DEAD! The Country in Gripe Over the Untimely End of James Abram Garfield.

The Heart of the Nation Bowed Down with Grief. A Picture of Universal Sorrow that History Cannot Duplicate. The President Passes Peacefully Away at 10:35 P. M. His Death Unexpected by His Immediate Friends, But the Members of His Household Present at the Final Moment. Unconscious for Some Time Before His Dissolution. He Dies Without Uttering a Single Syllable. The Feeling Manifested Over the Event in All Parts of the Country.

The sad death of James A. Garfield was announced at precisely 10:35 last evening. To the many it was not entirely unexpected or unthought of, but to the immediate friends and attendants of the departed and deeply lamented president it was a sore surprise, inasmuch as at 6:30 p. m. the indications in his case were favorable to a continued existence of at least two or three days. Upon the receipt of the appalling intelligence in this city the bells began to sound, and each toll made straight its mission of sorrow to every heart. Though remorse may be ours at the loss of so honorable a citizen and so worthy a president, it is a consolation to know that he has left a bed of pain and suffering for one of bliss and lasting contentment.

not in a condition to give the information at the moment, and access to the cottage was afterwards quickly and temporarily cut off. DEATH OCCURRED AT 10:35, and the first announcement of it was made at Elberon at 10:33 by Mr. Warren Young. The announcement only followed by a very few moments the rumor that the president was sinking rapidly that death had already taken place. When the rumor of the new trouble was first heard his condition had been such that the cottage had been closed and most of the newspaper men had gone to the west end, and some of them were already in bed, with the expectation of a hard day to-morrow, to begin in the morning, and even Dr. Hamilton was of the opinion that death was not imminent; he was not within call and not present when the death occurred. The newspaper men who were present started to get the details, only to find that the LINE OF THE GUARDS had been extended such a distance from the cottage that the line could not be approached or passed, that Capt. Ingalls in command had received positive orders that all passes issued up to that hour had been declared void, to use the most trustworthy or first information came from the usual sources. At this hour, 11:30 p. m., Attorney General MacVegh assembled all the members of the press together and gave the following official statement of the president's death: "At 10 o'clock he telegraphed to Minister Lowell shortly before that. At that time Dr. Bliss had seen the president and found him to be comfortable, with his pulse at 106 and the conditions promising a quiet and comfortable night. Dr. Bliss asked the president if he felt any uneasiness, discomfort or pain, and the president answered 'Not at all.' Soon after this the president and then Dr. Bliss retired to his room across the hall. General Swain and Colonel Rockwell, after the retirement of Dr. Bliss, remained with the president about fifteen minutes. After 10 o'clock the president awakened, and he said to Mr. Swain that he was suffering a great pain, placing his hand over the region of his heart. Dr. Bliss was called from his room across the hall. When he entered he found the president unconscious, substantially without any pulse and with the action of the heart almost indistinguishable. Dr. Bliss said at once: 'The president is dying.' He then immediately directed Gen. Swain to send for Mrs. Garfield, who was in another part of the house, and for Drs. Agnew and Hamilton, who were in their apartments at Elberon, and for Dr. Boynton. They all repaired to the bedside of the president at once. The president remained in a dying condition until 10:35 o'clock, when life was pronounced extinct. The president said nothing after this utterance to Swain, the Hoedie of some heart trouble. The surgeons say the trouble was probably neuralgia of the heart, but of course that is as yet uncertain. I at once notified the vice president of the president's death. I also called the announcement to Minister Lowell as well as I could. Also attempted to have the announcement reach Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln, who were at that time on their way higher on the train from Boston. Other members of the cabinet were at their respective departments at West End and were at once summoned. They are here now and we are all together in consultation. The result of the consultation will be given out as soon as it is attained. All relatives and near friends have been sent the news. ATTORNEY GENERAL MACVEGH has just sent the following: "To Vice President Arthur: It becomes our painful duty to inform you of the death of President Garfield, and to advise you to take the oath of office as president of the United States without delay, if it concurs with your judgment. We will be very glad if you will come here on the earliest train to-morrow morning. Wm. WINDOM, Secretary of the Treasury. Wm. H. HUNT, Secretary of the Navy. THOS. L. JAMES, Postmaster General. W. MACVEGH, Attorney General. S. J. KIRKWOOD, Secretary of the Interior. It is said that the whole family had known of the crisis in time to see the president while he was still unconscious, or appeared so, although it was not known that he had spoken or even recognized any one. Mrs. Garfield, Miss Mollie Garfield, Col. Rockwell, Gen. Swain and Drs. Bliss and Agnew were present during the entire time, but none of them left the house immediately afterwards and the only one to enter was Dr. Hamilton. It is understood that for a long time it has been Mrs. Garfield's wish that the crisis finally came the family should have all possible privacy and that the information to the public should not extend to details, but be considered as private and sacred. MESSAGE FROM ARTHUR. LONG BRANCH, September 19.—The first message of sympathy received was from General Arthur, who heard it before he was advised to take the oath of office, or had received any notification of the desire of the cabinet.

