Willie Eduoin, the actor, and wife, well known to the theatre-going public as Alice Atherton, who have been staying in the city for a number of days on account of the sickness of their child, started yesterday to continue their journey from San Francisco to the eastern coast. They were obliged to stop over on their way at Salt Lake City for a week on account of the sickness of the child, and again in Omaha. Yesterday, as the little fellow was somewhat better, they decided to start again, being very anxious to get to their journey's end. At the depot the child became worse, and if the hot weather continued its death did not seem unlikely before they reached New York.

De Lorka, The Man Who Rowed Him

Across the River.

And the Story He Tells in Regard

Some of the friends of B. DeLoska. Sunday, seemed to think yesterday that Boyd's packing house. It has been previously stated in these columns that DeLoska was last seen house in company with a fisherman who lives thereabouts. According to the way the stary was rumored about man his watch if he would row him across the river and the fact that it ration of mind seemed to indicate something crooked.

A reporter for THE BEE rambled in the direction of Boyd's packing house yesterday and found William Cunningham who rowed De Loska over the river, without difficulty. As near as could be learned De Loska was first seen in that vicinity about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He came rushing into Spaulding's saloon, near the packing house, and throwing his coat aside said, "For God's sake anybody who has got a revolver shoot me." H then seemed violently excited. After a time he quieted down somewhat. He then told in a rambling way something about a difficulty he had had up town, but what the nature of it was he would not say. Persons in the saloon soon discovered his condition and tried to quiet him as much as possible. They did not know the man then, but have since recognized him as De Loska from the description published in THE BEE. Finally the man said he would be safe if he could only get across the river. He inquired if there was any one who would take him to the other shore, and one of the bystanders volunteered to find Cunningham for him. Cunningham was found on the shore. By this time the man had quieted down considerably, and Cunningham says he did not at first notice anything wrong with him. He asked Cunningham:

"Will you take me across?" "Yes," said Cunningham. "I must get across quickly," said he, growing somewhat excited.

After that DeLoska made four or five attempts to jump overboard but Cunningham intimidated him by holding one oar over his head, while he rowed with the other. As they reached the shore the man detached his watch from the chain and handed the timepiece to the boatman. The watch, Cunningham says, was a nickle-plated stem-winder, worth about $10, and he now has it in his possession. When

He found the man Cunningham, who rowed De Loska across the river Sunday after-noon, and had him take a boat and row him across the stream at the same point that he did De Loska and repeat again his version of the entire affair as he rowed. Cunningham did so, but throughout it was evident to Mr. Jones that he knew more about the matter, or at least some features of it than he wished to tell. Moreover, Mr. Jones found that there were some discrepancies in his stories, especially about the jumping into the river, and the removal of the coat and vest. arrival in the city he was employed in the freight suditing department of the U. P. railway, and about four months ago was removed to the engineer's office, where he was still em ployed at the time of his disappearance. About two months ago he was sick and first gave manifestatiations of temporary insanity. His particular hobby was electricity, of which he had stud-ied much. He had written a book entitled "The Origin of Electricity. Last Sunday he was at his home feeling unwell, and at about 11 o'clock was sitting on the veranda, when he seemed to arouse himself from stupor and said to his wife: "Mamma, the U. P. clerk, who disappeared it is all right. I have arranged it. As she did so the insane husband ran out the back door and that is the last seen crossing the river near the packing of him by his friends. Every effort has been made by his former fellow clerks to ascertain what has become of him, and dilligent search made along the shores and bottom lands on the Iowa side, but no trace of him can be found, and it is the belief of all interested that his body has 'ere this floated down the Missouri river.

Might be Said of All Thermometers Yesterday.

A Couple of Jokes of a Mercurial Character.

