FARM AND GARDEN.

Where to Stack the Hay.

Minnesota Tribune. We have frequently urged the farmers to only stack their hay at the barns and stables, where they would feed it out to the stock in the winter, thus saving handling it a second time when wanted for use, and placing it beyond the reach of the possibility of high water and prairie fires, and the deep snows of winter. Hay can never be moved so cheaply as when it is made. Had our advice been taken, we would not hear of the complaints now of so much hay being under water. It is true that farmers are very busy during the hay-making season, but they will find, in the long run, that it will pay them to stack it where it is wanted to be fed out. There was a great deal of suffering last winter, in many instances, to the stock of farmers in this state, in consequence of hay-stocks being walled in by snow-drifts.

House Young Stock.

Now is the time to prepare winter quarters for stock, by putting up frames for stables and sheds so that when threshing grain the straw can be stacked on and around the frames. The value of straw seems to have been overlooked by a great many of our Nebraska farmers in past seasons, but we think the past winter should serve as a warning to save every bit of straw. Cattle should have a good warm place where they can stay during cold storms in winter, and at the same time have plenty to eat. This can be done cheaply by stacking straw on top of and around sheds made of poles. A better plan, however, is to cover sheds with coarse grass, and stack the straw around the sides. The hay makes a better cover and will last a number of seasons by putting on a light layer of new each year.

The Family Cow.

Every farmer should prepare, as the winter approaches, to keep one or more cows, (according to the number of his family), to furnish milk for the members, especially for children. The cow, or cows, should not only be well fed, but well and comfortably housed, and this includes comfort for the milk, for not one milker in ten can, or will milk a cow properly, unless both are comfortable. To milk properly is next to impossible if the hands of the milker are cold and stiff, or the effects of driving, icy winds, or cold, dripping, drizzly rains. Milk is, or ought to be, half the food of the family, and no judicious farmer will permit his table to be without it, especially in winter.

Improved Cattle Cars.

The improvements in the new cattle cars are of the revolving standard; that the car can be loaded with ordinary freight on its return trip. The stall divisions are the same as in the old car with the exception that instead of being fixed they are made to revolve at their lower end, so that in order to load ordinary freight they are just turned against the wall of the car, and the car is converted into an ordinary freight car. 2d. An arrangement by which the car can be converted into a box car.

If the freight to be returned is of such character as to require a box car, in order to be kept dry, the slides are let down and the car converted at once into a perfectly closed box car, the change not taking more than five minutes.

3. A self-locking key. This need only be thrown over the neck of the cattle without the attendant coming in close contact with them. Locks in self and hand on the animal fast. Till now the animals had to be chained.

Notes.

It is calculated that 7,000,000 hogs were raised in the west for market last year. They consumed not less than 125,000,000 bushels of corn.

Bluegrass improves on the same ground without disturbance for one hundred years.

When people see a horse's head drawn up by the bearing rein, and see him stepping short and champing his bit, tossing his head and rattling the harness, they assume that he is acting in the pride of his strength and fullness of spirit, whereas the animal is really suffering agonies of pain, and is trying to gain by these movements momentary relief.

The farmer who would succeed at stock-keeping or stock feeding, must study the subject and not expect success by routine or antiquated methods. He must be systematic and vigilant, and never give over to the idea that he had learned all about it.

The milk of a farrow cow, will retard the churning of the fresh cow's milk, and it is better to churn separately.

While a number of shearers were shearing a flock of sheep numbering nearly 100,000 in La Salle county, Mexico, a singular mortality occurred among the men. Seventeen of the wool clipper and shearers died.

The cause of death is said to have resulted from eating too much mutton, as the men had not been used to it.

Bran is a very valuable food in a stable for reducing the inflammatory effect of oats and beans. Made into mash it has a cooling and laxative effect, but used in excess, especially in a dry state, it is apt to form stony concretions in the bowels of the horse.

Stones produced from the excessive use of bran have been taken out of horses after death weighing many pounds. When sawed through they appeared to be composed of a hard, crystalline mass, deposited in regular rings, resembling in appearance the concentric yearly rings of wood; they proved to be composed of phosphate of magnesia and ammonia. Millers' horses are particularly subjected to this malady. The best way to guard against it is to add half a pint to a quart of linseed, boiled until quite soft, to the mash of the horse.
