THE EVIDENCE ALL IN

And an Adjournment Taken to Saturday.

To Allow the Counsel of Both Sides Time to Prepare Their Arguments.

Yesterday's Session Devoted Principally to a Continuous Wrangle.

While Giteau Amuses Himself by Flirting With the Ladies.

National Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, January 4.—Mrs. Scoville, who has been absent from court for a week, has resumed her place at the counsel's table.

As soon as the court opened Giteau said: "This would be a good time to make a speech, but I promised Marshal Henry to keep quiet, and I will try to do it."

Scoville read an affidavit to the effect that he had learned of a witness, who could testify as to the prisoner's insanity at the time of the shooting.

Mr. Reed admitted that this motion to add additional testimony rests entirely with the discretion of the court, but urged it should be allowed in the interest of justice.

He extolled Mr. Scoville's actions in the case, and begged in the name of justice and humanity, that the court grant one more day to the defense to get additional evidence of what he termed the poor creature's insanity.

Mr. Davidge contended that the motion was simply a reopening of the case and protested that the prolongation of the trial was simply a delay of justice.

He said there was no good reason for reopening the case by any mere testimony on the theory of Giteau's insanity. The case had been dragged out by the examinations of the prosecution experts.

To reopen it now would be scandalous. Scoville alluded to the difficulty of securing witnesses for the defense and said Giteau ought not to be denied a fair trial, as the prosecution had had the use of the treasury at its back.

Corkhill said every opportunity had been afforded the defense. Giteau, during all arguments, stood toying with his eye-glasses and flirted with the ladies.

Col. Corkhill said never before in this country had any defense been allowed such latitude.

Giteau broke out at that there was no necessity of showing the state of his mind on July 3d, and when the guards attempted to keep him quiet, he told them he was his own counsel and would slap their mouths if they did not keep quiet themselves.

The court rendered a long decision to the effect that while he appreciated the difficulties the defense had to labor under, he did not see any necessity of allowing any testimony in the line indicated. The evidence proposed was vague and of uncertain character and did not strike the court as admissible.

Giteau said that one of the witnesses proposed was one of the officers who took him to jail after the shooting and knew the state of his mind. He protested against the attempts of the guards to keep him quiet, and said if he had plenty of money he could get scores of people to swear he was crazy as a "fool" on July 3d.

Giteau testified to the condition of the prisoner at the time of the shooting.

Corkhill protested, but the court allowed the witness to answer certain questions. When Scoville asked him if the person described in the hypothetical question of the prosecution might not be sane, Davidge objected to it.

The counsel got into a wrangle and Giteau got noisy; when the guard attempted to quiet him, he said: "You can't keep me quiet. How are you to do it? I am tired of this business. Let us end it."

Scoville then wanted Drs. Nichols and Godding, who were acquainted with Giteau's condition at the time of the murder, called.

Davidge objected. "We want," he said impressively, "to close this case if it can be done."

"Yes," said Giteau, "you are in great haste to close it now, but I want a fair show and don't care a snap for the past testimony, but I want square rebutting testimony admitted."

James Brooks, chief of the secret service of the treasury department, was then placed on the stand. He detailed several conversations he had had with Giteau soon after the shooting.

Scoville cried aloud at the narrative and Giteau said it was correct, and when the witness told Giteau of Garfield's peculiar condition Giteau said: "Poor fellow! I wish I had given him the third bullet and put him out of his misery."

This made Giteau restless and he had several altercations with his guards. He cried out: "You sit down and mind your own business. You are nobody and I speak to fifty million people. I know my own business and you can't keep me quiet. I am happy because I have done my duty to the American people. Everything has gone as I intended and anticipated, and everybody is happy except a few miserable cranks whom I care nothing about and would not spit upon if they were present."

Scoville wished to place in evidence a photograph of Giteau to show his condition prior to the assassination, but the prosecution objected.

All the testimony was pronounced in and the court adjourned until Saturday to allow the defense time to prepare their argument.

The interval between now and Saturday will be occupied by Scoville in preparing points of law. He is evidently disheartened and it is not expected he will make a long argument. Giteau is to be allowed to talk, but it is known he has not the ability to make a long speech. A verdict is expected by Tuesday.

Logan for Lincoln in 1884.

National Associated Press.

OMAHA, January 4.—The Tribune's New York special says: A very decided impression exists among gentlemen that Gen. Logan is preparing the way for his own nomination in 1884, and that he has been awakened to the possibility of a very dangerous rivalry in his own state.

