ANOTHER DAY.

The State Fair to Hold Over To-day.

A Splendid Program Prepared for the Wind-up.

Mrs. Burke to Ride to Beat Her Best Time.

The Chariot Races Again Come to the Front.

The Exhibition and Races of the Fifth Day.

The board of managers of the state fair decided on Friday last to continue the exhibition two days of this week, until the attractions which they had engaged should be exhibited. By reason of the track drying sufficiently on Saturday to allow part of the program which had originally been announced for Friday to be carried out, it was determined finally that Monday should be the concluding day of the exposition, and that the greatest attractions of the week, Mrs. Burke's race and the chariot races, should be brought together in the same program.

As this is to be the concluding day of a fair, which has been conducted under more difficulties and embarrassments than probably any other like exposition ever known, it is a matter of congratulation that such attractions should have been retained. There is a prospect that the attendance will equal that of Thursday, the only really favorable day of the past week, when the crowd was estimated at 20,000. An excursion train starts from Lincoln at 7 o'clock in the morning, and leaves Omaha for the return at 9 o'clock at night. It is understood also that the Union Pacific road will run one or two excursion trains, beside a huge one from Council Bluffs. That city is expected to turn out a large attendance. There will be a GRAND PARADE this forenoon, at 10 o'clock, through the principal streets of Omaha, in which will appear the eight thoroughbred white and black horses used by Mr. McDonald in the chariot races, attached to their chariots and driven by the lady and gentleman who hold the ribbons in the two exciting half-mile heats in the afternoon.

Mrs. Burke will ride in a carriage and the beautiful race horses she makes such wonderful time upon will be led behind. The procession will be headed by the Nebraska City cornet band of sixteen pieces, who have rendered excellent music upon the ground during the past week. It is unnecessary to mention that assure the public of the appearance of Mrs. Burke and the chariots to insure a splendid attendance from this city, Council Bluffs and wherever else it is known.

The 2:30 trot, as will be seen by the program, is to be completed in a fine field of horses. In the roadsters' class, too, the best carriage horses in the city are entered, and this race will be very interesting. The following is the afternoon program, in full, the races commencing at 1 p. m. GRAND ROMAN CHARIOT RACE, two heats. Gentlemen's roadster race. Bicycle race; ten entries. Race by Mrs. Burke, who rides ten miles to beat her unparalleled time of Thursday, 20:34, for $1,000. The 2:30 trot. The following horses are entered: Little Sioux, owned by G. D. Wilson, Missouri Valley, Colorado, entered by J. W. Jacobs, of Lincoln; Golden Rule, entered by J. McDougal, of Dallas, Texas. RESOLUTION BY THE BOARD. The following resolution was passed by the board on Saturday evening: Resolved, By the board of managers, that while we appreciate the liberality of the people of Omaha in extending every facility towards making the present fair a success, yet in view of the inclement weather which has deprived the board of many thousands of dollars of gate receipts, we do therefore ask the business men of Omaha and the different railroad companies to close their business houses and offices on Monday, for the purpose of allowing their employes to attend the fair on that day; and the board further express the hope that in view of the light receipts for the week, by reason of the bad weather, the people of Omaha will lend their influence towards securing a large attendance on Monday, and the board of managers hereby promise that the most attractive programme of the week shall be given on Monday.

THE PREPARATIONS FOR no state fair in Nebraska were ever made with such a hearty disposition on the part of the management and the public to bring about success. The most ample time was given for everything and all possible attractions were engaged. And yet no fair ever met severer reverses in the way of weather, delay and general misfortune, than this one. The week opened with the exhibitors being behind hand. It had not been for the Douglas county and the Omaha exhibitors and for the agricultural machine display, there wouldn't have been anything on the grounds on Monday but booths and show tents. When everything was finally arranged and the fair really opened, the weather became uncertain. Thursday found a tremendous crowd, who suffered from the chilly wind which raised great columns of dust and otherwise made things unpleasant. The electric light had been declared a failure the night before, so the attractive evening program which had been arranged had to be reluctantly given up. Thursday night, however, everybody on the grounds was in good spirits over the attendance and the most active preparations were made to accommodate the throng expected the next day. But "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-gley." The equinoctial storm struck the fair grounds about 3 o'clock in the morning with full force, and Friday's expected crowd and successful exhibition was "gone up." A steady, cold rain fell steadily during the greater part of the day, driving all of the exhibitors who could get away of the ground and seriously inconveniencing the rest. Many of the tents and booths became flooded with water before daylight, so that their occupants were obliged to get out and shivering seek drier quarters. Of course, there was no attendance to speak of, although the ticketoffice showed a sale of fifty pasteboards. Everything about the hall, the attractive buildings on either side, and the merchandise on the opposite side of the grounds, was inactive, while the men in charge of the agricultural machinery seemed to have de camped in a solid body, only three being found about the wide area covered by that display.

