An Unfortunate Girl Attacked by a Newspaper Returns to Jail.

The heroine of a famous Chicago sensation, picked up in the streets of Omaha.

A brutal instance of indiscreet newspaper enterprise came to light in the arrest of a young woman Thursday evening by Officer McClure, on a charge of robbery. Last Sunday morning The Herald printed the story of this young woman, who has been quietly at work in this city earning her living as well as making a most commendable effort to bury a record of frailty and misfortune, and as the story itself shows, not of crime.

In conversation with a Bee reporter this morning, this young person told her story in the following heart-rending terms:

"The story printed in last Sunday's Herald in respect to myself is substantially correct, but so long as I live I shall not cease to pray for the curse of God upon the head of the villain who wrote it. I left Chicago about four weeks ago, and with the full determination that came what might I lead a struggle against all temptation to lead an evil life. I have been diligent and not criminal. I married young, and to an Englishman who was no protection to a young wife. After my trial in Chicago I was befriended by many, among them Mr. and Mrs. Leonard. On leaving I was presented by Mrs. Leonard with a purse containing twenty-five dollars. I was furnished with other funds besides. On my way to Omaha I met a man on the train who knew me, and though I feared greatly that I had failed from the very start, I am glad to say that this man, who remained some little time in Omaha, did not betray me. I told him my condition, and it was from him I obtained the twenty dollar bills, which were in the purse Mrs. Leonard gave me. I determined to hold on to this gold piece, depending upon it to rescue me when all other efforts failed."

"How did you get on when you arrived here?" asked the reporter.

"Most encouragingly. I obtained a situation in the St. Charles hotel, and a few days before the publication in The Herald I had obtained a position as dining-room girl at the Canfield house. I was living under the assumed name of Jennie Warner, and though some few knew my history I was treated on all sides with the greatest consideration and encouragement."

When, however, that villainous story appeared in Sunday's Herald, I was completely prostrated. All my courage, all my fortitude took flight, and I resolved to make no further effort to save myself. Mr. and Mrs. Canfield begged me to let the matter pass, but I knew I should be pointed at by everybody, and to tell the truth, the thing struck me as so fearfully heartless I was stunned beyond recovery by the blow. I saw there was no use of my trying to bear up when the very agencies that should be first to sustain my effort were the first to strike me down."

And here the unfortunate girl sobbed and looked the picture of despair. Being urged to continue her narrative, she said:

"I immediately left the Canfield house and took to drinking as a means to drown my misery, but, as usual, more misery came upon me. I had some money left besides the twenty dollar gold piece, and at my room at the City hotel I was furnished all I wanted to drink, which I did for as long as I could."

As stated, the girl was arrested by Officer McClure for robbery. It appears she got quite drunk, and wandering into the street fell near the corner of Twelfth and Farnham streets. She was taken to Dick Welch's liquor store, where, it being supposed she was in a fainting fit, restoratives were applied. Presently the officer came along, and she was placed under arrest on the charge of robbing the trunk of Mrs. Wirth, the wife of the proprietor of the City Hotel, of the sum of $65. A twenty dollar gold piece was found in her possession. The next day, Mrs. Wirth was informed by a portion of the money taken from the trunk.

This morning the prisoner was arraigned before the District Attorney. She was entirely nonplussed, but she was marked by the District Attorney's office for a similar case of 1878, and marking it precisely as did Mr. Burnham, who awaited his turn to cross-examine.

Mrs. Wirth positively identified the coin shown her by Mr. Burnham as the one stolen from her.

"Now," said the prisoner's defender, "you are sure you can safely swear to the coin shown you by Mr. Burnham?"

"I can," said the witness.

"Well," said Col. Synthe, "advisedly substituting his coin for the one in question, I suppose you examine it carefully, and make sure."

The witness took the coin, and again positively swore to it. Col. Synthe then pulling the original coin from his pocket, said:

"Just look at this one, Mrs. Wirth, and say if you can see any difference." The witness examined them, but being the same date and similarly marked she was entirely nonplussed. It was indeed amusing to watch the vain efforts of the witness to say which was which.

The extra being returned to Col. Synthe, it is now in order to ask which one did he return to the court?

It was ascertained in the course of examination that two soldiers, one discharged man, had roomed adjacent to the prisoner, and that one of them left by yesterday afternoon's train.

The next witness was a maid in the employ of Mrs. Wirth. A Miss Norton, who deposed she had taken the tray, with the knife produced in court upon it, from the room of Miss Mackey in the morning, whereas the examination that two soldiers, one discharged man, had roomed adjacent to the prisoner, and that one of them left by yesterday afternoon's train.

RUN OVER AND KILLED.

Instantly Fatal Accident at Council Bluffs.

An old man named Leary, working in the section track gang, of which Thomas Carey is foreman, on the Union Pacific tracks across the river, was instantly killed yesterday forenoon. He attempted to get on the tender of a switched engine which was backing toward him, and fell. The tail board of the tender rolled over and crushed him to death. The unfortunate man rolled out from under the tender, only gasping once or twice. He was not cut by the engine wheels. The remains were taken to his home in Council Bluffs, where an inquest will be held to-day. He leaves a family.

