

PRIVATE PALACES.

Vanderbilt's Houses the Wonder of the World.

Most Costly Residence Ever Erected in an American City.

New York letter to Philadelphia Times.

The grand Vanderbilt palace on Fifth avenue approaches completion. For three years it has been in course of erection, and is now so nearly completed that its owner expects to occupy it before Christmas. In size, in elegance, in costliness there is no house like it.

AT THE DOOR. At the outset see this great paving stone, the largest ever brought to this city. Solomon may have quarried such stones, but until now, our quarries have not.

The two houses are connected by a solid and spacious portico, whose exterior is of brownstone, but whose interior is set with mosaics of curious marbles and with a finish of costly pavement of tile.

THE GREATEST. Mr. Vanderbilt has the advantage in his own house of occupying the space which he has in the other part used for two dwellings.

Palpitation of the Heart. J. M. Light, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "When I first commenced using your Blood Purifier I was troubled with fluttering and palpitation of the heart."

"Aquarelle" room, which is separated only by an archway. This is 15x32 feet and has a gallery. At the other end of the picture gallery and connected with it is the conservatory, which is the same size as the aquarelle room.

THE FAMILY ROOMS. Now we ascend the broad stairway and find the rooms in the second story devoted to the comfort of Mr. Vanderbilt and his family.

Now we ascend the broad stairway and find the rooms in the second story devoted to the comfort of Mr. Vanderbilt and his family. Here the walls around the gallery of the hall are frescoed with the same crimson and gold in brick pattern as below.

THE GREATEST. Mr. Vanderbilt has the advantage in his own house of occupying the space which he has in the other part used for two dwellings. Everything here is on a larger scale as well as of greater costliness.

Palpitation of the Heart. J. M. Light, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "When I first commenced using your Blood Purifier I was troubled with fluttering and palpitation of the heart."

Sylvester Doolittle.

A quiet, unostentatious man died at Oswego, N. Y., a few days ago who is worthy of being remembered among the beekeepers of our country.

He then turned his attention to the matter of through transportation from Troy or Albany, in which city he lived, being engaged in building canal-boats designed to carry freight to the Hudson river.

He then turned his attention to the matter of through transportation from Troy or Albany, in which city he lived, being engaged in building canal-boats designed to carry freight to the Hudson river.

There have been more brilliant careers than that of Mr. Doolittle, but few in any age or country have been productive of greater good.

Keeping Bees. There is room for bees on every farm and he who has neglected this important matter has usually suffered a loss that might easily have been prevented.

pair, cherry, etc. The small fruits could be cultivated with greater profit with bees as an adjunct, as they can always be seen busily at work on the blackberry, gooseberry, raspberry, and, to say more, there is hardly a vegetable that grows that does not furnish them with honey.

I would not advise any one to go blindly into bee culture, and yet it is not a difficult experiment. Any person with experience could furnish details that would be too lengthy to mention here in a few hours.

TRUE TO HER TRUST. Too much cannot be said of the ever faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a single duty in their behalf.