IT WAS NOT SURPRISING that in this unfortunate and discouraging condition of affairs the crowd from outside the city who swarmed all over Omaha and filled every available bed, cot and sofa, should in great part give it up in disgust and return home, the majority of them never getting to the fair grounds at all. Saturday opened with a lowering sky, but the sun came out about 10 o'clock and commenced to dry up the mud, and matters took a more encouraging aspect. The track was harrowed and rolled as soon as it would admit of such treatment. Even then it did not get dry enough until 3 o'clock to admit of the races which were on Friday's unfulfilled program. These, as announced, were the 2:40 race, the running race in two heats and the chariot race. Previous to the races, the SWEETSTAKES EXHIBIT was given. This only included classes one and two—horses and cattle. In class one the following were the sweepstakes awards given: Stallions, four years old and over, $10; stallion colt, under one year, $5; mare, four years old and over, $25; stallion, two years old and under three, $15; stallion, four years old and over, $15. J. C. Palmer, of Fairmont, was awarded all of these premiums.

In class two, the special prize, the Nebraska Farmer, was awarded to R. Daniels, of Sarpy county; also, a copy of the same publication for the following: Jersey bull, any age, to Lytle Bros., Omaha; cow, any age, London's Bonnie, to Theron Nye, of Fremont; cow, any age, to J. C. Dearborn, Beatrice; bull, any age, to R. Daniels, of Sarpy county. The exhibit was a very pleasing and interesting one and attracted quite a crowd to the amphitheatre, in front of which it was given. The sweepstakes exhibition in swine and sheep was deferred on account of the lateness of the hour.

By the time the races began about TWO THOUSAND VISITORS were on the grounds. The first heat in the 2:50 race exhibited the largest field of horses that had been brought upon the track at any one time previous, there being seven entries. They were: Maxie Cobb, b., entered by E. Pyle, of Lincoln; Mila G., m., C. Nevis, of Omaha; Yellow Jacket, c. g., R. L. Graham, Oakland, Neb.; Dexter D., b. g., M. O. Reilly, Kearney; Robbie Dunbar, b. a., M. C. Robinson, Wisner; Clarence H., J. H. McDonald, Dallas, Texas; Grace S., r. m., F. Moore, Hastings. The bell was rung several times before the finally got the word, and then it was an unbroken start. Maxie Cobb had sold in the pools as winner, but he acted badly on the go in and his friends became a little anxious as he appeared as third at the quarter pole, and not much better at the half. But he recovered his feet at the three-quarter, and went to the front like a flash, winning the heat in 2:48; Yellow Jacket second; Mila G. third; Robbie Dunbar fourth; Dexter D. fifth; Clarence H. sixth; Grace S. "shut out" or distanced.

The second heat was trotted after some delay in scoring. Maxie Cobb lost the pole on the first quarter to Dexter D., who surrendered it to Yellow Jacket, the latter horse showing an astonishing burst of speed on the back stretch. The gate was good for a 25 record, but the yellow horse couldn't hold it and dropped behind. Maxie Cobb, who had been in the lead, who went past the stand on the half mile neck and neck. It was a pretty race between these two until the three-quarters, when the favorite's legs proved the better and he again won; Dexter D. second; Yellow Jacket third; Mila G. fourth; Clarence H. fifth; Robbie Dunbar outside the flag. Time 2:44.

The third heat finished it. Maxie Cobb hugged the pole on the first quarter, lost it to Mila G., but regained it just before reaching the three-quarter turn and won in 2:45; Mila G. second; Dexter D. third; Yellow Jacket fourth; Clarence H. fifth. The race and first money were given to Maxie Cobb; second and third money divided between Mila G. and Yellow Jacket; fourth money given to Dexter D. Between the second and third heat, a "granny kid" came all around. Somebody had put his money on Dexter D. and wanted to change the horse's driver. Then a protest was put in against Yellow Jacket, it being claimed that he made a record of 3/4 at Hastings. Both difficulties were arranged by the judges and no changes made.

