Correspondence of the Bes. ashland, November 4. - This apo is where three valleys meet and as the natural tendency of trade and traffic is to follow the course of streams, the leading wagon and railroads of this center at Ashiand. Salt and Wahoo creeks and the Platte river mingle their waters here. The first is a silvery stream well stocked with fish and abounding in mill privileges, one of which is utilized by the Ashland flouring mills. The Wahoo flows through a lonely valley where agriculture finds her most successful followers and where the soil is full of untold wealth-the raw material for the crops of a thousand years. A HUNTER'S PARADISE.

The Platte, with its teeming wealth of ducks, goese and sandhill cranes, is near by, and an immense pond or shellow lake only a mile from town, furnishes the finest spot for profitable shooting that Nebraska can furnish.

The register of the Exchange hotel gives information on this score. Sam Correspondent of THE BER. Chapman and a Plattsmouth squad a few days ago got away with a hundred or two of ducks. Then a Lincoln line of skirmishers opened fire and beat the Plattsmouthers; and while I was in town a detail from Villisca, Iowa, numbering half a score, fired by file until they had all the game they wanted. Each party records against their names the amount of game captured, and it is now time for the valuant nimrods of Omaha to prove their skill.

I led off to-day by using F. A. Darries' elegant breech-loader on a fifteen minute raid along Salt Creek within the city limits, and during that fifteen minutes, while I was waiting for a delayed train, I took two beautiful teal, and could have had more of the same kind if the locomotive had not whistled. The "New Mastodon Minstrels," Haverly's, appear at the opera house on Thursday evening next, one night only. This is the company which played the base ball game in Omahs on the 11st of May last. They are in better shape than ever, and will give a fine entertainment here. The Chicago Times says: "The 'New Haverly Mastodon Minstrels' commenced their engagement on last evening under the most flattering auspices, as the section, do now and for all time, will house could not have afforded room for another listener. Haverly must have smiled when he read the telegram giving the receipts of the house, for they were so large as to represent in dollars nearly every seat in it. The original plan of the mastodon minstrels has been well carried out in the formation of the present troupe, which, to judge from the strength and general ability of the company, is far superior to the old mastodons. The theatre was crammed full of people, who seemed thoroughly to enjoy the show, as the applause was almost con-

A Trip Over the New Line to Denver and Return.

Splendid Road Bed, Smooth Tracks and Fast Time.

Some Interesting Notes Along the Route.

The first trip over the new through ine to Denver was marked with agreat many interesting inc dents. The run to North Platte was made without acsident and breakfast was obtained at this station which is the terminus of the Omaha passenger division. The eatng house at North Platte has passed into new hands, a man named Cash being the present proprietor. He is materially repairing the hotel and constructing a needed addition to it. At this point 291 miles had been covered by the iron steed drawing the handome train and a change of engines was made. Conductors also changed here. The arrival of the train attracted a large crowd and was the cause of much enthusiasm.

After thirty minutes halt the line of glistening coaches again glided away from the depot and the run was speedily made to Julesburg, where the main line was left. The event of striking off on to the new road for the first time was fully appreciated by the passengers, and was the occasion of hearty congratulations. The new track is splendidly ballasted and accurately laid, and the train rolled smoothly over it without a jolt or jar. It is unquestionably the finest line of track anywhere in the western country, building that was in this town. It the trains can attain. There are no through which the train was speeding lies on both sides of the South Platte river as level as a floor.
