

The President's Wound--Where is the Bullet?

Every day of satisfactory progress adds to the confidence with which we have regarded the hopefulness of the president's prospects...

With infinite satisfaction the people of this country have seen the president pass through three stages of danger with far less implication of the great functions of life than was apprehended by everybody...

Apparently the one fact which conclusively determined the first judgment that this ball was in the liver is that the liver is opposite that point at which the ball hit the body...

An enumeration of the obstacles to a bullet which touches the body at the point involved will indicate at least the more improbabilities of penetration...

Now, the total thickness of the abdominal wall at this point is much greater than it is at any other part of the body...

Another point of very material interest as to the resistance presented would turn upon the precise attitude in which the president was when he was hit...

that his right foot was lifted at that very instant. If it was that fact alone would immediately double the chances in favor of the safety of his liver...

Indeed, the whereabouts of a ball that has passed out of sight is to be judged with rational reference to any recognized disturbance of the beginning of which is coincident with the injury...

BEHIND THE BARS.

How the Would-be Murderer Passed His Time in Jail.

Washington Special to The Cincinnati Enquirer. Gen. J. S. Crocker, warden of the jail in which Guitau is confined, was visited by representative of The Enquirer with a view to learning additional facts relative to the prisoner's actions since his confinement...

For the first three days of his confinement he frequently inquired of the guards for news of the president's condition. They had, however, been instructed not to give any information on this subject, and Guitau was not asked any for the past four days...

The prisoner is confined in a cell eight feet long, five feet wide, and ten feet high. It looks out upon a corridor eighteen feet wide, and has one window eighteen inches wide and four feet high...

As being a certain cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, impurity of blood, torpid liver, disordered kidneys, etc., and as a medicine for eradicating every species of humor, from an ordinary pimple to the worst ulcer...

Now, the total thickness of the abdominal wall at this point is much greater than it is at any other part of the body. In an ordinary man the thickness of the wall at this point is at least four inches...

only complained of feeling unwell once since his incarceration. He was examined by Dr. Noble Young, the jail physician, who found that he was slightly constive, and gave him the proper remedy...

Caught by the Apaches.

Mr. Wm. E. Pugh, of this city, uncle of Thomas Pugh, the young Cincinnati, who is now supposed to be a prisoner in the hands of the Apache Indians, in Mexico, received a letter yesterday...

McNannus: Pay to bearer $100. Draw on State National Bank, El Paso, Texas. I am a prisoner.

"Apaches have got me. Hurry after me." "Prison."

"Sunday morning, July 3, at about 3 o'clock a. m."

The authorities of Mexico and the United States have sent troops after the Indians, and every effort will be made to save poor Pugh if he is still alive.

Pugh had a presentment that something dreadful was about to occur, and said so. Just before he started he put all of his letters and telegrams in care of the writer of the letter, in case anything should happen.

Senator Pendleton and Judge Matthews have interested themselves in the rescue of Mr. Pugh. Gen. W. T. Sherman telegraphs that he has no power to order soldiers into Mexico, but that he will exert every effort in Pugh's behalf.

The fact that young Pugh wrote the note when the Indians were engaged in murdering and pillaging the rest of the passengers, is evidence that he is possessed of any amount of courage and determination.

Unrivaled. As being a certain cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, impurity of blood, torpid liver, disordered kidneys, etc., and as a medicine for eradicating every species of humor...
