman and go on to the city of the dead and capture the exhumers. Accordingly a team was engaged, and as the night was favorable they started about eleven o'clock. The gallant officers reached Prospect Hill cemetery, and driving to a designated spot stopped the team and alighted, ordering the driver to remain where he was until further orders. But we must now leave our friends to the tender mercies of a grave yard, and the relentless fury of a north wind for a while, and return to the city. On the day preceding the night on which the two policemen visited the cemetery, a detective had been informed that a gang of professional body snatchers were in our midst, and that that night a body would be taken from the cemetery, by the same parties who had furnished the "aid" for the Medical Institute. The detective having thus obtained a clue, prepared to follow it up at once, and before night had engaged two reliable men, with whom three hours after dark he proceeded to the burying-ground. They arrived in due time and stationed themselves in different places, all well developed and impatient when the express wagon stopped as described above. The two policemen, after reconnoitering, climbed over the fence and stopped again to take in the surroundings. They were holding a whispered consultation, when in the darkness near them, they discovered the form of a man not more than half a rod distant, slowly moving away. What to do they did not know, but it was evident that if anything was to be done it must be done quickly, or the game would vanish in the gloom and be out of their reach. At a given signal they bounded simultaneously upon their victim and pinned him to the ground. By placing the muzzle of a revolver to his temple they easily persuaded him to keep quiet and were about to manacle him when two other actors entered the scene and a general hand to hand encounter ensued. Billies, boots and fists were freely used, but things soon became so badly mixed that it was dangerous to continue the fight for every man looked the same and foe would not be distinguished from friend. Suddenly some one yelled, "Where's your lantern—why don't you get a light?" Hostilities suddenly ceased, and all at once four dark lanterns flashed upon the scene of battle and five pistols came to view, held by determined men. The detective was an expert still, followed by a season of unintermitted swearing. The two officers found that they had been pouncing each other over the heads, and the detective saw that one of his men had been kicking him in the ribs while the other had been trying to handcuff him. They stopped and hallooed for the driver, but received no answer. They tried to manacle the exhumers and looked in all directions, but to no purpose. Finally they found the tracks of the wagon and horse turned towards town and judging from the steps taken by the horse he was doing his level best. Towards daylight five men might have been seen slinking through back alleys and unfrequented streets, and ever since a strong odor of brimstone has pervaded the atmosphere along the route followed by the victimized quintette.
