The sisters leave on Wednesday next and before leaving will publish the list, and amounts received of subscribers. -Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. 1700-17

A ROARING FIRE.

The Barbed-Wire Factory Gone to Join Boyd's Packing House.

F. J. Vengle Saves the Boiler and is Badly Burned.

Two Cottages Also Burned, and the Loss Heavy.

The barbed wire factory, one of the most important manufacturing interests in Omaha, was last night totally destroyed by fire, together with a large amount of stock. Two cottages adjoining the works, owned and occupied by Phillip Roy and Cornelius Hogan, with their families, were badly damaged and their contents also partially ruined. THE WORKS, which were completed about four months ago, were located at the foot of Capitol avenue, built right into the hillside, in fact, and consisted of a large one-story frame building, a shed adjoining it used for storing plain wire, and another larger storage shed for barbed wire. Several car loads of new material had just been received and the works were running day and night to supply the demand. The two cottages were on the hill directly above the works, on the west side. Last evening the night force had gone in and there were in the building, Messrs. W. H. Whittier and F. J. Vengle with two boys. About half past 7 o'clock Mr. Vengle went into the shed adjoining the building. A new coal oil lantern which had just been purchased was sitting near him and he noticed it beginning to flicker. While he watched it, it suddenly exploded with a loud report and in an instant the shed was filled with flames. Mr. Vengle was badly burned on the left side of his face and ran from the building, ALL ON FIRE, the rest of the men following his example. Having got out he thought of the engine, which was running at the time, and fought his way back into the building, groped about until he found the throttle and shut her down, after which he turned on the "blow-off" pipe and thus did away with all danger of an explosion. The fire spread with wonderful rapidity, he thinks the hanging lamp must also have exploded, and soon the entire south end of the building was in flames. These rushed upward, blowing slightly toward the west and setting fire to the two cottages described. In the first cottage, that of Mr. Hogan, the three children had gone to bed, when Mr. Hogan, who was reading a paper, heard the explosion and ran out. He was met at the door by a burst of flame and had barely time to escape with his family, the younger members not even stopping for their clothes. The report was so loud that Mr. Hogan thought it must have been the boiler. Mr. Roy's house did not catch quite so quickly. They too heard THE EXPLOSION and running out saw the danger and hastened to evacuate the premises, getting all their goods out before the house was too far gone. They saved everything. Cries of fire of course soon roused the whole neighborhood, the news spread up the street, and an alarm was turned in from box 15, corner of Sixteenth street and Capitol avenue. The crowd on the streets ran in that direction, as did many who left the opera house, where the Don Thompson troupe were about beginning their performance. Soon the flames rolled so high that they were visible all over the city and then the rush was made in the right direction. The works were exactly in a line with the smoking works and the old cry was revived, "The smelting works are on fire." This took everybody, and the mistake could not be learned until the spot itself was reached. Here thousands were gathered when the Hooks arrived with the department on the scene. At this time the main building was NEARLY GONE, the cottages wrapped in flames and the main buildings huddled together on the hill in great danger. The hose was soon attached to the hydrants and the water turned on, but the surface covered by the fire and the headway it had obtained made it difficult to do more than prevent its spread. The cottages were first cared for, and these were saved, but in a badly wrecked condition. The water was then kept on the burning mass below until the last ember was drawn out. The fire lasted probably half an hour, and during that time raged fiercely, the flames leaping to an extraordinary height and carrying showers of burning wood all over the neighborhood. The firemen did good work in saving the surrounding buildings, as the works were hopelessly lost from the first. THE LOSS. The loss is quite heavy. The factory and one shed, with all their contents, were destroyed. This will probably foot up to $8,000 or $10,000. There is $4,500 insurance. The property belonged to a stock company, in which M. M. Marshall, J. S. Gibson, O. F. Ramsey and W. J. Broatch were the principal owners. The cottage occupied by Mr. Roy was worth about $200, and had lately been repaired and put in good shape. It will probably be repaired again for $100. Mr. Hogan's cottage was a little larger and had a new addition. His loss will be about $150. There was also a loss here on furniture, probably pretty heavy. There was no insurance. Mr. Vengle's injuries are very severe but not dangerous. His face is badly burned and also both hands, the latter being burned in the attempt to shut off the engine. He will not be able to work for some time. He was able to sit up, however, and told THE BEE reporter the facts as to the start of the fire, as given above.

