COURT HOUSE CONTRACT.

It was Signed Yesterday by Contractor Coots.

The commissioners yesterday after a thorough canvass of the subject decided to let the contract for building the new court house to John F. Coots, of Detroit. The contract was signed yesterday. It is conditional in its terms. According to the Nebraska statutes the commissioners are not allowed to expend more money for public buildings than is actually voted by the people. This is the case too even where the commissioners have the necessary cash on hand. As the building will cost more than was voted originally the commissioners have decided to put the matter to a vote of the people in November. Coots will begin on the work of the court house at once, but little will probably be done until next year except in laying the basis for the cement foundation. This is the shape in which the matters now is and there will not be any change until the November elections.

To the Grand Jury.

The case of Frank Hamill, the soldier charged with stealing a watch from a fellow vet, and that of Wm. Buckovic, who, it is claimed, attempted to pulverize his brother-in-law, were transferred from Judge Beueke's court yesterday to be acted upon by the grand jury.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

The Treasurer of Saunders County Indicted for a Grave Offense.

Damaging Disclosures Against Henry Anderson, of Wahoo.

Sad Domestic Troubles in a Once Happy Family.

Two weeks ago the following dispatch was received at THE BEE office from Onawa, Iowa: To The Omaha Bee: Onawa, Ia., September 27, 1881.-Henry Anderson, of the banking firm of Anderson & Griffith, of Wahoo, Nebraska, was indicted yesterday by the grand jury of this county for adultery with one Alice Wilson, who is somewhat notorious in this locality for her loose morals and easy virtue.

The dispatch created the greatest surprise. Although coming from a highly creditable source, it seemed impossible that there should not have been some mistake. The standing of the man alleged to have been indicted and the peculiar locality in which the indictment was reported to have been made made it at first seem improbable that the popular treasurer of Saunders county, Henry Anderson, was the person again at whom this grave charge could have been preferred by a grand jury.

On the day following the receipt of the dispatch, however, a note was left on the desk of the editor of THE BEE, in his absence, from Griffith, junior partner of the banking firm referred to in the above dispatch, which requested that no publicity be given to the startling information. This made it appear as if there might be "something in it" after all. A representative of THE BEE was accordingly detailed to investigate and sift the matter. It was first found that the man referred to is

HENRY ANDERSON, OF WAHOO, who formerly resided in Omaha, where he is well known. Anderson came to this city about fifteen years ago. He was first employed as a clerk in the grocery store of A. J. Hanscom. In time he procured a position in the postoffice, during the postmastership of George Smith. Through Senator Thayer he was afterwards appointed as postal clerk on the Union Pacific railroad, where he faithfully performed his duties until a change of administration relieved him. He then secured the position of teller in the Omaha National bank, and afterwards accepted a position as bookkeeper in the First National bank. Business openings caused him to remove to Fremont, and from there to Wahoo. In Wahoo he has since been interested in banking. He was elected treasurer of Saunders county in 1877 and was re-elected in 1879. While living in Omaha he enjoyed the confidence of his employers, and was generally popular and held in high esteem.

MARRIAGE. In 1867 Mr. Anderson, while a clerk in the postoffice in this city, wooed and won a lady of highly respectable family in Fayette county, Iowa, named Carrie A. Hough. They were married at the house of the bride's parents and the newly wedded couple moved to their home in Omaha. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson resided here until 1872, living most of the time in a residence on Dodge street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. During these five years, as far as is known, the most happy conjugal relations existed. In due time a little baby daughter appeared to gladden the household, and not a cloud crossed the pathway of the happy couple. Anderson's salary as postal clerk and while he was in the employ of the banks was sufficient to maintain his little family comfortably, but he was ambitious to get ahead, and, therefore, when he received an offer from a heavy lumber dealer in Fremont to assume the business, he was quick to accept it, and his wife went willingly with him to the new home in which he was to lay a foundation for his future business success.

THREE YEARS were spent in Fremont by Anderson, during which time he was quite fortunate in his enterprises and succeeded in accumulating some little property. Neither here was there serious discord in the family circle, which had been increased by another bright-eyed, laughing wee bit of a darling. It was during this time, however, that Mrs. Anderson began to suspect that her husband was not entirely true to his marriage vows. But friends intervened when signs of a DOMESTIC BREAK-UP appeared and again peace was restored. In the winter of 1875 Anderson became interested in another line of business and shortly after moved, with his family, to Wahoo, where he opened a bank and where he has since remained and conducted many successful financial operations. It was while living there, too, that he is charged with having fallen before temptation and becoming involved in an honor of the most disreputable nature which ruined once a happy home, and he has now produced an indictment for felony.

THE PATRIENTRIQUE. In the winter of 1878-9 two women known as Mabel and Blanche Manard were inmates of a disreputable house on Twelfth street, in this city. Both women were notorious and both are recorded upon the police docket of that winter as paying fines for their illicit calling. One of these women has figured prominently in the subsequent career of Henry Anderson. A near relative of Mrs. Anderson, who claims to know all of the facts of the domestic troubles in which the unfortunate family became involved, tells the following story and vouches for the truth of each allegation therein contained:

THE STORY. During the winter of 1878-9 Anderson became acquainted with the woman Mabel Manard, and he became a frequent caller upon her at

BURGLARIZING IN VAIN.

Two Houses Ransacked by Early Morning Thieves.