How the Shock was Felt. AT ALBANY, N. Y.—The bells were tolled by order of Mayor Nolan and the public building are being draped in mourning on the announcement of the president's death. AT BOSTON. BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The news of the president's death was received at 11:20 p. m. and at 11:30 the fire alarm bells struck the first peal, while you hundreds of persons from places of amusement were on their way home. In an instant every pedestrian halted and when succeeding blows on the bells at intervals of a minute confirmed the dreaded suspicion those on the streets hurried to the newspaper offices to obtain particulars and confirm the sad news the minute the bells of the fire alarm sounded. For half an hour the crowd filled the streets in front of the newspaper offices and telegraph headquarters. All the theaters announced no performances to-night. AT OSWEGO, N. Y. OSWEGO, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The news of President Garfield's death was received here at 11:30, and in a few moments the city hall bell commenced tolling, thus giving notice to the citizens that their worst fears were confirmed. AT CLEVELAND, O. CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—The news of the president's death was received at 11 o'clock and created great excitement, although it was expected. The cathedral bell was tolled, followed by other churches. A special meeting of the city council is called for to-morrow morning, when suitable resolutions will be passed. All the public buildings are in mourning. AT INDIANAPOLIS, IND. INDIANAPOLIS, September 18.—The news of the death of President Garfield, although not unexpected, created a profound sensation here to-night. The fire bells were tolled, which brought thousands to the newspaper offices to receive the latest intelligence. Gov. Porter and Mayor Grubb united in a call for a public meeting at the grand opera house to-morrow at 2 o'clock p. m. Messrs. Brooks and Dickson have announced that their theaters will be closed until after the funeral, and DeWann Thompson, who is playing at the English opera house, announces that under no circumstances will he appear again until after the obsequies. AT PEORIA, ILL. PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 19.—The news of the president's death was received with the tolling of bells, and great crowds of people are upon the streets, expressing sorrow. AT KANSAS CITY. KANSAS CITY, Sept. 19.—The news of the president was received at 10:15 p. m. Places of public meeting adjourned when the bells commenced tolling, this being recognized as the signal of a national calamity. The mayor issued a proclamation ordering a display of the usual signs of mourning on public buildings, and calling a meeting of the citizens at noon to-morrow. AT CINCINNATI. CINCINNATI, September 19.—The death of the president was announced at 10:30 p. m., creating a profound sensation. Theaters were closed, and the tolling of bells carried the sad news to the people. Death-like silence prevailed, and the crowds on the streets conversed almost in whispers. AT LEAVENWORTH, KS. LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Sept. 19.—The news of the president's death, though not unexpected, produced a profound sensation, followed by anxious inquiries at newspaper and telegraph offices for the truth of the report. As soon as the news was confirmed the bells tolled, the noise of the streets ceased, and the city is filled with mourning. AT LOUISVILLE, KY. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 19.—The news of the president's death caused much excitement. Theaters closed, crowds surrounded the newspaper and telegraph offices, and all the city bells were tolled. AT DAYTON, O. DAYTON, O., Sept. 19.—The announcement of the president's death created a profound sensation in this city. Bells were tolled. AT RICHMOND, VA. RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 19.—Bells throughout the city commenced tolling on the news being received of the president's death. Melancholy crowds were waiting in front of newspaper and telegraph offices, eagerly scanning the bulletins. Every man feels as though it were a domestic affliction and there is an undercurrent of feeling that would be dangerous to the assassin if he were in reach. AT ROCHESTER, N. Y. ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 20.—The news of the president's death was received at 11 o'clock. The bells of the city were tolled, and newspaper offices were besieged. Great excitement prevailed and sincere sorrow is expressed. Public buildings will be draped in mourning. AT COLUMBUS, OHIO. COLUMBUS, O., September 19.—The news of the president's death spread rapidly and a feeling of the deepest grief prevailed in all classes, bells being tolled all over the city. The republican state executive committee with drew all appointments for this week. Comment to-night is of a subdued tone of sadness as if personal bereavement had been suffered. ACROSS THE OCEAN. LONDON, Sept. 19.