MINOR MENTIONS

The Rock Island pay car gladdened the boys yesterday. At Platter's hall on Sunday night there was a happy gathering of Germans. Mayor & Co. received yesterday a car-load of broom corn from Modale, Ia. The weather gave every day rather a raw deal yesterday. It suited the ice men though. We look on Union avenue has started up again in a confluence with the lateaction of the council. The Light guards rally at their armory this evening, and those desiring to join the ranks should be present. A stranger in the city was yesterday trying to pawn a watch. He claimed that he had been fleeced on a little game with a few acquaintances and had to resort to going on tick. James Bromley, arrested here as a vagrant, and suspected of having stolen in Omaha some handkerchiefs, and other articles, which he was trying to sell here, was yesterday discharged by Recorder Burke, he promising to hurry out of this city. Chief Field has among his trophies of war, captured and retained at police headquarters, a fully-fed seven-shooter, which he gobbled from a young man who attended a masquerade in the role of a cowboy, and thought a loaded shooter was a necessary part of the outfit. Collins who was arrested together with Jack Shields, for assaulting Mr. Jennings, was discharged yesterday, there being no evidence that he took an active part in the assault. Shields has already been held to await the trial of the grand jury, it appearing that he was the chief actor. The board of trade met again last evening. The committee appointed to advise with the Omaha board of trade concerning the building of a wagon bridge across the river were unable to report any definite action, as the Omaha committee had not been appointed, the board of trade of that city meeting for that purpose last night. Mrs. Filbert, wife of S. H. Filbert, died on Sunday night at the home of J. P. Filbert, consumption being the cause of the prolonged illness and death. She was aged twenty-nine years and leaves besides her husband, two small children. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the residence of J. P. Filbert, No. 710 First avenue. Charles Moore has been sadly afflicted by the death of his little son Charles Curtis Moore, who was suddenly taken away by congestion of the lungs, after an illness of only two days. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, many friends of the family being in attendance, and Rev. Mr. Cleland, of the Presbyterian church conducting the service. At a recent social gathering here the other evening the dance was broken up suddenly by the appearance of a rat in the room. The ladies screamed and the gentleman showed their gallantry by seizing brooms at other weapons of warfare and beginning an aggressive fight upon his ratship. Before the death the rat looked about the size of the kitten, but the measurement of the corpse was a little less. Joe Scott, a boot-black, bought a shotgun for $3.50 to be paid for in weekly installment. Now, that after struggling along to save the needed money, he had secured the gun as his own, he claims that he has been robbed of it. Two burglars met him while out hunting at the lake, and asked him to let them see the gun. He did so, and they refused to return it, threatening to shoot him if he didn't kip out for home. Joe's heart is nearly broken, and if his story is correct, the big fellows have no hearts to break.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garner, living about six miles east of this city, were happily surprised Saturday evening by a gathering of friends and relatives, who reminded Mr. Garner that it was his sixtieth birthday. Van us gifts were presented, among them being two elegant easy chairs from the children and grandchildren. Mr. R. Bert Perival, of this city, making the speech. Mr. Garner has been a resident of this county for thirty-five years, and besides the friends there were present to express their love and esteem for himself a wife, eleven children, forty-one grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Just in the rear of Broadway and west of Pearl street are two or three big stumps and roots, which parties yesterday afternoon sought to split into firewood by using gun powder. One blue fella of several goodly sized chunks, scattering them in various directions, much to the danger of those happening to be passing by, and of still more danger to win ows in the immediate vicinity. One chunk flew across the alley and struck a little house standing there. It broke through the closed blinds and smashed the glass. The recklessness which characterizes those who seek to do blighting in the midst of the most crowded portion of the city needs to be more than simply chided. There was a lively scene on Broadway Sunday afternoon for a few minutes. Two Omaha fellows, named James Nugent and Lewis Berling, alias D. Burns, seemed to have some antipathy for a fellow of color named James Johnson, and after following him and indulging in slinging hard words, which Johnson tossed back with zeal, the parties came to a climax. Justice Abbott stepped to the front just as a great crowd had gathered to see the row and in the name of the state of Iowa ordered a cessation of hostilities. The Omaha fellows and Johnson were all locked up. Yesterday the latter was discharged, it appearing that he was the one sinned against. The two visitors got a friend here to be their security, but yesterday failed to appear, and their cases were continued to-day, while their friend went across the river to investigate and see whether they intended to leave him in the lurch, and compel him to pay the fines and costs for the assault with which they stand charged. How's that a cause doth move, etc. There was an excited rush in the postoffice yesterday, the women seemed, the men shouted, and a general commotion ensued, and a big Newfoundland by the neck, and made the shaggy for fly. The owner of the bull-dog explained that on his last visit to this city a big, black dog jumped upon his pet bull-dog, and the latter had been sighing for revenge ever since, and when he struck the town yesterday he tackled the first dog of that description, which he met. Of course he got the wrong one, but he held on like grim death, until chod off. The bull-dog proved to belong to J. W. Murray, of the Cartland Murray company, and his master took due care of him for the rest of the day.

