The Stalwarts Develop the Boss Liar in the Person of Bradley. The Clumsy Tool of the Twins Flatly Contradicted on Every Point.

Session Refused the Privilege of Cross-Examining His Accuser. ALBANY, June 10.—The joint convention was resumed promptly at 12 o'clock noon.

The first joint ballot for a successor to Conkling resulted: Conkling, 33; Wheeler, 20; Rogers, 18; Bradley, 1; Tappan, 7; Folger, 2; Cornell, 15; Freeman, 3; Harrison Jacobs, 47. Total, 149.

On the second total ballot for successor to Platt, Depew gained one vote, Lewis Beach changing to him. Depew's vote appears 54 on the official record of his vote before it began.

The second senate ballot for a successor to Platt resulted: Depew, 49; Kernan, 39; Platt, 29; Cornell, 4; Crawley, 4; Lapham, 2; Folger, 2; total, 112.

The official total joint ballot for successor to Platt differs from the actual balloting, because after the voting had ceased adjutant Kernan and his chamber to catch a train. The official vote was Depew 54, Kernan 48, Platt 28, Cornell 9, Folger 3, Crawley 4, Lapham 2, total 148.

The Bribery Investigation. ALBANY, N. Y., June, 10 4 p. m.—The special investigating committee yesterday in the bribery charges made, held a meeting of one and one-half hours, during this morning.

Speaker Sharpe was cross-examined by Rufus W. Peckham, Mr. Session's lawyer, but no material facts were elicited except that Gen. Arthur was subsequently informed by Sharpe of the revelations made by Bradley.

Sessions to be present, as Sessions had heard that Bradley meant to make some charge against him in connection with the alleged bribery.

Carpenier opposed the request as extraordinary and unparalleled. He said Sessions would have ample time to get his defense before the world when the proper time came.

His request was finally granted. He was sworn and said: He had a conversation with Bradley yesterday afternoon in the Delavan House.

Bradley then urged Bradley to vote for Depew as the best solution of the senatorial question and the best way of letting the assembly go home.

There was not a word said about money during that conversation. On witness going to Kinnore House he found Mr. Hudson of the Brooklyn Eagle, and Chas. P. Ingersoll, there.

Ingersoll went on to recite that he recently had met the deputy collector of internal revenue, Chas. Terry, of Cattaraugus county, was on the train and had a long conversation with him.

Bradley was vying against the wishes of nine out of every ten of his constituents in supporting Conkling and Platt; that he was working his own political death in doing so, as his constituents were up in arms against him.

After the witness had heard this he went down stairs to supper, and after supper he told Bradley he would like to see him. Bradley told him to come to his room.

When they left the dining room, Bradley invited witness to his room, saying he wanted to see his witness. Witness went to Bradley's room, and said to Bradley: "Bradley, I have been talking to you."

Witness then told Bradley what Ingersoll had said. Bradley said Ingersoll had already talked to him, and he was perfectly satisfied that his district was against Conkling and Platt.

Bradley then said he had a letter from Platt the last time, and to-morrow I will vote for others.

IRELAND'S IRE.

Daring Attempt to Blow up the Liverpool Town Hall.

Arrest of Two Irishmen—Bloody Quelling of the Cork Riot.

Another Guy Fawkes. LONDON, June 10, 4 p. m.—A daring attempt was made last night to blow up the Liverpool town hall, by means of dynamite.

No lives were lost and the building was but little damaged. The windows were, however, completely wrecked and some of the surrounding houses, and people living in the vicinity were badly scared.

The police rushed over and hurriedly threw the pipe and fuse into the middle of the street and then started in pursuit of the fugitives.

While the explosion was going on an explosion took place in the middle of the road, which accounts for the slight damage. The men were caught after an exciting chase and taken to the nearest police station.

There is little doubt here and in Liverpool that the attempt to blow up the town hall originated with Fenians. The names of the arrested men are McKeogh and Boston Roberts.

BUDGE AND BLOOD.

A Fatal Shooting Affray in the Streets of Fremont.

Death of the Victim—Arrest of the Murderer.

Special Dispatch to The Bee. FREMONT, June 10.—About nine o'clock last night a fatal shooting affray took place in the street in front of the Fremont House, between J. M. Bradley and Pat Hanlon.

Bradley and Pat Hanlon, in which the latter was fatally wounded. It seems that Hanlon and J. M. Bradley (who did the shooting) were having some trouble through the day.

At about 9 p. m. both men met near the Fremont house, and after some hot words, there were heard two shots fired in pretty close succession.

Bradley immediately made his escape. Pursuers were on his track in a short time, Sheriff Gregg sending out horsemen and men on foot in every direction.

Bradley was finally captured between four and five this morning. He claimed he had done the shooting in self-defense, and that Hanlon had shot first, and injured how badly he was hurt.

Pat Hanlon, the deceased, has resided in Fremont about a dozen years. He leaves a wife and eight children.

Barren Bench Lands Utahlized—A Blaze at Ogden.

Correspondence of The Bee. OGDEN, Utah, June 6, 1881.

The present year promises to be one of the most prosperous that Utah has ever had in the way of business and agricultural and other productions.

Fruits of all kinds promise to be abundant and crops never looked better than now. Utah fruits have such a popular reputation as to make the demand from the outside large enough to more than command all the surplus crop.

The three crop years named in the wheat taken west to San Francisco, thence by vessels to England, where it commanded good prices because of the fine quality of the crop.

The rapid development of the country in Idaho and Montana, lying north of us, the demand for flour, and all classes of goods has become large, and Utah is supplying a large percentage of the bread stuffs used there.

A striking example of this is shown in the large tract of bench lands lying west of Ogden, and running north and south. A sandy plain of about twenty thousand acres had been the home of sage brush and scanty bunch grass—a fitting abode for lizards and goats.
