A Rich Agricultural Country Surrounding.

Correspondence of THA BEE. OAEDALE Neb., Feb. 17 .- Few people have any idea how fast this country is being developed. The long stretches of unoccupied mealow lands in the upper E khorn valley, are fast It is but a few years since the coach and the occasional prairie schooner were the only visible objects passing over these beautiful hills and valleys, but now the railway passes through Oakdale and will soon be completed to Fort Niobrara, one hundred and fifty miles to the northwest. This country was given the romantic name of Antelope, because in an early day it abounded in the timid little creatures bearing that name. From ten to twenty in a drove would often scamper over the bills at day break within eight of every rude hamlet in the country, at the time of its organization. The comalssioners, in refusing reasonable repositions for compromise, certainly how themselves adverse to early setlement and development of the county. If a proper adjustment of this natter can be effected at once, so as to allow these cheap lands o be placed upen the market this spring, it will attract a respectable element of the immense mmigration that will flood in upon as, and result with material advantsge to Antelope county. Hurford is apprietor of the flouring mill, the o pularity of which is attested by the entinuous line of teams going to and from it every day. People living twenty miles distant come here to get gristing done. Hurford & Heck are proprietors of the brick yard. Japt. S S. King, one of the pioneers in the coun y, and a victim of misforune in the late war, is the county treasurer. C. E. Lovejoy, the genial proprietor of the Lovejoy House, retires from the hotel in the spring and Mr. A. R. Dunham will take charge of the place under the name City Hotel. Under the excellent management of Mr. Dunham the public are assured the house will retain its present pepularity. A two-story brick hotel 40x80 will be erected in the spring. Oakdale is very fortunately located on the gradual slope overlooking the low bottom land where Cedar Creek empties into the Ekhorn river. It is not subject to inundations or buried under snow drifts, and yet several good water powers are within gun shot of the town. It is also surrounded by a fine agricultural country of black soil with a very little sand mixed through it. To the north and west ome distance away will be found more sandy land. Small fruits have shown a happy adaptation to this soil and many purchas a of apple trees are being made this year. Several flocks of sheep have been brought in from Wisconsin and more are coming. At this portion of its course the Elkhorn has numerous tributaries whose banks are lined with elms and oaks, cedar and other timbers being found for the service they were to perform the world that will cure one-half the their sources.

> Improved Stock on the Farm. Improvement and progress is the rder of the day in every department of industry, and no less on the farm than in the factory. Our progress on the farm in improved labor saving machinery enables us to cultivate large crops, and experience proves that it is more profitable to feed these farm crops (except wheat) to good stock than to sell them off to be shipped away in bulk, because in condensing the bulk we save expense of freight. In no deparament of agriculture in the west has there been greater progress than in stock breeding. The old prejudice against improved stock, improved machinery, or any other imin the northern part but the southern ! provement has vanished; the question is: Will it pay! Stock is not expected to do well roughing it, but we provide shelter, feed and water, and we want the stock that will realize the greatest profit under our present system of farming and feeding. We can no longer afford to raise scrub stock, but the practical benefits of the improved breeds are easily attained by the farmer by grading up. Every enterprising farmer breeds only thoroughbred males; the first year hi young stock are half bloods, and he soon has by this method of grading up all high grade stock which realizes the dollars and cents benefit of improved stock on the farm.