Gen. Logan is credited with the nomination of Mr. Lincoln by Gen. Garfield, and has always entertained the warmest friendship for the secretaries of war. Lincoln is a hard fighter, but a square fighter; therefore it is impossible to credit him with the jealousy of Mr. Logan which is now ascribed to him.

At the same time, it is thought not unlikely that Mr. Logan fully realizes the advantage, great or small, which Mr. Lincoln might have in certain contingencies and he would not be slow to counteract them. He would hardly, however, suggest a method which would be likely to bring Mr. Lincoln's name into special prominence.

Joseph Arthur and his stalwart friends with an intention of making Mr. Lincoln in certain contingencies the candidate of the convention. The third term idea is dead, and there seems to be little doubt that, with the exception of Logan, the intention is to secure for Gen. Arthur a renomination. The condition of the party and the development of the republican convention itself might make that renomination impossible, or if possible, it is thought by some of the wise men, that already these stalwart leaders have in view the bringing forward of Mr. Lincoln.

Mexican Matters.

National Associated Press.

CITY OF MEXICO, January 4.—Affairs in the state of Tabasco, bordering on Guatemala, are reported to be in a disordered state, consequent upon the uncertain relations existing between the two countries.

Gen. Daniel Butterfield, who is now in Guatemala, has been selected as envoy to endeavor to arrange the present difficulties between Guatemala and Mexico; he has applied to the Mexican government for an escort of troops to the capital.

The Sonora railroad has been granted permission to extend its line from Hermosillo to Nogales on the Rio Grande, for the purpose of intersecting the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe.

Ex-President Diaz, now governor of the state of Oaxaca, has recommended a reduction of the national army. In view of this move a peaceful adjustment of the Guatemala difficulty is anticipated.

Murdered His Uncle for Money.

National Associated Press.

TOPEKA, January 4.—Phillip Agley, a farmer residing a few miles from this city, was recently murdered in his house, which was burned to conceal the crime. The coroner's jury at the time decided he died by suffocation through the accidental burning of his home.

On Sunday night, however, Henry Anderson made affidavit that he believed W. E. Graham, a nephew of Agley, committed the murder and Graham was thereupon arrested. On Monday last he confessed the crime, describing all the horrible details of its commission and acknowledged he killed his uncle for his money.

This story aroused the neighborhood to such a degree that on Monday night a party of two or three hundred burst upon the jail, overpowered the guard, took Graham and hanged him to a telegraph pole in front of the jail.

Small Pox.

National Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, January 4.—The national board of health called on the president to-day and presented an address urging some action by the president and congress, if necessary, to enforce the recommendation of the national health congress which met at Washington some time ago, touching small pox. The recommendation is that all emigrants not recently vaccinated be compelled to undergo the process and quarantine be strictly enforced. The president will consider the matter and probably call the attention of congress by a special message to the alarming state of the prevalence of this disease and recommending legislation similar to that proposed by the health congress.

The Minnesota Bond Commission.

National Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, January 4.—The Minnesota bond commission have finished their work of adjusting old claims against the state and issuing new bonds to pay the same. The payment of claims is now going on. Selah Chamberlain, of Cleveland, received $200,000 in cash and $2,000,000 in new bonds, all of which he transported to his home in a special car. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars in old Minnesota railroad bonds were not presented.

SHERMAN'S SHAME.

National Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, January 4.—At today's meeting of the senate committee to investigate the expenditure of the treasury contingent fund, Mr. Mellie, chairman of the commission appointed by Secretary Windom, was examined at considerable length in regard to certain testimony taken by that commission.

Mr. Hesler, foreman of the cabinet shop, was then recalled. It is a subject of remark that with the exception of W. Paul Brown, who is a discharged employe, every witness who has thus far appeared before the commission, although placed under no restrictions by them, absolutely refuses to say a word about the nature of the examination.

APPROPRIATIONS.

National Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, January 4.—The house committee on appropriations will hold a meeting to-morrow for the appointment of sub-committees and the assignment of the several general appropriation bills to the same.

During the recess of the house, C. Stevens, who has had the position of clerk to the committee for many years, has prepared twelve of the fourteen general bills, and had them printed with wide borders for marginal notes, and appended such foot notes in relation to previous estimates, appropriations, etc., as are required for the information of the committee.

This gives the work before them to the sub-committees well in hand, and saves much labor in reference to the necessary data. The bills thus placed in a state of forwardness are the legislative, judicial and executive, the army and navy, the consular and diplomatic, pension, Indian, military academy, fortifications, agriculture, and the District of Columbia. The two remaining ones
