GAFFIELD'S TREATMENT.

EDITORIAL COMMENT OF A MEDICAL JOURNAL. WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The current number of Dr. Walsh's Retrospect of Medicine and Surgery, published this evening, will contain a long editorial comment on the case of the late President Garfield, or, as the journal terms it, "the result of our investigation in the case for the purpose of giving a truthful and fearless account." Dr. Walsh first quotes from the official account by Dr. D. W. Bliss, in which he relates how he probed the wound with his finger at the depot, and how he afterwards used a small flexible silver probe, and also how he expressed his opinion that stimulants should not be given to the wounded man at that time, because of his constantly suffering from nausea.

RAILROAD NEWS.

COLUMBUS, O., November 1.—The supreme court this morning granted leave to the Vanderbilt party in the railroad contest to file a petition in error to the order of the Franklin county court of October 22d, appointing a receiver, etc., and also granted a supersedeas, staying all proceedings in Judge Green's court upon filing a bond of $50,000. The hearing upon the quo warranto and upon the petition in error will not be had for a few weeks, as the issues have not been made up.

Jessie James Again Reported Killed—Other Criminal News.

National Associated Press. NEWARK, N. J., November 1.—By previous arrangement, at 2 o'clock this afternoon United States District Attorney Keasby appeared at the residence of Cashier Baldwin to receive from him a voluntary statement concerning the defalcation. Keasby reported the statement made as follows: He as long ago as 1873 began to make irregular loans to C. Nugent & Co. Such loans were made without security and without the sanction of the directors. Having once begun he felt himself in Nugent's power and continued to make further loans from year to year, some times as much as $50,000 a month. The amount finally swelled to such proportions that he could not recede unless he faced instant ruin and exposure. He allowed Nugent to draw large sums, and hoped to replace them in the regular course of business. Nugent assured him that the firm had a large amount of property in bonds and real estate and would make everything good. Nugent was aware that Baldwin was using the bank money irregularly, and said that whenever Baldwin required it he would turn over his property to secure the bank. The loans continually increased until they had reached over $2,000,000. Nugent gave the cashier drafts upon friends in New York from time to time, which were credited to him to meet drafts upon the bank, and the cashier used the money of the bank to take up the drafts in New York. Baldwin failed to make good on the drafts. The losses occasioned by these loans were entered in the accounts of the Mechanics National bank of Newark in such a manner that, while it appeared by the books in Newark that they had $2,000,000 to their credit in the New York bank, the Newark bank really owed the New York bank. The difference in these loans, Baldwin asserted, was made up in irregular loans to C. Nugent & Co. Baldwin denied that he had lost any money by speculation.

Baldwin was admitted to bail in the sum of $250,000, his bondsmen being W. H. Baldwin and Wm. Dodd. Nugent was arrested for aiding and abetting in the swindle.

NEWARK, N. J., November 1.—The excitement over the bank failures and of other arrests are rife, but so far as can be learned are without foundation. Although the names of corporations and individuals are freely mentioned, a careful examination leads to the belief that the heaviest losers by the Mechanics National Bank are the men most likely to bear their losses and any failures that may come will be borne by the smaller depositors whose business may not be able to continue, while their money, two-thirds of which will be a total loss, is locked under a receiver, most assets are mortgages and other real estate not readily convertible. The heaviest depositors are the City of Newark, the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance association, the brewery firms of Balbach, Kresgarn, Heisel and Balantyne, the Lister phosphorus manufacturing company, the state banking company, the Clark thread works and others of a class not likely greatly to feel their losses. One private individual is said to have deposited $50,000 a few days ago, the loss of which would ruin him. President Schickhaus and comptroller Gaetler, of the State Banking Company, without stating what their loss was, said that it would not embarrass them and that the amounts deposited in the last twenty-four hours had been larger than for the corresponding period last week. There had been no indications of a run and they feared none. J. B. Schenck, the bookkeeper for Lester Bros., said that it was a mistake to suppose that they would be embarrassed or even be considerable losers. They had taken their accounts from the Mechanics bank three months ago and only kept a moderate balance there, the bulk of their money having been placed elsewhere, although the change in accounts had been for purely business reasons, and not because they believed the bank to be un-sound. They had paid their hands a month's salary last night without embarrassment, and did not think the amount of their deposit was greater than the small amount of their paper held by the bank. The city is temporarily bankrupt, so far as ready money is concerned, a statement which, repeated from month to month, causes a smile. The bank held the accounts of the aqueduct board and of the city treasurer. The two latter had obligations which accrued to-day, and to meet which they had to have the money at once. They instantly transferred their accounts yesterday to the National State bank, which advanced $50,000 and another $50,000 to-day.

