A QUEER FAMILY.

Which Live in Tents on the River Bottom.

The Mother Nearly Brained by the Daughter.

Upon the river bottom a short distance north of the U. P. bridge there stand two canvas tents made of very light material. These two tents contain a good deal of misery and moral depravity. Previous to Monday of this week one tent held the whole family, which consists of the father and mother, one married daughter and three small children, two girls and a

The family in question is the Davis outfit, the elder members of which have figured conspicuously in Omaha police circles for some time past. Formerly they lived in North Omaha, but about a week ago they were ejected from the premises they occupied, since which time they have had their abode upon the river bottom. What the U. P. Men Think.

OMAHA, September 1. I regret ber of the B. & M. base ball club should have allowed his spleen to get the better of what little judgment the Creator seems to have endowed him with, and permitted himself to talk in so incoherent a manner to your reporter. I have no desire to retaliate because I do not believe that in his alleged interview he reflected the sentiments of the club he assumed to speak for. I merely wish to say that the U. P. base ball club have too much self-respect and too much regard for the majority of the B. & M. boys to make any misstatements in reference to the composition or character of either club, but it is due to both clubs that I should say that the statements of the B. & M. boy in the alleged interview have no foundation in truth, and I think his club will not endorse his silly twaddle.

Looking about they failed to find any owner for the hat, but soon discovered a large pocket knife lying near at hand. A few feet out in the river, stuck to the depth of a foot and a half in the mud, was discovered a heavy varnished cane. A close search was made thereabouts to discover the identity of the supposed suicide or obtain some clue to the mystery, Nothing else, however, could be found. Found Dead.

Missouri Valley, Ia., August 29.-Near Mandamin a man named Andrew Nelson was found dead about twenty five teet from the railroad track. His neck and one leg were broken. He had been dead for several days. Verdiet will be rendered to-day. Dr. Jameson, of Mandamin, had been working with the man and about 11 p. m. Saturday night thought he would take something to stimulate him. He took a four-ounce bottle from his pocket, it is said, and drank the contents, and died almost instantly. The contents proved to be carbolic acid, taken by mistake.