SIMILAR INVENTIONS.

Pierce's Air Ship Idea Already Patented--Some Interesting Experiments.

Mr. J. H. Pierce, of this city, who has been laboring for some time to perfect an aerial ship, born in his brain years ago, applied for a patent on a certain invention connected therewith, whereby he proposed to direct and confine the course of the balloon. This was a block attachment to the single rail, slightly raised from the ground, along which it was to run, connecting the balloon with this block by a rope. Yesterday he received a reply from the patent office, enclosing a circular which contained a cut of a similar invention, patented by one McGlashan, of Truckee, California, in 1874. As this idea was an original with Mr. Pierce, as with McGlashan, the likeness of the two inventions is truly remarkable. The latter's inventive power, however, seemed to have stopped with the terrestrial attachment and rail, for he has never developed it into what Mr. Pierce claims is possible. If such an arrangement can be made, Mr. Pierce intends purchasing McGlashan's patent, and combining it with his new ideas in regard to an aeroplane, it is confident of making a success of the scheme for aerial navigation.

THE IMPORTANT MCCANN SUIT ON TRIAL.

The famous case of the government against Dwight J. McCann, for alleged forfeiture of bonds to faithfully perform his duty as freight agent, came up Friday in the United States Court. The suit, as will be remembered, is based upon the alleged sale of government supplies, which McCann was shipping to the Indians. These supplies consisted of 239,000 pounds of corn, fifty pounds of sugar, thirteen bags of coffee and a quantity of bacon. It was claimed that the supply train was stolen bodily by the Indians.

The suit was begun in 1873 as McCann has been dragging in the courts. United States District Attorney Lamberton opened the case for the first time this morning, just before the noon adjournment. Judge Wakeley appears for the defendant. The trial will probably occupy several days.

MAYOR'S OFFICE,

OMAHA, NEB., May 13, 1881.

Dr. P. S. Leisinger, City Physician:

DEAR SIR: It has come to my knowledge that the butchers of your city are purchasing cattle in Iowa. Would it not be advisable for you to investigate the matter and caution cattle dealers and others to use the greatest care, so as to guard against the introduction of disease, and, as you are particularly aware of the cattle on the bottom east of us in Iowa are dying rapidly with some kind of a disease contagious and fatal, and best?

Very respectfully,
J. E. Boyd, Mayor.

AN IMPROMPTU FLOOD.

Streets Washed Out and Buildings Flooded by the Storm.

Considerable Damage to Cellars of Business Blocks.

The storm yesterday was the most severe, as far as the amount of concern, which has happened during the same length of time in many years. The water seemed to come down in solid sheets, and much damage was caused by it in various parts of the city.

The most severe damage was done along the line of the water pipes, both where the ditches were open and where they had but recently been closed up. On several streets leading to Capitol Hill, where the dirt had but recently been filled in, it was washed out nearly or quite to the water pipe.

In front of the postoffice the water works gang had the ditch excavated and the pipes partially laid.

At one point the ditch has crossed the brick-vaulted cesspool connected with the postoffice vaults, and the laborers had carelessly made an opening through the arch before they discovered what it was. The water this morning flooded not only the ditch, but the cess pool, which in turn poured into the cellar of the postoffice building to a depth of some inches, wetting a few canvas bags of supplies, but doing no serious damage beyond the disgusting odor which for the time filled the building. A gang of workmen were set at work emptying the ditch of its accumulation of water, and in a short time the odorous liquid was out of the cellar. On several other streets where the ditches were open they were filled with water or washed in.

The water poured through the creek on upper Farnham street, near Twenty-first in a perfect flood, filling the Farnham street culvert at that point and damaging the street by the water to an extent of many dollars.

The water flooded Murraytown just below which is principally occupied by colored people, and in many instances the people were barely able to get out before the cottages were flooded. The storm, however, was of short duration and on its cessation the water left the buildings at once.

BUSINESS BLOCKS FLOODED.

Cellars on Farnham street were flooded at many points. The most serious damage learned was at Dewey & Stone's, where the cellar was flooded and the sidewalk undermined and thrown out of shape. Considerable damage was caused.

On Dodge street the cellars at Hope's music store and Willis Yates' grocery were flooded, with more or less serious damage.

Death of Mrs. S. D. Street.

We are pained to announce the death of Mrs. S. D. Street, of this city, wife of the present clerk of the courts of this county, which sad event occurred at Oakland, California, on Tuesday morning last. Mrs. Street was a victim of that dread destroyer, consumption, and several months since left for California in the hope of recovery or for a time staying the ravages of the fatal disease, which she succeeded in improving, but a few days since began to sink rapidly. Her husband was notified of her condition and left at once for Oakland, but on account of a telegram received here yesterday, his wife was called to her final home before he reached her bedside. In this severe affliction he will have the heart-breaking sympathy of all who know him. The remains of Mrs. Street will be brought here for interment.