THE RUNNING RACE. Two heats of a mile each, for $300, divided, was very interesting. The following horses ran: "Boston on the Table," b. g., entered by J. N. Jacobs, Lincoln; Turin, c. g., A. D. Phelps, Moberly, Mo.; Resumption, s. m., F. Pearson, Lincoln. Boston on the Table took both heats, in the time of 1:52 and 1:53. Then came the feature of the day—the chariot races. Two chariots, one driven by a man, the other by a woman (and, by the way, a very pretty woman), wheeled into the track, four prancing horses being hitched to each. One of the four-in-hands had coal black horses and the other of them had white and one bay horse. They started like a shot at the word and flew around the track at a breakneck speed. At the quarter a straight line could be drawn in front of the eight horses' noses, so even did they run. It was not possible to tell which would win until the mad race was almost finished. The lady driver plied her whip dexterously on the home stretch and succeeded in forcing her horses ahead, as they went under the line just a neck. The crowd were almost wild with excitement, and became still worse when the time was declared to be one minute and one second. The exhibition, although so brief, was grand and contained enough excitement for any day. It will stand any amount of repetition and should be missed by no one.

THIS CONCLUDED the day's entertainment, all features of which were very interesting.

YESTERDAY was a day of comparative rest at the grounds. Some of the machinery and most of the stock exhibits were taken away, but Floral hall, Merchants hall and a large part of the agricultural machinery was left undisturbed. The gates were thrown open and the grounds were visited by many hundreds from the city. All the officers remained at their quarters, transacting the necessary business connected with the removals and management of exhibits. The clerks in the secretary's department were all still busily at work in the afternoon.

The side show animals had a general holiday. The baby monkey took a sedate walk in the care of its maternal ancestor; the two-headed calf basked in the sunshine, and in general aspects it was a sort of laying off day to rest for the week's fatigue and prepare for the expected big day which will conclude the fair.

Among the Eating House People at the Fair Grounds.

There was a family row of considerable proportions out at the fair grounds Saturday night which created quite an excitement among those who were witnesses of it. It was begun early in the morning in a large lunch and refreshment stand on the grounds and culminated in the evening in the same locality. The female cook of the place had, during the night previous, taken a severe cold on account of the inclemency of the weather and wishing to get in proper trim for her arduous duties asked a person connected with one of the stands near by to procure some whisky for her. The man did as requested and the cook was about to imbibe when a soldier invited her to drink with him. She complied, and it is alleged that she at the same time hinted that the wife of the proprietor of the establishment might also be induced to take a drop too. Soldiers are proverbial for their hospitable natures, and this one desired to drink with the lady. He was made happy by her acquiescence. It is said they took not only one drink but several. All this was done during the absence of the boss of the place, and it was thought he would never be any the wiser. But there are always unfortunately busy bodies prying around. When the proprietor arrived at his temporary place of business he was soon made acquainted with the state of affairs, and afterward stated that he found his wife under the influence of liquor. All this occurred in the morning and after a few lively extemporaneous orations by the parties the difficulty was fixed up between them. In the evening the man took his wife and two children down into the city and left them at a relative's house. Late in the evening he repaired again to the fair grounds and made preparations for getting to bed that night. The cook had a room in the place. To avert any evil gossip among badly disposed persons he took a portion of the bed clothing he had on the grounds and started for an adjoining place where he had been invited to sleep for the night. At about half-past eleven o'clock the wife, who, it appears, suspected that her husband had been making preparations for the night, appeared on the grounds in a carriage which she had chartered for the occasion. The husband was just about to retire and was greatly surprised at seeing his wife. When he saw her at that hour of the night he imagined that she meant him bodily harm. So he gracefully slid in the place and shut the door. Her muscles, however, prevailed, and she got in. There was quite a lively jar and she told him of her unfaithfulness. She had brought the children back to the grounds with her and proposed to stay all night so as to keep a watchful eye at the place after he had taken his away, she asked him if he would not give her clothing for the children. Finally an amicable distribution of the clothing was made and the wife and children went to their own place and to bed. Early yesterday morning the husband discharged the cook, who was dumbfiss at the bottom of the whole affair.

STRAIGHT FROM CHINA.

Bishop Raimondi, of Hong Kong, in the City.

He Gives Some Interesting Facts About Life in the Antipodes.

