REMENYI'S VIOLINS.

A Strange Story of a Columbus Jeweler Who Sold Hinself to the Evil One for the Secret of Making a Perfect Violin. The following is the story that is power in the handling of his favorite

There lives in Columbus, O., a jew eler named H. H. Heskett. For twenty-five years he repaired watches, but all the time he was possessed with the desire to make a violin equal to those which made Antonius Stradivarius the wonder of the world. When Stradivarius died in 1744 the secrets of violin-making died with him. All the mechanical world since has been quarrelling to settle it whether it was the wood, the form or the varnish that made the fiddles of Stradivarius o great. Whether it was one or all has never been settled, and ever since 1744 the violinists have all been paying enormous sums for these old fiddles. One evening, in 1878, Rememyi was in Columbus, and Heskett called on him with a violin he had made. It was one of many, and was very bad. Remenyi told him so, and gave him some advice, and one of his fine violins for a model. Heskett worked sixteen months, and then took two violins to Remenyi. They were fine instruments, and the great artist was pleased with them. Still other persons had made fine instruments, but none equal to Stradivarius.

On the 28th of last February, Remenyi was playing at Des Moines, Ia., when he received a violin by express. Upon opening it his eyes fell upon the magnificent golden and transparent varnish of Stradivarius. He took it up and examined it. It was a Stradivarius, new, just from the workshop There was all the classical modelling. the inimitable curve and contour of the old master. Seizing the bow, Remenyi, tried the tone. It was as round and mellow and full as the old Stradivarius. The great violinist went off silently to his room, and locking himself up, tested the instrument for He came out to play at the concert on Heskett's violin. Now, any violinist will tell you that no it requires age to make the violin airy, as it requires age to make wine Ever since then Remenyi has used the new violin for his concerts. But why does Remenyi use a new violin? It is said when he was he discovered a marvellous secret. It is nothing less than that the violinmaker of Columbus, after working and failing for 25 years, finally in despair sold himself to the devil for the skill to make the great violin. He bought the secret of Stradivarius with his soul. In other words, the devil is in Remenvi's new violin, and the artist discovered the fact while he was locked or the other can end the contest. A up with the instrument at Des Moines. That accounts for the manner in which Remenyi treats his violin; sometimes when the devil is in good humor and sings divinely, Remenyi smiles right out on the stage; again, he shakes his head knowingly or cajolingly, of course, to the devil in the box. Sometimes, when the evil one becomes uncontrollable, you can see a great trown on the artist's face; his eyes tiash, he compresses his hps and lashes the devil with horse hair until he fairly roars and screams. The devil is such an intractible one that Retwo days. Remenyi, however, declares the story to be "all bosh." says he: "If Stradivarius knew how to make violins, why could not others? Stradivarius had genius, so had Hasket. Where did he get his training? Where did Burns get his training? Where did Shakespeare! One man works his lifetime and does nothing; another works with genius a day and

THE BENEFIT OF BEDBUGS

It is Claimed that Their Bites Are an Antidote for Rheumatism.

In my last paper I asserted that mosquitoes contained a large quantity quinine and therefore when they bit a person they injected into his system an antidote to malarial and febrile causes generally. I had than experimented with the musquito and knew whereof I spoke,, and since you kindly published my communication I have captured quite a number of these insects, and macerating them in a mortar with alcohol, have by chemical experment actually precipitated the ulphate of quinia, or quinine of the drug stores, to the amount of seventy per cent. of the mass. In this southern land of ours, except where the salt breezes immediately along the coastare freshest from the briny waves, in every household, in the woods away from the hubitations, are myriads of chinches or bedbugs.

Chinches, annoying as they may be, have a purpose, and night after night they are working the accomplishment of that purpose, achieving those duties which as factors in the economy of pature are incumbent upon them. The chinch in sucking blood from the human body draws nourishment and strength, and above all the material which in the retorts of his body is distilled into a rich fluid which he in biting one ejects into the body to take the place of the blood he has but borthe place of the blood he has but borrowed, and this entering into the circulation furnishes an antedote against rheumatism. All mercurial preparation when taken in excess causes articuler rheumatism, affecting the bodies and the joints of the bones of the human body. The calomel taken, by decomposition in the system, forms corrosive sublimate, but not in quantity to produce death save by the slow torture of rheumatism. Corrosive sublimate, but not in quantity to produce death save by the slow torture of rheumatism. Corrosive sublimate, as every housewife in all this land will testify, is the only riddance for bedbugs. The juices of the bug and the sublimate are the antidotes of each other, foes by nature, and wherever they meet only the death of the one or the other can end the contest. A single bug, of course, cannot overrowed, and this entering into the cirartist can play on a new violin-that culation furnishes an antedote against locked up in his room at Des Moines in the system, forms corrosive sublisingle bug, of course, cannot overcome the quantity of sublimate he comes in contact with, but the human system becoming gradually fully impregnated with this juice of the bug, by their bitings at night, the poison in his veins of the sublimate from his use of calomel or mercury is in the end overcome and neutralized, and the cause being removed, the rheuma tism gets well.
