Reporter's Strange Experience With the Law

Now that the anti-what'lly ehave lav s in force, or trying to be, the cold water reporter of THE BEE made a tour among the saloons this morning man, in this issue. to see how the new thing works. The first place he visited is on the corner of Twelfth and Farnham streets. He found the superintendent of the establishment to be a man with the look of a banker, and the mind of a philosopher, which latter stamp of intellectuality the reporter has found to characterize most men in the retail liquor traffic. Stroking his long, white side-whiskers, the superintendentbanker-philosopher said he guessed it didn't work.

"The fact is," he continued, "you can't introduce a legislature into a man's stomach without first obtaining his full consent. Neither can you regulate hospitality by act of parliament. on Twelfth and Eleventh streets princi- as they say on the Derby. Treating is simply an act of hospitality, and while it is no doubt an evil in many senses, so is music, and singing, and indeed, praying, for lots of people have gone crazy praying too much.