He allowed Nugent to draw large sums, and hoped to replace them in the regular course of business. Nugent assured him that the firm had a large amount of property in bonds and real estate and would make everything good. Nugent was aware that Baldwin was using the bank money irregularly, and said that whenever Baldwin required it he would turn over his property to secure the bank. The loans continually increased until they had reached over $2,000,000. Nugent gave the cashier drafts upon friends in New York from time to time, which were credited to him to meet drafts upon the bank, and the cashier used the money of the bank to take up the drafts in New York. Baldwin failed to make good on the drafts. The losses occasioned by these loans were entered in the accounts of the Mechanics National bank of Newark in such a manner that, while it appeared by the books in Newark that they had $2,000,000 to their credit in the New York bank, the Newark bank really owed the New York bank. The difference in these loans, Baldwin asserted, was made up in irregular loans to C. Nugent & Co. Baldwin denied that he had lost any money by speculation.

Baldwin was admitted to bail in the sum of $250,000, his bondsmen being W. H. Baldwin and Wm. Dodd. Nugent was arrested for aiding and abetting in the swindle.

NEWARK, N. J., November 1.—The excitement over the bank failures and of other arrests are rife, but so far as can be learned are without foundation. Although the names of corporations and individuals are freely mentioned, a careful examination leads to the belief that the heaviest losers by the Mechanics National Bank are the men most likely to bear their losses and any failures that may come will be borne by the smaller depositors whose business may not be able to continue, while their money, two-thirds of which will be a total loss, is locked under a receiver, most assets are mortgages and other real estate not readily convertible. The heaviest depositors are the City of Newark, the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance association, the brewery firms of Balbach, Kresgarn, Heisel and Balantyne, the Lister phosphorus manufacturing company, the state banking company, the Clark thread works and others of a class not likely greatly to feel their losses. One private individual is said to have deposited $50,000 a few days ago, the loss of which would ruin him. President Schickhaus and comptroller Gaetler, of the State Banking Company, without stating what their loss was, said that it would not embarrass them and that the amounts deposited in the last twenty-four hours had been larger than for the corresponding period last week. There had been no indications of a run and they feared none. J. B. Schenck, the bookkeeper for Lester Bros., said that it was a mistake to suppose that they would be embarrassed or even be considerable losers. They had taken their accounts from the Mechanics bank three months ago and only kept a moderate balance there, the bulk of their money having been placed elsewhere, although the change in accounts had been for purely business reasons, and not because they believed the bank to be un-sound. They had paid their hands a month's salary last night without embarrassment, and did not think the amount of their deposit was greater than the small amount of their paper held by the bank. The city is temporarily bankrupt, so far as ready money is concerned, a statement which, repeated from month to month, causes a smile. The bank held the accounts of the aqueduct board and of the city treasurer. The two latter had obligations which accrued to-day, and to meet which they had to have the money at once. They instantly transferred their accounts yesterday to the National State bank, which advanced $50,000 and another $50,000 to-day.

President Sherman, of the Mechanics National bank of this city, said: "We are secured by collateral for the overdrafts of $267,000 of the Mechanics National bank of Newark. I don't believe Baldwin's story that he sunk $2,500,000 in the Nugent firm." "No, a bit of it," he added emphatically, "but the more I look into the affair, the more I am convinced that they gambled together."

Mr. Cox, cashier of the Mechanics National Bank, of this city, who was sent to Newark yesterday to examine into the wrecked concern coincided with Mr. Sherman in the view. He claimed to give a detailed story of the result of his discoveries, but acknowledged that about all that had been said about the bank was true. It was incomprehensible to him that such a vast sum could be taken from the Mechanics Bank without an earlier discovery. So far as he could learn there were but $150,000 cash in the bank yesterday. What other particulars he ascertained were given to the officers of his own bank.
