

THE L-P OF LUXURY.

The Mormon Metropolis Gorged With the Good Things of Life.

Unprecedented Prosperity and Business Increase.

Correspondence of The Bee.

SALT LAKE CITY, November 10.—Last month was one of unprecedented prosperity to Utah. The volume of business done by one leading firm exceeded that of the corresponding month in 1880 by nearly fifty per cent. and it is possible that other firms show a yet greater ratio of increase.

It is anticipated that the Denver & Rio Grande road will be opened to Salt Lake City by January next. The farmers through whose lands the road runs have largely taken the grading contracts, and the work is being vigorously pushed.

The late census of Utah shows her population occupies the farming districts. She has but four towns with a population of over 3,000. They are Salt Lake, 20,000; Ogden, 6,000; Provo and Logan, 4,000 each.

The Mormon church is building a magnificent temple, which will be second only to the one in this city. It is of a beautiful French white or light-cream color and is built on a projecting spur of the mountains, the top of which has been leveled with immense labor to form a suitable site for this edifice.

We are having an unfortunate epidemic of accidents. Our local papers are full of accidental shootings, injuries by machinery, runaways, etc., many of which have proved fatal.

Now comes information that a conspiracy has recently been unearthed whereby certain coal dealers in St. Louis and the agents of a number of railroads running through the coal fields of Illinois, had combined to limit the supply of coal going to St. Louis, thereby reaping a speculative profit on prices.

The Lincoln Journal buckles on its armor and goes forth to do battle for the cause of right. Hear it. "The penalty for a system of robbery like this should be the severest known to the criminal code, short of capital punishment. The man who steals a horse or who robs a bank either as burglar or a cashier, is a sinner compared to the infernal rascal having charge of the car supply of a railroad who conspires with coal men, grain men, or any other commercial interest to run up the price of any necessary article, by creating an artificial and unnecessary scarcity, by pretending not to have, or absolutely refusing means for its transportation.

The Journal does not hesitate to say that any railroad whose directors are found guilty of such a crime should be promptly confiscated and put into the hands of a receiver, in addition to the personal punishment that a public trial should undergo in the penitentiary.

These statements have about the right ring to them, and coming from the unapproachable altitude occupied by a State Journalist, gives them a force and dignity heretofore considered unattainable. The Omaha Bee has said the same thing in substance many times, but the Journal and other monthly papers saw nothing in the case then but "the senseless vapors of a political demagogue." The only difference is that the Bee applied the same terms to our own Nebraska railroads, at a time when one of them, at least, was not obliged to form a conspiracy with outside parties, but owing the coal fields themselves, sought to and did build up an exclusive trade of their own in that line, refusing to others the privilege of shipping coal to towns in the western part of the state, and thereby oppressing and robbing the people—the very thing against which, in Illinois, the Journal launches its thunderbolt. St. Louis is so situated that she can hardly be deprived of competition, while the towns and cities along the U. P. railroad in this state were absolutely at the mercy of its managers. And when that company oppressed the people along its line in the matter of coal, and even stared them in the face with a coal famine at the most inclement season of the year, we somehow fail to remember that the Journal opened its humanity, during month in defense of the rights of the oppressed. Perhaps the Journal will design to come down to worldly

John H. Peters is a practicing attorney at Delhi. His eldest son died at Union, Hardin county, this week. M. W. Robinson is one of the most estimable farmers of Polk county, and is occasionally in Des Moines on business. Lewis Todhunter is a prominent lawyer at Indianola, and a leader in state temperance matters.

John Edwards (since Colonel) holds a government clerkship in Washington. James F. Wilson, candidate for United States Senator, and according to The Keokuk Gate City, an ornithological student, resides at Fairfield.

Harvey J. Skiff, after a long official career, resides quietly on a farm near Newton.

John A. Parvin resides, where he did in 1857, at Muscatine. He has been president of the Governing Board of the Reform School ever since its organization in 1858.

Wm. Penn Clark has been in Washington many years, part of the time in official position and the rest of the time practicing law.

