Letting a Dog Loose.

Some days since a saloon-keeper on Gratiot avenue paid certain parties in Chicago $25 for a stuffed lion to add to the attractions of his saloon, and the other morning as the place was being scrubbed out the lion was placed at the front door to keep him out of the way. Half a block down the street a farmer was having his wagon repaired, and a big bulldog was chained to the hind axle tree. He growled unceasingly the minute the lion was rolled out, and it needed only a few encouraging words from the boys to render him half frantic. He growled and plunged and tore around and attracted quite a crowd, among which was a party who remarked: "That's a pretty brave dog of yours, stranger."

"Brave! I'd like to see the man or beast he wouldn't tackle!" replied the owner of that canine. "Never say a dog yet 'd stand before a lion."

"Well, here's one who'd stand before two lions!" See how anxious he is to get there!

"Yes, but he puts that on because he's chained. If he was loose you couldn't get him within a rod of that specimen."

"Well, I dunno. I'm opposed to betting, card-playing, dancing and all that, but seeing you are rather easy about this, I've got half a dollar here which says that you can't get that dog to go within six feet of that lion."

"Put up the money—put up the money!" shouted the farmer as he went down into his own pockets after the coin.

The money was put up, the crowd fell back and the farmer's face wore a smile of triumph as he still further excited the dog and then slipped his collar. With a yell of rage the lion made a bee-line for the king of beasts, and in a moment there was reason for a terrific yell of applause. Dog and lion fled the air, so to say, the lion was rolled over and over, grabbed by the throat and shaken around, drawn across the street and back by the ear, and when the dog finally let up on the corpse the battle ground was covered with hair and hay and saw-dust and glass-eyes. At that moment the saloon-keeper called out a policeman came up, and for five minutes the air was rent with shouts and exclamations and expostulations.

"It was all in fun," explained the farmer.

"Dot lions cost me $25 in Lincoln County, I put up this job!" demanded the officer as he glared around on the crowd.

By and by a deep silence fell upon the crowd, and in a voice which had only kindness in it the owner of the lion said he must have his $25 or he would start for the police court. The policeman said it was certainly a case for the courts, and the crowd said the farmer might have known what would happen. He protested, but finally gave over a $10 bill and when he had passed the balance he turned only one sentence to utter. That was:

"Now, then, I'll give any of you five acres of land to put me face to face with the outlaw who put up this job on a hard-working, innocent man!"

Unrivaled.

As being a certain cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, impurity of blood, torpid liver, disordered kidneys, etc., and as a medicine for eradicating every species of humor, from an ordinary pimples to the worst ulcer, DuRoi's Bile Beans stand unrivaled. Price $1, trial size 10c. Dec-5-cw

Where the Train Was.

There were a dozen of us waiting at the station near Strasburg, Va., for the noon train. Everyone had cut his dinner short to catch the train, but the hour arrived—fifty—twenty minutes passed, and then everybody wondered what had happened. The ticket agent was also puzzled.

The ticket agent was also puzzled. He was a young fellow of about 20, ill-grained and ferocious, but impatience overcame the fear of him, and a woman stepped to the window and asked: "Is the train late?"

"In!" he growled in reply.

"How late is it?"

"In!"

That finished her, and she resumed her seat. Five minutes more elapsed away, and a very solemn-looking man, carrying a very solemn-looking carpet-bag, advanced from his corner and began:

"Train is late, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"How late is it?"

"In."

"What's the cause of it?"

No answer. After waiting ten seconds he walked out doors, turned to the right and suddenly entered the ticket office through the freight house. Walking straight up to the agent he reached over the table and seized him, pulled him across like a streak of lightning, and as he gave him a shake and jammed him into a corner he called out:

"What's that train?"

The young man was looking over his finger nails, and he did not raise his head.

"What's—that train?" repeated the whittler in a louder voice.

The agent looked up for a second, but let his eyes fall without answer.

"What's—that train?" shouted the passenger as he brought his fist down on the shelf.

No answer. After waiting ten seconds he walked out doors, turned to the right and suddenly entered the ticket office through the freight house. Walking straight up to the agent he reached over the table and seized him, pulled him across like a streak of lightning, and as he gave him a shake and jammed him into a corner he called out:

"What's that train?"

"When was it?"

"In about 't-wenty minutes'!"

"What made 'er late?"

"The engine broke down at Strasburg."

"Then why is Crockett's name didn't you say in the first place? You may take a second look at me! I ain't purty nor genteel nor saintly, but I'll tell you the whole story!"
