

A FEARFUL HALFOUR.

Lives of Cincinnati Millionaires in Imminent Peril.

In the early days of the Cincinnati Southern, before it had attained its present system, and immediately after the road had been opened for traffic to Somerset, occurred an event the recollection of which even to this day serves to bring out goose flesh on those who at that time were cognizant of the impending disaster.

Within a few days after passenger travel began, the officers of the Southern sent invitations for a trip over the road to all of Cincinnati's wealthiest men and heaviest taxpayers, and on the morning of the excursion, dozens of carriages left the Burnett house, the place of meeting, and conveyed them across the river to Ludlow, where the "special," headed by No. 1, the crack engine, with Mat Coombs at the lever, was in waiting.

When the colored chambermaid at Waco came with towels she had a stick in her mouth, and I thought I would ask her why she used it. "Wall, it 'pears like dey all use it," she said, "an' I uses it, too."

"What is that, a nasty habit," I said. "Why, you'll never get married with your mouth full of nasty stuff."

"Most all de girls get married some way, an' dey all chew; an' de white ladies dey chews too."

"What! not the white ladies in this hotel?" "Sartinly, sah. Dey's five ladies—white ladies—in dis hotel dat chews. Dey do it in dere rooms, dough, 'pears as if what de white ladies do we colored girls oughter do too."

I will say here that the refined young ladies in Texas do not use snuff. The snuff-chewers are usually the "poor white trash," who originally came from Arkansas or Tennessee. You will see many beautiful and accomplished young ladies in Waco who would not associate with the snuff-chewing crowd.

A MOTHER FINDS HER BOY.

The Wife of a St. Louis Orphan Asylum Furnishes Material for a Romance.

Troy (Mo.) Free Press. One year ago last January Mrs. David Allen, (Aunt Vine), requested one of her lady friends, Miss Mary Howland, a resident of St. Louis, to obtain for her, if possible, a boy from one of the many orphan asylums of the city.

Miss Howland performed her mission, and in a few days a boy put in an appearance at Foley, seemingly about 5 years of age; a little budget of clothing was all that accompanied the little stranger. His name, neatly written upon a card, was "Roy Davis." No other information was received in connection with the child; an effort was made by Mrs. Allen—she says she has an inquiring mind—to obtain some knowledge of his antecedents, age, etc., and a letter was addressed to Mrs. Tucker, matron of the institution from whence the child had come, but nothing came of it except hints that the child was illegitimate; that his mother was dead, and his kindred wished to lose sight of him. Further efforts were made, but the mystery surrounding the child's antecedents was only increased thereby, until a few days ago, when all was revealed in a way and manner as startling as it was unexplained.

The following letter was received by Mrs. Allen in the regular course of the mail: QUEEN'S LAKE, Ills., May 17, 1881. Mr. David Allen, I wrote to M. E. Tucker, of St. Louis, last week, asking for information of Roy Davis, and she sent me your address, and I send you these few lines asking the privilege to come and see Roy. I don't want to take him away, but want to see him, and will you please write and inform me what you shall take when I get to St. Louis, and hope that you will not have any objection to my coming, and awaiting your answer, I respectfully close. Address Mrs. ALLE BARBER, Queen's Lake Clinton county, Ill.

Of course, the next mail carried a letter to the address given, giving the requested privilege and desired information; and on last Monday a week a lady stepped from the cars at Foley and inquired for Mrs. Allen; she was met at that point by Dr. T. M. Allen, and they started for the "equine's." Before arriving there, however, she told the doctor that her name was not Barber, but Davis, and that she was Roy's mother. Arriving at the house, the child was brought before her, but failed for a time to recognize her, but after removing her hat the little fellow said: "I believe it is my ma!" and then such a scene as there was! The mother's heart asserted itself and vented its emotions in tears and sobs. After she had become quiet she, of course, had to tell her story, and a strange one it was. But I must cut it down and make it as brief as possible.

