Fourth. The only evidence in the present case tending to show the irre-sponsibility of impulse to commit the homicide, or that the accused acted under an impression of insane delu-sion in doing the act, is found in the assertion that deaf mutes, when taught to speak, have he secent of their native dis-trict. Some children do arti-ulate after peculiar dialects, but in investigation it conduct and words of the accused as detailed in the evidence. The question whether the free agency of the accused was destroyed by the conviction whether the free agency of the accused was destroyed by the convic-tion on his part that the death of the president was required for the good of the American people, and that he was divinely inspired to remove him by death, is one of the facts to be determined by the jury from the evidence in the case, and such evidence includes the acts as well as the words of the accused. But such conviction, if it really existed, such conviction, if it really existed, could not afford any excuse when the party knew what he was doing and that it was contrary to law. and he was not acting under an insame delusion, to have such effect the committing of the act charged must be the result of an insame delu-sion of such force as to deprive the accused of the degree of reason neces-sary to distinguish between right and wrong in respect of the act as an epcoph generally judge of such conduct. The dalusion must have been such that at the time of committing the act has the time of committing the act has the time of committing the act has either did not know what he was do ing, or, if he did, must have acted under the controlling conviction that the art was right. Then it is also the du y of the jury to find whether said act was the result of such unsound-ness of mind of the prisoner. Seventh. Punishments of law are intended for rational persons, and no one but rational persons can commit the crime of murder. Eighth. Insanity may be interposed as a legal defense in any prosecution for an otherwise criminal act, and if auch defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the contament of the y prosecution for an otherwise criminal act, and if auch defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense in any prosecution for an otherwise criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense be established by evidence, it takes away the criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense in any prosecution for an otherwise criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such defense in any prosecution for an otherwise criminality and the act ceases to be a crime in the such and instructors pleasent the presons an

Although he may have known the act was contrary to the law of the land, yet if he did to the law of the land, yet if he did it under the insane delusion that it was commanded to be done by God, such knowledge on his part would not make him liable to punishment. ONE EAR LESS. Last night a fight occurred in one of our saloons, between Robert Nance and Dick Birchfield, each assisted by sequence of something Nance said about Birchfield's girl. In the melee Nance got his ear bitten off, and Birchfield got stamped in the face by third parties. Nance has sworn out a warrant against Birchfield for mayhem. Birchfield has been arrested, and will be tried to-day. This is an-other saloon jubilee of which our town has had so many. Good citizens are getting tired of it.
