The harbor is the best and safest on the coast, except perhaps that of Pensacola. The New Orleans and New York steamships are loaded at the wharf, but these are constructed expressly for sailing over the bar. It has the finest beach in the world. This beach is about thirty miles long, as hard and smooth as a floor, and at any stage of the water not less than 100 feet wide, making a handsome boulevard. The surf bathing is magnificent and entirely free from dan-gerous undertow. This beach is about to be made attractive, like that of Coney Island. The business houses of Galveston are large and costly. The cotton exchange is a handsome structure, built of stone and brick. The brick is brought from Phildelphia. Among he business houses is that of T. P. Willis & Bro., cotton factors and general supplies. The house does a business of $7,000,000 a year. Mr. Willis is the son-in-law of Gen. THE INDIAN NATION.

Passing through the Indian territory the observer is struck with the vastness and grandeur of that country, and the lazy and indifferent mode of living of its very sparse population. The inhabitants of this territory are composed chiefly of a class of indolent and trifling whites married to halfbreed women to keep themselves from starving, and of low and worthless half-breed Indians. The sentimentality which keeps this country-rich in every material resources—shut out from civilization and settlement is not founded on anything like what is claimed for it. The Indians should of course be compensated to a fair and reasonable extent. Any reasonable arbitrament ought to be preferred by them to their present mode GALVESTON'S ADVANTAGES.

The island is about thirty-six miles long, and its average width is about two miles. The harbor is formed in the waters which flow around the north point or north channel. After rounding the point the channel flows southwardly. About five miles from the city the waters begin to shoal, forming what is called the outer bar. This bar is a succession of undulations formed.

Texas is called Hong-Kong. This is made like an ordinary lemonade, except that in lieu of water, tea is used. The saloon business is brisk.
