LOVE AND LUXURY.
"I never marry," Katie Yale used to say, half-jest, half in earnest. "I never marry," she would say, "because I am too good for any man. I shall be a person possessing these three qualities: 'Fire, a fortune, and a good look.'"
"And thirdly, common sense."
"I mention the fortune first, because I think it the most useful and desirable qualification of the three. Although I could never think of marrying a fool, or a man whose ugliness I could not stand, still I think to talk sense for the one and three for the other, with plenty of money, would be preferable to living obscurely with a handsome, intelligent man—to whom economy might be necessary.
I do not know how much of this sentiment came from Katie's heart. She undoubtedly indulged lofty ideas of herself, and she was not alone in the duties and aims of life had been deficient, or rather erroneous; but that she was capable of deeper, better feelings than she admitted, she was proved by the fact that she had been raised even a partial glimpse of her true woman's nature.
And the time arrived, at length, when Katie was to take that all important step which she had often spoken of so lightly; when she was to demonstrate to her friends how much she was worth in the words we have quoted.
At the enacting age of eighteen she had many suitors; but as she never liked any one, she was not to be married. Two, however, she favored over all except those favored ones—she had a strong preference for the one, and a strong dislike for the other.
The one was a man of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000. The other was a man of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000. The one was a man of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000. The other was a man of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000.

she had known the heavenly charm of their deep, delicious harmony; and now they were silent—motionless—muffled, so to speak, in the vastness. These chords still and soulless, her heart was dead; not the less so because it had been killed by a sudden shock. Having known and felt the life of sympathy in love, she could not but mourn for it, uncontrolled by the life of luxury. In short Katie, in time became married. Her husband was a man of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000. She was a woman of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000. She was a woman of high rank, and a fortune of $100,000.

PEPPERMINT DROPS.
The killed rum is fashionable in cold weather.
Eggs are up to 45 cents a dozen and roosters are looking at tortoise shell combs.
A game of base ball is like a buck, what takes a great deal depends on the batter.
The "Ironclad Oath" is when a fellow recites on the zenith end of a tank with his bare foot.
New Haven Register has coined a new word for telegrams. It calls them Juggledigrams.
Barker says that a good dinner under the vest is worth a million on the wall of the dining-room.
The lecturer who had an audience of three old maids and one man and his wife, and a full house of three of a kind and a pair.
Some one who knows says that a new drink has been invented and named the "Timothy Harnessed." We wonder if it's a preventive of the hay fever.
A man in a Pennsylvania town has twenty-nine children. Strangers passing the town on washing days are at a loss to determine whether it is a school or a laundry.
A profane Philadelphia newspaper suggests, that now that the army is fitted out with cork helmets, it will be necessary to have a store of cork shoes to go with them.
Notwithstanding the fact (and perhaps in consequence of it) that the clergy and justices of peace are busy all the time making two people one, the population continues to increase.
"Very well," said Katie, calmly, "I will not complain. I will not mix one bushel of beans and one of roasted peanuts with one bushel of cheap coffee. The package is then labeled, 'None but beware of imitations.'"
"Yes, I know it."
Mr. Wellington's brows gathered darkly; his eyes flashed with determination; his lips curled with scorn.
"I have made up my mind," said he, "that we should not live together any longer. I am tired of being called the husband of the splendid Mrs. Wellington. I will now, by all means, shut mine in yours. I will place no restraint on your actions, nor shall you upon mine. We will be free."
"But the world," shrieked Katie, trembling.
"The world will admire you the same—at what more do you desire?" asked Mr. Wellington.
"The marriage of hands, and not of hearts, is mockery. We have played the farce long enough. Few know the conventional meaning of the term husband and wife; but do you know what it should mean? Do you feel that the only true union is that of love and sympathy? Then, in the name of heaven, let us separate. I will give you a separation. Nay, do not tremble and cry. I am not asking for I shall be liberal to you. As much of my fortune shall be yours as you desire."
He pushed her from him. She fell upon the sofa, and with a heart torn with anguish, she shrieked aloud.
"Frank! Frank! why did I send you from me! Why did I scribble love and happiness to such a fate as this! Why was I blind until night brought me misery!"
She lay upon the sofa, sobbing and weeping passionately. Gradually her grief appeared to exhaust itself; her head fell peacefully upon her arm, and she fell into a deep slumber. She dreamed—she dreamed of a man, a man who was kind and true, a man who was kind and true, a man who was kind and true.