Edward Johnstone is living at Keokuk, where he has been a successful banker for many years.

Wm. Patterson still lives at Keokuk.

Rafus L. B. Clarke, of Henry, is an examiner-in-chief at the patent office.

Daniel H. Solomon, of Mills, is an influential lawyer of that county.

George W. Ellis is living, at a good age, in honorable retirement at Davenport. But for an incurable infirmity of deafness, this gentleman's great ability would undoubtedly have given him prominent position in the party of freedom, of which he was one of the founders.

Aylett R. Cotton, is practicing law at Lyons, after having represented his county in the general assembly for three years, in the last of which he was speaker, and his district in congress four years.

James C. Traver still lives at Vinton, and is one of the leading financiers of central Iowa.

Thomas Seely, of Guthrie, still has his home in that county, which he represented in the legislature of 1878.

John T. Clarke, of Allamakee, since district attorney of the 10th district, is living at Desorah or Waukon.

William A. Warren is an insurance agent at Bellevue. He has been in feeble health for a year or two past, but is lately feeling better. Up to three years ago Mr. Warren had attended every republican state convention since Iowa was admitted into the Union.

Francis Sprague, who was president of the convention, is in comfortable circumstances and now resides on a farm near Columbus City. He has quit the practice of law.

Timothy Day is a fine stock breeder and resides not far from Winchester, Van Buren county.

Amos Harris, formerly of Centerville, is now practicing law with signal success at Wichita, Kansas.

D. P. Palmer is living in comfort on a farm near Bloomfield, Davis county.

The remaining members, and who could not be located with certainty yesterday, were David Bunker, H. W. Gray, H. D. Gibson, A. H. Marvin, J. H. Emerson, Squire Ayers, Jere. Hollingsworth, Wm. Patterson, D. W. Price and Alpheus Scott. The Register will be glad to hear regarding these gentlemen, and hopes they are all alive, and in comfortable circumstances.

The above names were obtained yesterday by a conversation among four or five gentlemen more or less connected with Iowa matters, and the list of those still alive is undoubtedly larger by five or six more. Those known to be dead are Judge J. C. Hall, of Des Moines county; George Gilaspay, of Wapello; James A. Young, of Mahaska, and Robert Gower, of Cedar.

That Coal Monopoly. Blair Pitt.

Now comes information that a conspiracy has recently been unearthed whereby certain coal dealers in St. Louis and the agents of a number of railroads running through the coal fields of Illinois, had combined to limit the supply of coal going to St. Louis, thereby reaping a speculative profit on prices. In view of these facts the Lincoln Journal buckles on its armor and goes forth to do battle for the cause of right. Hear it.

"The penalty for a system of robbery like this should be the severest known to the criminal code, short of capital punishment. The man who steals a horse or who robs a bank either as burglar or a cashier, is a sinner compared to the infernal rascal having charge of the car supply of a railroad who conspires with coal men, grain men, or any other commercial interest to run up the price of any necessary article, by creating an artificial and unnecessary scarcity, by pretending not to have, or absolutely refusing means for its transportation.

Perhaps the Journal will design to come down to worldly thoughts long enough to refresh our memory upon this point, and possibly it will explain why this sort of crime is so much more worthy of note and its perpetrators so much greater villains in Illinois than when they happen to be the management of the U. P. road, or some other of the Journal's monopoly pets in Nebraska.

A THRIVING PAIR.

The People and Prospects of Milton and Waverly.

A Toothless Appeal for Malleable Beefsteak.

Correspondence of The Bee.

Waverly, Neb., November 12.—

Rather small, but extremely vigorous, is this town, the first of importance east of Lincoln. It is erecting a church, a good school building and an elevator. A store building and several dwellings are also nearing completion.

THE GRAIN TRADE.

Of Waverly is the main business of the town. Every one buys grain and every one seems to have plenty of grain to buy. The stores are not large or their stocks extensive; in fact the handling of dry goods and groceries seems to be a very secondary consideration. When one Waverly man meets another the question is: "How many loads of wheat did you get to-day?"

