legislature is actively at work, and about thirty-five bills have slready been introduced. Most of them will, of couse, be pigeon-holed. Bills to relocate the capital have been introduced in both houses. A bill to increase the number of judicial districts to eight, was introduced in the nouse. It is a shrewd move to put three district judgeships and three district attorneyships at the disposal of Nance, to barter for votes in the senatorship This scheme will fail, however. If any such bill passes it will be that the
