Everybody Again in Good Spirits Over the Favorable Symptoms.

THE MORNING EXAMINATION.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—To-day's early morning reports from the president's sick room were unsatisfactory because meagre. Before 9 o'clock it was impossible to learn more than that the patient had had another chill during the night but appeared to be doing well after it.

HOW HE PASSED THE NIGHT.

During the morning examination some of those who had been in the sick room during the night gave out an idea of how time had been passing. The sleep of the president fell into after the administration of morphia was only slightly broken until midnight.

THE PUS CAVITY FOUND.

Dr. Agnew suggested that a pus cavity might have been formed in the wound channel, or near the angle caused by the deflection of the ball. Dr. Hamilton thought this quite probable, and Dr. Bliss had stated last night that the correctness of this idea had been indicated to him during the afternoon examination.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

At the White House, however, the result of the operation was reassuring. Members of the cabinet called during the morning with anxious faces, but went more hopefully away. Dr. Agnew and Hamilton refused to express any opinion of the case till they should have made another examination.

MESSAGES OF INQUIRY.

The news brought hundreds of messages of inquiry to the White House during the day, and Private Secretary Brown was kept busy sending and answering. After the incision had been made all answers were hopeful. Col. Rockwell sent the following note to some friends: "We all feel relieved and hope for the best. At 2 o'clock the president's condition is more favorable and his general appearance is better."

TO MINISTER LOWELL.

The following was sent at 6 p. m.: "The following messenger was sent at 11 p. m. as follows: 'The president's condition is improving. He has much less fever and there is a liberal subsidence of unfavorable symptoms, (Signed) BLAINE, Sec'y.

FROM MINISTER LOWELL.

The following dispatch was received to-night: Secretary Blaine: Your telegram was received with profound sympathy and forwarded to the queen and all of our legations in Europe. I await further news with intense anxiety. (Signed) LOWELL, Minister.

OPINIONS OF MEMBERS OF THE CABINET.

General Swain states that he is fully reassured that the president will recover. "You can see it by his looks. He is much better to-night and fully as well as three days ago."

SUNDAY'S BULLETINS.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 23—11 a. m.—The president was more restless than usual during the night and had another "rigor" just before midnight. This morning at 8:15 his pulse was 98, temperature 98.4, respiration 18. A consultation was then held with Dr. Hamilton of New York, and Dr. Agnew, of Philadelphia, after which a counter opening was made through the integument of the back, about three inches below the wound, which, it is hoped, will facilitate the drainage of pus, and increase the chances of recovery.

THE TRIAL OF MAUD S.

The principal event on the programme and the particular drawing card for the day was the announcement that Maud S. would attempt to lower her unrivaled record of 2:10. The day was all that could be desired, and had the track been first-class there is not the slightest doubt but that the fleet daughter of Harold and Miss Russell would have made a record that would stand a long time.
