The republicans have again taken charge of the United States senate and the bourgeois will now take a back seat.

Abraham Lincoln is the first of an outraged and oppressed people. Resistance to tyrants cannot be bound by the laws of every day life.

The fight in the senate between the republican bell and the democratic bear continues. It looks as if the republican bell is about to go home.

Omaha will expend $100,000 in bonds to expand for seven next year, and taxpayers had better look out whom they select to handle this large sum.

Eastern journals unite in pronouncing the nomination of J. G. Gould's Cincinnati attorney the first mistake of General Garfield's administration.

Mr. James E. Boyd has declined the democratic nomination for May 2. The party will no longer be buoyed up by the hope of floating into power on Mr. Boyd's broad shoulders.

Harcall has his eye on that $100,000 sewerage fund and other little incidents at the disposal of the next city council. This is a way to be numerous in the second ward ward of late.

The republicans now assume to champion the cause of Senator Saunders because he has refused to listen to the counsel of his most trusty friends. When a man's enemies applaud his acts, especially if he is a politician, you can take it for granted that he has committed some grave blunder.

The first step toward securing an efficient system of public education in this city is to expel patriotism and to nominate six of the most intelligent and upright men in Omaha for the board of education.

The growth of the Farmer's Alliance throughout the state and the denunciation of those members of the late legislature who betrayed their trust are signs of the day which point to a curtailment of monopoly detection and plundering of the producers of Nebraska.

There isn't an enemy of Senator Saunders in Omaha who doesn't approve of the reappointment of Tom Hall, and there are not a half dozen men who would not vote for him if he were elected who are not disgusted.

What does it mean? Will the men who have always fought Saunders and who now have him as much as they ever did turn in and support him in the trying hour? Can the leopard change his spots?

The city hall with its magnificent tower and spire, and the magnificent grounds on which it stands, are the pride of the city. Can these registers set legally for haven in their right hands? Why haven't the registers taken some steps already for the spring election? It is their sworn duty to advertise the day when they will begin registration thirty days before election.

DILLON AND DILLONVILLE.

Remains founded the eternal city of Rome on the banks of the Yellow Tiber. Sidney Dillon founded the village of Dillonville on the banks of the maddly Missouri. There our comparison ends. The only design of the founder of Rome was to establish a great city on the seven hills. The design of Sidney Dillon was to tear down and cripple a city already established on the western banks of the Missouri. To this end he used his nephew, John F. Dillon, formerly president of the United States and now consulting counsel for the Union Pacific railroad in New York.

The decision of Judge Dillon against Sidney Dillon, who had invested in a large tract of worthless Missouri bottom lands, to become the founder of Dillonville. Now Sidney Dillon is not in the habit of investing his own money in the building up of railway towns, as he invested the contribution made by this city towards building the U. P. depot at Omaha in the construction of a hotel with a depot attachment at Dillonville. This was the corner stone of the paper metropolitan which Sidney Dillon founded. Up to the time that this costly structure was completed, Sidney Dillon had bamboozled Omaha into the belief that the decision of his nephew on the terminus question would not cancel the obligations entered into by the Union Pacific with this city and county.

The transfer of the depot from Dillonville to Omaha, was to be at Dillonville, but passenger trains were to be made up and started according to the contract at Omaha. The great cowshed which Sidney Dillon had caused to be erected on the grounds donated by Omaha, as a hundred thousand dollar depot, which was pronounced an abortion by his own superintendent, was to be promptly reconstructed, and the magnificent donations of Omaha in bonds, lands and the redemption of taxes were to be expended in great improvements within the city.

No sooner had the grand eating house, established by Sidney Dillon at Dillonville, been completed than the whole transfer business was quietly moved over to the depot on the east bank of the Missouri. There was a lead mine over this branch of faith towards Omaha, but Sidney Dillon's mouthpieces, who edit the subsidized papers in Omaha, denounced our merchants and taxpayers as grumblers and malcontents, who couldn't understand that their great benefactor, Sidney Dillon, was only maturing schemes in their best interests. Every few months, when Omaha exhibited signs of impatience and distrust, the founder of Dillonville would rally to them by promising to rebuild that mammoth cow shed, and by bogus schemes for locating a new depot, that should fill all the great roads that have their terminus at Omaha. In due time the stock yards, established at a great expense, and which our people had believed they were sold for, was no secret in the city.

More recently the establishment of a mammoth electric car line, created quite a stir in the community, especially when it was handled by the man who had been in Omaha by becoming partner in a local elevator firm, which will be allowed to handle a small fraction of the grain that passes through this gateway from Nebraska farms.

Meantime the elephant owned still adorns the Omaha depot grounds, and the wind and the rain and the snow make it as comfortable as a dog kennel to the traveling public and Omaha who are waiting for the head of Sidney Dillon.