I guess the only man in town who don't have the grain trade as the main business of his life is Hon. P. H. Walker, general merchant. I put in the honorable, not because he is now a member of any legislative body, but because he will be by the time this is in print for he is on the republican ticket to fill a vacancy in the upper house.

WANTS.

Milford badly needs a barber, there is not a shaver in town.

A hotel, a good one, is also needed here. It would pay well and the accommodating landlord of the Waverly House, Mr. Jas. W. Crabtree, would keep such a hotel in good shape, but at present I don't wonder at what a traveling man said as I was leaving the cars. "What, are you going to stop all night at Waverly?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Well I'll pray for you and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

I was on the Lincoln express and it was 11 o'clock at night. However I got along all right by waking up the landlord and taking choice between two moderately clean looking bed fellows. The breakfast was served after the grocerian style. It was in grease anyhow. The celluloid beefsteak was not suited to irregular teeth, but I ate it all and slept freely.

They were the only digestible things on the table. Thank God they can't fry prunes. Now the landlord is all right; he is polite, obliging and as he takes the Bee, he is of course intelligent, but he needs a new hotel and a new cook. When a newspaper correspondent criticizes a hotel it is customary for the hotel keeper to write to the opposition papers a spicy letter setting forth the intemperance habits of the correspondent and intimating that he forgets to take off his boots before going to bed, also that he never settles his bill, explains that his mother was of the canine family and that the paper he represents is made out of night soil and dynamite. However, in behalf of the long suffering, much abused and homeless class of wanderers known as traveling men, I want to fire this one shot even if I do receive a paper fusillade for the next year.

Robbed of His Gold.

National Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., November 15.—

Jesse Baldwin, of Boardman township, five miles south of his city, the "crank" who created the sensation by constantly appearing at the treasury department in Washington and demanding gold for $70,000 of bonds, was robbed this morning at 3 o'clock of between $30,000 and $40,000 in gold. He kept his money in an old fashioned safe under the stairs in the hall way of his residence. The party, or burglars were five in number. Four of them gained admittance to the house. The Baldwin's slept up stairs and the first intimation they had of the burglary was the furious noise made by the blowing open of the safe with powder. George Lewis, Baldwin's son-in-law, fired three shots at the robbers as they left the house with the bags of gold. The burglars returned the volley. No one on either side was injured. The robbers had previously taken two of Baldwin's horses and the best carriage from his stable and had them standing near the residence. They jumped into the buggy and escaped, going south. Baldwin has offered a reward of $1,000 for its recovery. It is just learned that the carriage broke down about four miles south of Baldwin's house.

Burdock Blood Bitters advertisement with logo.

Mrs. J. G. Robertson, Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "I was suffering from general debility, want of appetite, nervous prostration, etc., so that I was a burden after using Burdock Blood Bitters I felt better in four days. I cannot praise your Bitters too much."

R. Gibbs, of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Your Burdock Blood Bitters, for chronic diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys, have been signally marked with success. I have used them myself with best results, for torpidity of the liver, and in case of a friend of mine suffering from dropsy, the effect was marvelous."

Bruce Turner, Rochester, N. Y., writes: "I have been subject to serious disease of the kidneys and unable to attend to business. Burdock Blood Bitters relieved me before half a bottle was used. I feel confident that they will entirely cure me."

E. A. Smith, of Elmira, N. Y., writes: "I suffer with a dull pain through my left leg and shoulder. Lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difficulty keep up all day. Took your Burdock Blood Bitters as directed, and have felt no pain since first week after using them."

Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I had an attack of bilious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using two bottles of your Burdock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 67 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work."

C. Black, of Toronto, Ont., writes: "For several years I have suffered from recurring bilious headaches, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Bitters I am entirely relieved."

Mrs. Im Mulholland, Albany, N. Y., writes: "For several years I have suffered from recurring bilious headaches, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Bitters I am entirely relieved."

Mrs. Wallace, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for nervous and bilious headaches, and can recommend it to anyone requiring a cure for biliousness."
