Even the Omaha postmaster can leave his office for a couple of months to engage in cutting railroad ties on the public land and nobody has ever thought of interfering with his enterprise.

THE BEE calls the attention of the contractors who are now constructing the sewer through the alley between Farnham and Douglas street to the necessity of placing warning lanterns along the course of the excavation. It is not sufficient to place lights on street crossings alone. The alleys are public thoroughfares and as such are more used than is generally supposed for entrance and exit to their rear of business and dwelling. As public thoroughfares the city first and then the contractors are responsible for any damages which may result from their obstruction by excavation or otherwise. An ounce of preuention is worth a pound of cure.