Yesterday was the hottest day experienced in Omaha this season. Owing to the pleasant breeze that stirred in the early morning hours, the heat was not much felt then, but later in the day hot weather preponderated everywhere For a couple of hours yesterday afternoon the signal service thermometer indicated 101 degrees in the shade, the highest point, according to the official statistics, ever reached in that office. The highest point reached by the thermemeter at Saxe's drug store was 106 degrees in the shade. Max Meyer's big thermometer raised a degree upon this tally and even at a quarter past 5 o'clock in the evening had dropped no lower than 100 degrees the shade. Thermometers in other portions of the city reached as high as 108 degrees in the shade. In the sun the mercury cavorted up the city building. The Rich Qualities of the Fissure

Hearing that Mr. C. T. Taylor, general agent of the New York life insurance company, who has been transacting business in Colorado for a year past, was about to leave for that state on mining business to-morrow a BEE reporter called upon the gentleman to learn something in regard to the busi-

"What is your opinion in regard to the mines of Colorado?"

"From what I could learn and see in traveling over the state, and from my own practical experience," said state in the Union, and more single fortunes have been made there relatively than in any other state I know

"I understand you yourself are interested in mining out there?" "Yes, sir."

"How did it come about?" "After being out there some time I eaught the mining fever, and, alhough I consider myself conservative, I found it almost impossible to prevent myself from being drawn in. As I had a brother who had been engaged in mining in California for twenty years I was induced to invest some money and set him to prospecting and discovering mines.

"Where are your mines located?" "In Cascade mining district, Clear Creek county. They are silver and gold lodes, true Fissure veins, which I pelieve to be the safest and most profitable mining. I concluded this was the very best locality after looking all over the state.' "What are the Fissure veins?"

"A true Fissure vein is a vein of mineral bearing quartz, extending almost vertically from the surface to unknown depths. They are considered inexhaustable, as the deeper you sink on the vein, the richer is the quality of the ore."

"What amount of mining property have you in that locality?" "We have discovered and located twenty rich lodes, each lode being 1.500 feet along the vein and the survey gives us about seventy-five feet on each side of the lode, which insures to us about three acres of land to each claim. The lodes discovered are called the Eureka, Mountain View, Omaha, Clark, Calvin Court, W. H. Beers, Franklin, New York, Boyd, Mabel, Golden Gate, Alpine, Silver Belle, Jupiter, Hidden Treasure, Cumberland, Goldworthy, Cascade, Acadia and Silver Chief."

"What amount of work have you done on each of these mines?" "I have done the amount of work required by the government, which is $100 worth a year on each lode, until my patent for each is secured. I have done some tunnelling and built roads and trails to each mine. Men are now sinking a shaft on the Eureka, which is considered by everybody a very valuable lode. Since I left there they have found a vein of sulphuret and silver two feet in width and growing wider as they descend." "What do you intend to do with so much mining property?"

"One lode is all any one man wants. I intend to keep the Eureka and develop it and sell the others. When they are developed sufficiently to show what is in them I will sell them as individual claims or put them into joint stock companies "Don't you consider mining busi-ness risky?"

"In mining for carbonates it is, at Leadville. It is then in pockets and these may soon be exhausted and you have nothing left. Whereas if you find a true Fisher vein rich in silver or gold, there is no risk attached to it as it is a certainty. All you have to contend with is the cost of mining and smelting."

S. Hascall's, Inthe Wabash road at Chillicothe, Mo., night before last, a BEE reporter sought him out yesterday for the purpose of obtaining some information of the modus operandi of the robbers. The name of the gentleman is D. H. Duperia, and he resides at Danville. Illinois.

He stated that he had read a few of the reports of the affair which had been published in the newspapers but that there had been none published as yet which were correct or reliable. In further conversation he informed the reporter that the work was done by two men who were apparently regular passengers occupying berths in the alceping car. In the night each passenger in the car was awakened in turn with a revolver at his or her head and a demand for their money.

The work was done very quietly, none of the passengers being awakened unhead and a demand for their money. of the passengers being awakened until his cash was wanted, and his neighbor had been disposed of. Just as the train pulled into Chillicothe they had completed their work and left the train and went to a hotel and robbed Mr. Taylor, "it is the best mining that of about ninety dollars, which was in the safe. When the train pulled out of the depot the passengers learned that they had all been robbed by a couple of men, as that number of berths were found vacated. Mr. Duperia was relieved of $300 in cash and his railroad passes. He says the men who did the robbing are well known along that line of road, and supposed heretofore to be honest and respectable, and that one of them particularly he knows well.
