San Franc's o Correspondence of the St. Louis San Francisco, August 20.—Oak land, just across the bay, is a charming city and considered by some much preferably to San Francisco as a place of residence. It is much warmer and not subject to such high winds. It contains some lovely residences and many fine buildings, among the latter hotels, banks, colleges and seminaries.

Across the bay is Alameda, famous ing. I say Sundays advisedly, because the morals of this coast do day out of this day of rest and stretch-The boats are crowded from morning that comes and goes. till night, and it seems like a great tors as well as their own. These inclosures are known under the highsounding appellations of Long Branch, Terrace and Newport, the first being the largest and the latter the most patronized.

Ample accommodations are made for visitors, who are duly surprised and shocked at the amazing novelties in bathing suits. Some of them are shockingly æsthetic, but they are all warranted to stand exposure to the water; in this respect being unlike those popular ones of the east, which are not intended to get wet under any circumstances, and which are worn only for the sake of displaying the wearer's form and attitudinizing to better advantage. I imagine Mrs. Grundy must be well satisfied with these latest freaks of fashion, since they are so inexpressibly comforting to her delicate sense of modesty, and as long as the bathers enjoy their poses upon the sand equally as well as their plunges into the sea, I suppose the rest of the world should be satis-

Of course the bathing at Alameda is not near so delightful as surf-bathing, but withal much less dangerous, and it affords a pleasant, safe recreation for timid ladies and venturesome children with nervous mammas.

The beach at the Cliff house would be a much finer place for bathing, but the water is a great deal too cold for even the most intrepid of bathers to venture in.

The Chinese are much employed as domestics in families in this city, and in this capacity some of them are really invaluable. They are quick, neat and very rarely need second orders. In intelligence they far surpass the average hired "help," and have none of their impertinent airiness. They make excellent cooks, and, contrary to expectation, have neither ways that are dark or tricks that are vain in this delicate matter of catering. Most of them eat with traditionary chop-sticks.