WINE AND WOMEN. Rev. Dr. McKenzie Talks About Polygamy and Temperance Securing Help for his Enterprise in Salt Lake City.

For a few days past Rev. Dr. D. Banks McKenzie has been stopping in this city, and on Sunday occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church, both morning and evening. In the evening the announcement that he would lecture on temperance caused the house to be so filled that it was necessary to place chairs in the aisles to accommodate the audience. This practice, by the way, is one which should be discouraged. A panic is liable to arise in any place where many people are gathered, and in case of such a panic it is highly essential that the aisles should be in condition for a ready exit. Nothing is more dangerous in case of a panic than loose chairs, as they are liable to be tipped over, and in any event form stumbling blocks to a crowd on a rush. The practice is so common in all places of resort that THE BEE takes this occasion to go a little out of its way to give warning. Dr. McKenzie, in the opening of his discourse, stated that several citizens had expressed a desire to have him say something concerning the condition of affairs in Utah, and he did so as a prelude to his temperance address. He denounced polygamy strongly, and cited several instances in which family relationships were badly demoralized by this system. He spoke of two classes among them; one, the better educated and more intelligent class, who, he thought, would be really glad if some bridge were built over the chasm which separated them from a better civilization and a better social organization. Then there were many who were ignorant dupes, who were the slaves, really, of the priestcraft, and who needed emancipation and would welcome it as did the colored people in the south. The practice is little hope of securing any change save through the people, as the head of the government would not act in advance of the sentiment and demand of the people. There was too much jobbery and too little principle among politicians to hope for relief. The people must rise and demand it. The speaker then proceeded to talk on temperance, his line of thought being on the philosophy of reform. His talk was an earnest one, and he spent little time in narrating anecdotes or merely entertaining his listeners, but applied himself to the handling of principles which needed to be carried out to secure reform. He deemed the efforts to secure personal reform, but an incidental feature of the work, for while some were thus being saved from the evil existed and others were being drawn in. Incidentally he spoke of the late railway disaster in New York state, and sarcastically spoke of the attempt to throw the blame upon the poor brakeman, when the cause of the accident was a drunken assemblyman, who in hurrahing and carrying on, pulled the cord of the air-brakes. He thought the chances were that the brakeman would be hung and the drunken assemblyman would be re-elected. A collection was taken up of which in the Salt Lake enterprise, of which Dr. McKenzie has charge, and which has already been given in full in THE BEE. There still remains about $5,000 to secure in order to complete the $115,000 building erected by the reform association of that city, and Dr. McKenzie's mission eastward is to secure that amount.

SUMMER SMILES. They are Said to Have Sad Recollections for a Young Lady Who Complains of a Youthful Companion. Yesterday afternoon there appeared before Justice Abbott a young man from Corning, named Ed Watson, who had been called upon to answer a soft impeachment laid against him by a young lady of nineteen summers, named Katie Liepert. The young lady's story in brief is that the young man while in this city last June stormed her affections and won her confidence, under the pretense that he would marry her, and that he had failed to do as he agreed. She did not propose to have her honor trifled with so ruthlessly and so caused his arrest, the new deputy sheriff, Riley Clark, serving the papers. The young man was represented by Attorney Russell, and a horde of witnesses appeared. The defendant secured a change of venue, and the case was sent to Recorder Burke, the nearest justice, Frayne having been subpoenaed as a witness and considered therefore as interested. It is understood that the young man accused, claims that the affair is a put-up job and purposes to resist the charge and establish his innocence. The case was adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning. Watson is a clean, business-like looking fellow, and is accompanied by a number of friendly witnesses from his own town, who seem to think that he will pull out of the ugly scrape.

BROKE HIS NECK. J. W. Cook Thrown from a Wagon and Instantly Killed.

His Body Found Beside the Roadway After a Hunt by His Friends.

A fatal accident occurred about three miles south of Weston, by which a man named J. W. Cook met with instant death. He had for some time been in the employ of Mr. Nixon, and on Saturday last was sent to Weston to get a wagon repaired. He seems to have accomplished the mission satisfactorily, but along towards evening the team and wagon came to Mr. Nixon's place without any driver. The suspicion was awakened at once that some mishap must have befallen Cook, and a search was begun along the road. The search was kept up until the body of the missing man was found lying beside the road in a piece of timber. Life had been extinct some time, and it was evident that the man had come to his death by tumbling or being thrown from the wagon. Coroner Paul, of this city, was sent for, and an examination of the facts led to this conclusion: The roadway was cut down a little, and as it is but wide enough for one wagon, it is surmised that the team either becoming frisky or being misguided, the wheels struck the embankment and threw the driver out, breaking his neck. The presence of a pint bottle of whisky about emptied aroused some conjectures as to the man's condition as he drove along homeward, but aside from the clues there was nothing to definitely determine the details. The deceased was a man of no family.