—The news of the death of President Garfield created a great excitement, as well as great sympathy for Mrs. Garfield. AT CHICAGO. CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The bulletin announcing the president's death came with appalling suddenness. The evening bulletin had alleged apprehensions of an immediate and fatal termination of the president's struggle for life, and the sad news produced a great shock. The fire alarm bells were tolled, and the city council, which was in session, immediately adjourned until to-morrow at 2 o'clock, when arrangements will be made to send a committee to attend the funeral. IN NEW YORK CITY. NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Trinity church bells began to toll at 11:17 o'clock, when news of the president's death was confirmed. Bells in the upper part of the city are also tolling. PROCLAMATION BY GOV. NANCE. EXECUTIVE OFFICE, LINCOLN, NEB., Sept. 20, 1 a. m. The terrible tragedy which occurred in the city of Washington on the 21st of July last, when the chief magistrate of the nation became the object of an assault—unprovoked and desperate assault—has found its culmination in a national disaster mournful in character to be announced in the ordinary language of sorrow. Our honored and beloved president, James A. Garfield, died at Long Branch, N. J., at 10:30 p. m. yesterday, after many weeks of intense suffering. The strong, brave heart is still, and the friends of law and order and good government throughout the world are bowed with grief as those who felt the personal bereavement. The nation's calamity brings sorrow to every home in this republic, and awakens the tenderest feelings of sympathy for the bereaved family in every city, village and rural home. In harmony therewith it is suggested that on the day set apart for the burial of the chief magistrate, all public offices and other places of business should be closed. It is also recommended that the people assemble throughout the nation on the day set apart for the burial of the chief magistrate, and that they participate in the national funeral services on that occasion as further manifestation of the sorrow that is felt by all and as a mark of respect for the exalted character of our chief magistrate. It is ordered that the national flag be displayed at half-mast on the capital building in Lincoln, and that the several state departments be draped with emblems of mourning for the period of thirty days. In witness whereof I have hereunto affixed my hand, this 20th day of September, 1881. By the governor, ALBURN NANCE, S. J. ALEXANDER, Secretary of State. THE NEWS IN OMAHA. The measured tolling of the fire bell, the sharp notes of which were so often carried terror to the hearts of Omaha people, brought with it last night the first dread intimation that President Garfield had passed from time to eternity. The news reached the city at half past 9 and scarcely two minutes elapsed before the fire bell was rung. The alarm continued to be sounded at regular intervals for nearly an hour. At first most people on the streets supposed it to be an alarm of fire, but they were quickly disabused of this and it was astonishing how quickly everybody reached the same conclusion. For some cause or other there were comparatively few people upon the streets, but they rapidly made their way to the Western Union office to, if possible, verify the news. There it was learned that a mere announcement, without particulars, had been received, but the reliability of the news could be vouched for. In a few moments the bells of St. Philomena's cathedral began to toll solemnly, and some other churches followed in the course of time. This spread the news to the bounds of the city, and at 10 o'clock the streets were comfortably filled with people. A later message soon verified the first one, if verification were necessary. The announcement apparently created no excitement, but the main festivity of sorrow were as universal as they were apparently heartfelt. People generally seemed disinclined to talk about the matter, but there were probably many who thought with the poet, that "The hoarse of heraldry, the pomp of power, And all that beauty, all that wealth ere aware, Shall but the invisible hour, The path of glory lead but to the grave." It was a sad announcement to the people of Omaha and in no city in the union was it received with more heartfelt sorrow. THE AVENGEURS. NATIONAL ASSOCIATED PRESS. NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The "Nation's Avengers," a secret society, met to-night and took action that will soon relieve the nation of the trouble of supporting Guitau to trial by jury. The "Nation's Avengers" have no doubt but full justice would be meted out to the assassin if left to the usual process of law. They unanimously resolve that one of their number be chosen whose duty shall be to devote his whole time and energy to carry into execution their proposed plan, and while it is understood that the person selected to murder Guitau will be unknown to fellow members except this executive committee. WASHINGTON NOTES. NATIONAL ASSOCIATED PRESS. WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The war department has been notified by Gen. Hancock that he will at an early day detail a special court martial to try Sergeant Mason for shooting at Guitau. A prominent army officer said to-day that public sentiment with Mason in his attempt to kill the assassin does not extend to officers of the army, who regard his act with disgust and universal condemnation. Senator Ingalls, speaking of equal division of the senate in the event of Gen. Arthur to the presidency, said he believed the republicans would continue to have control of the committee, but the democrats would have the organization. THE GUN RECALLED. NATIONAL ASSOCIATED PRESS. WATERLOO, Wis., September 19.—A young man named Blair met with a singular accident near here Saturday. While shooting at some game the gun recoiled with great force, the butt end striking him across the chest of the heart, causing instant death. A MISSING "CONFIDENTIAL." NATIONAL ASSOCIATED PRESS. CINCINNATI, O., September 19.—Abbey Winslow, confidential clerk of Schaefer Forbes, is missing and accounts to the amount of $2,000 are short. He speculated with the employers' money. Opera glasses for rent at Whipple, McMillen & Co., corner 15th and Douglas streets. Sept. 19, 21.