Right Rev. J. T. Raimondi, bishop of Hong Kong, China, who is traveling in this country to recuperate his health, arrived in this city Saturday, and will remain here for a few days the guest of Vicar General Riordan. Bishop Raimondi left Hong Kong, where he has been stationed for the past twenty-three years, on the 26th of last May. Passing over to Japan, he remained there a short time and then shipped for San Francisco. He is now gradually making his way to the east, in the principal cities of which portion of the country he will spend about three months prior to his return to Hong Kong. Bishop Raimondi is an Italian by birth. As early as 1852 he started out as a missionary among the CANIBALS of the Pacific islands. He spent three years among that carnivorous set of people and made several narrow escapes from death. After spending some time among the Malays in Borneo he finally, twenty-three years ago, settled in Hong Kong, China, where he has remained uninterruptedly since. Hong Kong was not elevated to a bishopric until 1874, when Monsignor Raimondi was raised to that episcopal office. Bishop Raimondi was one of the guests at the state dinner tendered Gen. Grant at the Government house during his visit to Hong Kong. Things, he says, have changed wonderfully in the last few years. There is now practically no obstruction placed in the way of evangelizing here. At the present time there is not a province in the country that has not got

ITS CATHOLIC BISHOP, and every two or three days travel brings over to a chapel. Of course here and there occasionally a mandarin raises some objection to the work of the church, but the general government offers no opposition. The Chinese in the interior are found very tractable. The idea adopted is to change only some of their customs as a favor of superstition. Their style of dress or general mode of living otherwise are not interfered with. The people on the coast are much shrewder than those in the interior, just as those in the large cities of this country compare with those living in remote districts. It is a custom among the heathen Chinese to put such infants as are naturally deformed to death. The church makes a special effort to save these unfortunate and rescues probably 200,000 annually. With the proper amount of funds at command HALF A MILLION could be rescued each year. The female children are thought very little of, and the parents manifest no solicitude for them at all. The diocese of Bishop Raimondi includes the island of Hong Kong and a part of the province of Quang-tong, which translated means Quang, river and tong, east—consequently that portion of the province lying east of the Quang river. There are probably a million and a half of Christians in China proper and Cochinchina. The principal opposition is met from the literati who are arrayed against the Christians, not so much on account of their religion as because they are foreigners. The Chinaman makes a pretty good Christian under most circumstances. The bishop FINDS NO DIFFICULTY in making himself understood in English, and besides speaks Portuguese, Italian, French, the pure Chinese and all its dialects.

Bishop Raimondi gave a very comprehensive explanation concerning the letters in the Chinese language. As in everything else the Chinaman works by the rule of contraries. When he prints a book he begins to read it from what the Europeans would consider the end, just as Hebrew is read. Altogether there are about 50,000 characters in the language. Probably half of these letters, each of which in English would represent a word, are technical characters that are seldom used outside of certain branches. It is estimated that having thoroughly learned 8,000 to 10,000 characters one can fully understand the literature of the country. All the writers, LIKE CONFUCIUS, for instance, have certain peculiar characters to represent certain ideas, and these they always use. Consequently when one has mastered a single book by any of these writers he finds no difficulty in reading and thoroughly understanding all the other works by the same author. There are six principal dialects, but those speaking any one can thoroughly understand pure printed Chinese. The basis of the alphabet or what they call the dictionary consists of 214 radical signs. Each of these radicals is a fixed character which taken by itself relates to some certain object. For instance, one radical may refer to man, another to woman, another to water, another to fire, another to flowers, and so on. Taking these radicals as a basis for an idea, they add to each, lines, dashes or dots which bear a certain relation to the main character. In this way they express a thought in connection with the general object of which the radical is the representation. In reading the first thing the translator does is to discover the radical sign in the character before him. Having determined for instance that the sign refers to woman he figures out from the additions to the original character exactly what is intended to be said in regard to her.

When one Chinaman meets another he does not say "How goes it?" "How do you find yourself?" or "How do you do?" but simply remarks: "Ni shik fan mo?" This put into English is simply, "Did you eat your rice?" If the Chinaman greeted replies in the affirmative, the other intelligent Mongolian will take it for granted that he is in a fine state of preservation, else otherwise he would not have been able to eat his rice.

An Awful Yawn. Saturday a man named Batton, living in South Omaha, yawned, as he was frequently his custom to do. Probably a number of other persons in the city yawned at the same time. Batton, however, took such a good big yawn that he dislocated his jaw and had to call on Dr. Chadwick to replace it.