She said: "I was raised in Rock Island, Ill.; was educated there, and when I was about 17 years of age my stepfather removed to a farm short distance from Evansville, Ill.; remaining on the farm about two years, another move was made, this time to the town of Evansville, and at this place I was married on the 25th of January, 1872, to Mr. Charles Davis. My married life for a short time was happy, but after a time I found that he whom I called husband was a tyrant and hard to please. We kept a boarding house in Evansville, and on the 24 day of November, 1873, Roy, our first boy was born, and from this time I was unable to perform any arduous labor, being quite an invalid. In the spring of 1878 another child was born and from this time my health was very poor, indeed, being confined to my room and bed all the time. My half sister, Allie Barber, came to live with us and assist in keeping house, and my husband's sister and brother from Ohio came upon a visit. My physicians recommended extreme quiet, and in order to obtain this, I was removed to my mother's, who was then living upon a farm a short distance from there. I was there but a short time when my husband and half-sister eloped, taking with them my boy Roy. I was almost heartbroken at the loss of my child. This was in September, 1878. He was a delicate child, and I was not surprised when I shortly received word that he was dead, and for two years I have looked upon my child as dead. But last March I received a letter from my sister Allie, asking me to come and see her. She was in Colorado at some of the springs there.

I wrote her that she had caused me trouble enough and I would have nothing more to do with her. She wrote me again, telling me that if I would come she would give me information in regard to Roy—that he was not dead but living. Of course I went, and she told me that she had left him at an orphan asylum in St. Louis—giving me the address—and then had told that he was dead; that she had told the matron that he was illegitimate, and his ma was dead and his kindred were anxious to lose sight of him. I, of course, lost no time in writing to Mrs. M. E. Tucker, and in signing my sister's name to the letter to insure an answer, and I soon received an answer telling me that my boy was alive and well, and had been furnished a home at Mrs. David Allen's, Burr Oak Valley, Lincoln county, Missouri; and then I sent my letter to you and received your answer, and you don't know how I felt when I learned that my boy was well, and that I might have the privilege of seeing him once more.

Jim Keene's Washerwoman. San Francisco Post. "The fact is," said Jim Keene, the great New York rival to Jay Gould, as he relaxed his usual taciturnity under the genial influence of one of Sam Ward's dimmers the other day; "the fact is, that no matter how clever and thorough a man's system of stock operating may be, there is always occurring some little unforeseen and apparently insignificant circumstance that is forever knocking the best laid plans into a cocked hat."

"Well, for instance, about a year ago I was doing a good deal in Lake Shore, and counted on making a big clean up. I discovered, however, that there was some hidden influence in the market that was always against me. It didn't exactly defeat my plans, but it lessened the profits. I soon saw that there was some operator who was kept informed as to my movements in time to make me pay for his knowledge."

"Broker gave you away?" said several. "Not at all. I never gave an order in advance, and besides, I used as now half a dozen brokers, and also gave 'cross' and 'dummy' orders in plenty. One day, while I was standing at the window of my up-town place, cogitating over the state of affairs, an elegant private coupe drove past, and stopped just around the corner from my door. It contained a richly-dressed lady and a ragged-looking girl. The latter got out, rang my basement bell, and was admitted. I sent for my manservant, and inquired who the girl might be. "She comes for the wash, sir," he said. "Does she generally come in a coupe?" I inquired. "Why, no, sir," said my man, very much surprised; "her mother, the washerwoman, is very poor."

"Just then my own carriage drove around for me, and as it passed the other I could see the lady eagerly sorting the soiled clothes in the coupe on her lap. This excited my curiosity, and had my driver follow along behind. Pretty soon the coupe stopped, and the dirty little girl got out with the bundle and went into a brownstone front on Twenty-ninth street. The coupe then kept straight on down to Wall street and stopped in front of a brokers' office, where the lady alighted with my entire lot of soiled shirt cuffs in her hand. "Shirt cuffs!" cried the entire company. "Exactly, shirt cuffs. I saw through it all in a moment. You see I am—or rather was—a great hand while at dinner, or at the theatre in the evening, to think over my plans for the next day, and to make memoranda on my cuffs to consult before starting down town in the morning. My washerwoman had found this out, and had been quietly 'copping' my game by means of my cuffs for over a year."

"Well, by Jove!" said Sam Ward, pausing for a single instant in the sacred mystery of salad dressing. "It's the cold fact," continued Keene. In less than eight months she had cleaned up over $200,000 and was washing my clothes—at least the cuffs—in an $8,000 house. She had diamonds and horses until you couldn't rest. "You didn't make any more cuff memos, after that?" laughed several. "Well, not many—just a few," said the great operator, holding his Burgundy up to the light. "I believe I kept it up about a month longer, at the end of which time I had raked in the washerwoman's bank account, and even had a mortgage on the brownstone house. It was a queer coincidence, wasn't it? But perhaps the information she found on the cuffs after that wasn't as exact as it had been, somehow, nor as reliable."

And the "King of the Street" emptied his glass with an indescribable wink that made Beach, who was short on Harlem, shiver like a cat who had just swallowed a live mouse.