THE WORST YET. The Grim Monster's Shadow Again Clearly Visible to the Eyes of Many. It Casts a Dark and Unearthly Gloom Over the Whole People. The Hearts of all Void of Hope and Given to Cruel Despair. Since the Issuance of the Evening Bulletin Garfield Has Another Attack. Of Chills and Rigor, With an Accompanying Pulse-Beat of From 112 to 130. Agnew Considers the Chances as "Only a Question of Time." MacVegh Sends Vice President Arthur a Statement of the Existing Circumstances. [Monday Afternoon Dispatches.] NATIONAL ASSOCIATED PRESS. LONG BRANCH, Sept. 19, 8 a. m.—The president had a very comfortable night, and the attendants say he was much easier after the subsidence of the fever following the chill than it had been expected. The lights were not once turned up during the night. There is a much better feeling around Franchlyn Cottage than there was even during yesterday morning. DR. BOYNTON. who spent the latter part of the night with the president, has just come from the cottage. In answer to a question by the reporter of the National Associated Press as to how the president was doing, he answered: "The president is all right." 8:15 BULLETIN—UNOFFICIAL. ELBERON, Sept. 19.—Dr. Agnew, who has just come from the Franchlyn cottage, where he has been for the last twenty minutes, says that the president is apparently doing better, suffering from no disturbance during the night. 8:55 BULLETIN—UNOFFICIAL. ELBERON, Sept. 19.—It is this moment that the president is suffering from another rigor. 9 A. M. BULLETIN—OFFICIAL. ELBERON, Sept. 19.—The condition of the president this morning continues unfavorable. Shortly after the issue of the evening bulletin he had a chill lasting fifteen minutes. The temperature ranged from 112 to 130. The sweating that followed was quite profuse. The cough, which was troublesome during the chill, gave but little annoyance during the remainder of the night. This morning at 8 o'clock the temperature was 98.8, pulse 106, and the respiration was feeble at 22. At 8:30 another chill came on, on account of which the dressing was temporarily postponed. A bulletin will be issued at 12:30. (Signed) BLISS, AGNEW. Dr. Boynton said, at 9:30 a. m., to a reporter: "Yes, the president's condition was uncomfortable for some time before this rigor came on, but it looks very bad now. The three rigors since Saturday morning have perceptibly reduced the president and have put him down much lower than he was. He is very low and exhausted." "Has it at last been reduced to a question of but a few hours?" "Not exactly that, but the president is very low." "What is the hope yet?" "There is no hope in the case now except the man's wonderful constitution." "Is that all?" "That is all. Most men in his case would have been dead long ago." DR. AGNEW said at 8:15 o'clock the night had been such and the conditions then were such that a favorable bulletin was expected. The examination and dressing was undertaken and a favorable bulletin was issued. At 9:45 a. m. or in the course of the construction, when the rigor made its appearance, the bulletin was then destroyed and a word sent out that the particulars of the rigor would be given in an official bulletin. The rigor in some respects was like that of last evening, and came on soon after the dressing of the president. AT 10:40 A. M. Dr. Agnew was asked what the chances for the president were. "It is but a question of time," was the answer. "Do you believe recovery is impossible?" "I believe the president will not recover and that the only question is one of time." "One of a day or two?" "No, I think it may go on longer than that, although anything is possible." Attorney General MacVegh, when asked what the actual condition of the president was, answered: "The lowest yet. He is worse than he has ever been." "Has the end come?" "It looks very much as if it had." Dr. Bliss being asked if there was a probability of a recurrence of the rigors, said: "Yes, they are likely to occur any time." "How long can the president stand them?" "If they should continue for forty-eight hours the president, I believe, will die." "Is that the worst condition?" "No, it is not. The president may expire during any chill which may hereafter come upon him." "Did the last rigor seriously affect him?" "Yes, it did; it was the most prostrating one the president has ever had." "Has any other dangerous symptoms appeared?" "Yes, there has. While I do not believe that of dullness in the lungs has increased, we now know that it is entirely inflated and that the difficulty in breathing has increased." "Is there anything especially bad about the last rigor which was not possessed by the two others?" "Yes. The worst symptoms that has recently been developed is the fact that during