"OLD IRONSIDES" RETIRED.

The Frigate's Tattered Ensign Down at Last.

The Story of the Most Famous of Our Old War Ships.

The Gallant Fight With the Guerriere -- Popular Sentiment for the Old Frigate.

New York Times, Dec. 16, The famous old frigate Constitution was formally put out of commission at the Brooklyn Navy-yard yesterday, when her ensign was hauled down in the presence of all the officers of the She now takes her place in what is called "Rotten Row" with the pressed it, "did an English frigate ing the second war with England has what is called "Rotten Row" with the Susquehanna and Ticonderoga, and unless broken up and sold for relies, will be allowed to fall gradually to pieces. The history of the old frigate may be appropriately recalled now that may be appropriately recalled now that the final scene in her career has been witnessed. The Constitution, or "Old Ironsides," as she was familiarly called, was one of six frigates the keels of which were laid in 1794. She was the can loss in the engagement, which break up her battle beaten hull on the third vessel built for the United States Navy after the adoption of the Constitution, the United States being the first and the Constellation the second. The Constitution was built at Hart's ship-yard in Boston, which was situated where Constitution wharf now is, at a cost of $802,718. She was made very strong, her frame being of live oak, and her planks bent on without steam, as it was believed that the steaming process weakened and softened the wood. Her tonnage was 1,335. She was launched on the 21st of October, 1897, in the presence of a great gathering of people. It was because she was so staunch a ship that the name of "Ironsides" was given her, and her subsequent service in the war of 1812 fully entitled her to the name. She was the most famous ship in the navy, and has been made the theme of story and of song. She started on her first cruise in July, 1798, under command of Capt. James long years. Nicholson, but she did not come in active service until 1804, when she was the flag-ship of Commodore Preble command of "Old Ironsides" and Capt. in the war between this country and William Bainbridge was appointed his the Barbary powers. One of the most remarkable naval retreats and pursuits ever recorded now began. The sea was in almost a dead calm, and sails were of little use. The boats were lowered and attached to the ship by long lines, and the sailors puiled with a will to tow the frigate out of the enemy's reach. The British followed the exand pursuit had become most exciting when night settled down over the waters. All night long the race continued. On the second day 11 sails were in sight, but a gentle breeze was vessels of the British navy, but the blowing and the Constitution was engagement left her a complete wreck, gaining slowly on her pursuers. The Constitution, after her escape, ran not far from the shore to the Bay of Fundy without meeting a single vessel. Capt. Hull then turned her prow to the southward, and on the 19th of August a man-of-war was discovered from the masthead, which a terward proved to be the Guerriere, from which "Old Ironsides" had so narrowly esonce gave chase to the stranger, and willing to fight, and the commander, and gave another broadside on the other tack, but without effect, as the missiles all fell short. The Constitution pressed all sail to get alongside the foe and engage in a fair yard-arm and yarn-arm light. At a little after 6 in the evening the bows of the American ship began to double the quarter of the English. "Now, boys, pour it into them!" shouted Capt. The I ghtning and the gale! Since the war of 1812 the Constitution had been used mostly as a training or school ship in special service. She was stationed at Annapolis the most of the time until the breaking out of the civil war, and then was removed to Newport and continued in the same service. In 1875 she was placed on 🖏 the stocks at the League island navyyard and subjected to repairs under the supervision of Naval Constructor Hart, a grandson of the man who built her in Boston 84 years ago. In 1878 she was detailed to take the goods of American exhibitors to the Paris exposition, and upon her return was again placed in service as a school ship. In the summer of 1880 she was anchored at the Brooklyn that she was lost. The report created a great deal of excitement, which was allayed by the announcement of April 20, of her safety. As an evidence of the sentiment felt for every plank of "Old Ironsides," an anecdote of the Administration of President Jackson may be given. The original figure head of the Constitution was a bust of Hercules. This was shot away in the war in the Mediterranean and its place supplied by a carved billet-head. In 1834, while the frigate was lying at the Charlestown Navy-yard, Commo dore Elliott had this billet-head re moved, and substituted for it a bust of Gen. Jackson. This substitution was denounced by the opposition as a partisan outrage. Elliott was assailed in newspapers, pamphlets, and speeches, and threatened in anonymous let-ters with violence if he did not remove the effigy. He was deaf to all complaints, and finally, one stormy night in July, 1834, a daring young man from this city went out to the ship in a skiff, sawed off the head of ship in a skiff, sawed off the head of the image, and carried it to Boston.