The works will be rebuilt at once and temporary quarters secured in the interim. They had just been got in fine shape, water having been put in from the water works yesterday. If they had known that it would be put in through the hose so soon after, much trouble would have been saved. They are doing too big a business though to stop at this season of the year and may be expected to be on deck again immediately. It is well to add that a second alarm from box 12 was struck by Huberman's clock and aided in guiding persons to the right direction. It makes an excellent fire bell.

CHAMBER MUSIC.

The Opening Concert of the Philomathean Club on Tuesday Next.

Subscribers to the Series.

The management of the Philomathean club have decided to give the opening concert of their season on Tuesday evening next at Meyer's Music Hall on Farnham and Eleventh streets. Since its organization the club has been in active rehearsal. The program is as follows: 1. String Quartet in G Major, Mozart 2. Violin solo—Air on 4th string. 3. Trio in D Minor, Piano, Violin and Cello, Mendelssohn 4. Fantasia Concertante—Piano, Flute, Violin and Cello, Fancorian 5. Sonata—Piano, Violin and Cello, Grade 6. String Quartet in D Major, Haydn 7. Violin Solo—Scene de Ballet, Beriot 8. Symphony for Piano, Flute, Violin, Cello and Basses, Haydn-Hummel This programme, both in the selection and arrangement of its numbers, is one of the finest ever presented in Omaha and is likely to tax the resources of the club while exhibiting their musical proficiency. PEPPERS PLAY

In the Double Role of Editor and Magistrate.

A Woman's Money and Her Trouble.

In a little frame building on Harney street, opposite the jail, lives a German woman named Magdalena Groebel and her family, now consisting of several children. She came from America and Omaha only a short time ago with her husband, and is probably not yet two months out of Castle Garden. After the arrival in this city Mr. Groebel died and more recently one of the children followed its father, the funeral of the latter taking place yesterday. Mrs. Groebel brought over with her a considerable sum of money in German gold which, being exchanged into American money, amounted to $885. This was deposited in her own name in the First National bank of this city. A number of her neighbors learned of her financial condition and at once evinced a lively interest in her welfare. One of her neighbors, especially named Popper, seems to have been most persistent, and, according to her story, was determined to get some money, demanding at first a small sum and increasing the amount. It appears that he was in cahoots with several others, and that the game was to run up the bill for the funeral expenses of her husband until it would cover the amount of the certificate of deposit, and this Popper wanted turned over to him. Mrs. G. could not see why she should give him the money, but as he represented himself to be the editor of THE BEE and ex-police judge of the city, and she, like all foreigners, having a great reverence for the majesty of the law, she was in great trouble as to her course in the matter. At length one night she was startled at unusual noises about the house and sent her daughter, Homer Stull's office to consult him, but not finding him in his seat, she went by Col. Smythe to Judge Riley, who not understanding German secured the services of Mrs. Boehme and went to the cottage, heard the woman's story and took in charge the certificate of deposit, giving her a receipt therefor. Rev. D. Radnaky, pastor of the German Evangelical church on Dodge street, and Mrs. Boehme, a midwife and an honest and worthy woman, interested themselves in the case on behalf of the widow and yesterday brought the latter to Mr. Stull's office. The certificate was there procured from Mr. Riley and going to the bank the woman obtained what money was required for her immediate necessity and the rest remains to her credit in the bank, the certificate being entrusted to Mr. Stull's keeping. The whole thing would seem from the woman's story to have been a bold conspiracy to defraud her of her money, which failed fortunately before it was consummated.