the morning's rigor the temperature did not get below normal. That indicates the worst possible thing next to death. It shows that the president is in such a condition that his vitality is reduced to the lowest point. His system has been so affected by blood-poisoning that it now seems impossible for him to have even such changes in condition as ought to be effected by the rigor. It would seem that he is too low to be any longer effected by anything one way or another." "Dr. Agnew, when asked if matters were at their worst, replied: "They are very bad, indeed." "Can such a condition continue much longer?" "It cannot." MESSAGE TO ARTHUR. NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Vice President Arthur just received the following dispatch from Attorney-General MacVegh: ELBERON, Sept. 19, 1881.—Vice President Chester A. Arthur, 123 Lexington avenue, New York: It is impossible to conceal from ourselves that the president is rapidly growing worse. The two chills occurring within forty-eight hours were as to be regarded as a trial for affliction which God in His mercy may allow us with. (Signed) MACVEGH. XON BULLETIN—UNOFFICIAL. ELBERON, Sept. 19.—The president is now as usual. Secretary Lincoln has arrived, and a cabinet council is in progress. The members have been in session for half an hour. All the members are present except Blaine. 2:15 P. M. BULLETIN—UNOFFICIAL. ELBERON, Sept. 19, 2:15 p. m.—The president is asleep and quiet and comfortable. Mrs. Garfield's Fund. NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Cyrus W. Field appeal to the National Associated Press: That he death of the president has led to inquiries in regard to the fund raised for the benefit of Mrs. Garfield. The whole amount subscribed is $157,599.38, of which every dollar has been paid except a single subscription of $5,000, which was made under the condition that $245,000 were first to be raised, and that any withdrawal should not be made until that amount be secured. The money just received was deposited with the United States Trust company, and as soon as a sufficient amount was paid in the Trust company purchased $100,000 of 4 per cent registered bonds, to which has since been added $25,000. Owing to the high premium this $125,000 in bonds cost $145,281.25. The bonds remained on deposit with the Trust company for Mrs. Garfield, in most of which is $5,000 a year to be paid to her quarterly as long as she lives. At her death the whole amount will be divided equally among the surviving children of James A. Garfield. There is a balance in cash of $738.14, which, with whatever may be added hereafter, will be applied in some other way. There would seem to be reason for expecting considerable additional, now that the president is gone. Individuals have made liberal promises what they would do in the event of his death. Some even felt that there was imprudence in the attempt to raise subscriptions while he was still living, with hopes of recovery; that gift would create a feeling of personal obligation that might prove embarrassing hereafter some were restrained from giving less. Their motives should be misunderstood. That objection is now removed and no one need fear the imputation of unworthy motives for which there is no longer a place. Our dead president has no favors to give, and no honors to bestow. He cannot be touched by tokens of public sorrow even by a whole nation following his bier. But there is a practicable way of showing respect for the dead by kindness to his living. He is gone but his wife and children live to bear through all their lives the burden of this great sorrow. Mrs. Garfield will soon leave the capital in which her husband was lately at the head of 50,000,000 of people, to go back to her distant home widowed and desolate. Only once before has there been anything so pathetic in American history. That the country will deal generously with the stricken household we will not doubt, but great bodies move slowly and it is so long to wait we have preferred to do something now, asking only for privilege, in the first flush of grief of showing our sympathy in a practical way, and so in some slight degree, if we cannot soothe the hidden sorrow, of relieving the anxieties that must press upon that widowed mother's heart. (Signed) CYRUS W. FIELD. Worthy of Praise. As a rule we do not recommend patent medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, than we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are really a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Biliousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney complaints, even where all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend to all.—Ex. Sold at 50 cents a bottle. Loh & McMillan. (4)