About 5 o'clock this morning two burglars occurred on lower Twelfth street, by which two houses of ill-fame were thoroughly ransacked. At one house, kept by Jennie Dickinson, the burglars entered at a back window and went through all of the lower rooms. The safe, containing silverware, was attacked but the burglars evidently did not possess the proper tools and relinquished the job. After going through the lower rooms and taking a few rings and trinkets from a bureau they proceeded up stairs, where all of the inmates were sleeping. The proprietress of the house being very ill, a man was watching with her, and when the intruders came to the door of her room he put in an appearance and they immediately retreated, leaving the house as they entered.

A few minutes afterward a window in the front part of the house kept by Sadie York, on the opposite side of the street, was opened half way, propped up with a shingle and two men crawled inside. They found nothing in the lower rooms, but in room upstairs they succeeded in cornering a pair of pantaloons belonging to a man sleeping there. As the burglars were going out of the room a man in bed awoke, and seeing the men carrying away something, gave chase. All three plunged pell mell down the stairs into the street, and the two marauders ran toward Dodge street, closely pursued by the slinky-clad Nemesis, who thought they were carrying off his property. At the corner of Twelfth and Dodge streets one of the fellows dropped the trousers, and they separated, running in different directions. What was the disgust of the individual who had thus rushed out through the cold and mud with nothing more substantial than a shirt, to discover that the pantaloons were not his, but belonged to "another fellow." The man who thus gave valiant chase however was excusable for his ardor as he supposed the burglars had his coat, which hung upon a chair and contained $250. It is supposed that the burglars are the same ones who robbed Tom Highlander three weeks ago, and about ten days since went through another disreputable house on the same street kept by Lou Scott, and stole twenty dollars and a gold bracelet from under her pillow. In both of these former operations, however, chloroform is thought to have been used, and the thieves may not be the same ones who made things so lively for the demonio-medicine yesterday morning.

PERSONAL. V. G. Lantry is at the Creighton home. H. S. Chittenden is a guest at the Creighton home. F. C. Casteller, of Blair, Neb., is in the city, staying at the Creighton home. Mrs. Chas. Shiverick returned home from the east yesterday. She has been absent several months. The late Senator Morton's wife and daughter passed through Omaha yesterday afternoon bound for San Francisco. Mrs. Becht, of Peru, Ill., mother of Max Becht, of Schroter & Becht, arrived in this city yesterday on a visit to her home. N. L. D. Solomon and wife leave tomorrow morning for Philadelphia, Boston and New York, to purchase his holiday goods.

Hon. Robert Anderson, member of the parliament of Melbourne, Australia, with his wife and daughter, are in the city, guests at the Creighton home.

Ex-Gov. John Burbank, of Dakota, is in the city. He is well known to many Omaha people. Gov. Burbank was a brother-in-law of the late Oliver P. Morton.

J. C. Fitz Gibbon, of Elmira, N. Y., who has been spending a few days in Omaha, leaves this morning to accept a position in the Western Union telegraph office in Lincoln. "Fitz" is an expert lightning-jerk and is a young man of great popularity among his acquaintances.

WHY IS IT SO?

A Plain Drunk's Puzzling Question. "Say young fellow," said a wiry-looking, bronzed man with a cardinal tint to his nose as he edged up to a Bee reporter in the police court yesterday. "Say now don't you think it a little tough that the judge here should enforce the Slocumb law agin us so strict when the saloon keepers here ain't got to stand the racket to New Year?"

"How is that?" was asked the victim. "Well you see ever since last June the judge has bin sockin' us the $10 and cost for a drunk as provided by Slocumb. Now, I s'pose that's all right enough you know, but if this is a free country why don't the saloon keeper get the same foddin? We have to stand the blunt while they get at least six month's warning. Now do you think that's fair to blokes like me?"

The reporter told him he didn't know, but he would ground and inquire and let him know to-morrow.

A Slim Report.

That Presented by the Last Grand Jury. The grand jury have finally made a report, and it ain't anything to brag of particularly. They find indictments against M. A. McNamara, Henry Hornberger and A. McGavvy, all of whom are members of the city council. Outside of this they present a short report. They say they have found twenty-four true bills and none that were not true bills. They claim to have had a number of matters of great public importance before them, but for some reason which they do not explain, failed to reach any of them. The principal other thing they did was to visit the jail. This institution they found to be a most exemplary prison, well adapted to the purposes for which it is intended and well kept in every respect. They received complaints from the prisoners on account of the quantity and quality of their food, but the prisoners being questioned individually gave conflicting statements, and the committee, consequently, say there is no ground for the charge. They furthermore found the jail perfectly clean and free from odors. The appearance of the county jail so tickled the grand jury that they got entirely out of their province to recommend Joe Miller, the jailer, to the kindly consideration of the incoming sheriff, who may be desired. The report closes with a compliment to District Attorney Burnham for his attentions.

A Female Thief.

Mary Stundon who is charged by Mrs. O'Brien with having stolen $40 from her is now lodged in jail, having been arrested in St. Joe. Virtue don't seem to be one of Mary's failings.

It's alleged that even during her brief residence in St. Joe she succeeded in beating a party out of $23. Yesterday a further charge was preferred against Mary to the effect that some time last April she had stolen a valuable neck-lace from Mrs. Lizzie Vickery. The grand jury will pass judgment upon Mary's shortcomings and probably send her before the court.