PERSONAL. J. W. Rodefer left last evening for Tyrona, in this state.

Major Lyman started yesterday to attend court at Audubon.

Miss Grace Cartland and John Murray are stopping at the Ogden.

Rev. Dr. McKenzie, of Salt Lake City, left yesterday for Chicago, where he will put in a few days work and will then proceed eastward.

Mrs. D. B. Clark is now quite ill, and her condition is considered quite critical. Her husband is now recovering rapidly from his severe illness.

Badly Beaten. A grievous assault occurred at Laura Sheldon's bagnio Sunday night, the victim being a white man named Louis Bacher. He was in the yard when two colored men pounced upon him for some cause known best to themselves, and knocked him into an insensate condition. One of the colored thumpers carried him into the house, where he soon recovered his consciousness and identified the colored man as one of his assailants. The darkey hurriedly skipped out, and a search for the offenders yesterday proved in vain. One arrest was made yesterday, but it proved to be the wrong coon.

Corning Condensed. Correspondence of The Bee. CORNING, January 21. The marriage of Mr. Z. T. Widner to Miss Hettie West, which happened on the 18th inst., was the social event of the week. All citizens unite in wishing them a happy future.

On January 19th there were three warrants issued for one J. F. Middlegate, on the charge of larceny, committed by disposing of mortgaged property. The claims against him amount to about $600. The officer succeeded in capturing him near Lewis, Cass county, Ia., where he had rented a farm. We hope the charges may prove groundless, and Mr. M. be released. Causes were continued until January 6, at 9 o'clock.

On this evening it is the intention to remove the postoffice to the new building of A. B. Turner, on the corner of Davis avenue and Eighth street, such move making it more than eighty rods from the depot, and therefore the government will her after pay for carrying the mail to the trains. One Wednesday evening some parties who wanted to get their provisions without putting on any collars for the season, entered the mill of F. M. Davis, at Corbin, and took a tremendous amount of flour, meal, etc., in the same. They will probably live high the rest of the winter. There is no club to the parties who did it. Circuit court adjourned last Saturday afternoon at 10 o'clock on the charge of the board of health have ordered all parties in town who have not been successfully vaccinated within five years, to be re-vaccinated within ten days, not because there is any small pox here, but as a preventative. We do not want any, and do not propose to have it, if we can keep it away. A lot of our merchants has a new pointer dog, and the old adage will probably soon be illustrated: "That a man may be truthful and honest, but within ten days after he succeeds the owner of a pointer dog, he devops into the worst liar in town."

Iowa Items. The corporate limits of Pacific Junction cover 80 acres. Eastern capitalists are about to start a pump factory in Sioux City. J. H. Lewis, of Creston, had his leg broken in two places while packing ice at Pacific Junction. A Jew and loose resident of Phillip row, Creston, has been jugged for kicking his mistress down stairs and kicking her ribs with a potato masher. The alleged wife is keeping him company in an adjoining cell. The publishers and printers of Creston celebrated the anniversary of Franklin's birthday last Tuesday evening with a grand banquet and the Creston house. Those types of manly beauty lumbered up an champagne and discussed on the virtues and vices of the profession. The trial of S. A. Hopkins, who was recently captured in Denver and brought back to Sioux City on the charge of embezzling one of the banks out of $1,300, resulted in the discharge of the prisoner. There was a fatal discrepancy between the info in a trial and the evidence. Next day the information was refiled, and a warrant issued, but Hos has had disappeared.

The Polo Business in New York. National Associated Press. NEW YORK, January 23. In order to gain several seconds in time the fire department is experimenting with brass poles placed with a slight incline from the floor where the men sleep to the engine floor, for the men to slide down at alarms, instead of running down stairs. The poles pass through the ceiling and each floor and run from near each set of beds to the position on the engines or trucks where the sleepers of those beds belong. The experiments exhibited yesterday in engine house 33 was a perfect success. Young men were placed on beds to run down stairs and older ones in beds to slide down the poles. The alarm was sounded and the pole men reached their positions in half the time taken by the others.

Sargent and the Secretaryship. National Associated Press. SIOUX CITY, Iowa January 23. A gentleman connected with the land department of the Central Pacific told one of our citizens that Sargent was backed for secretary of the interior by Central Pacific influence and by the entire landed interest of the Pacific Coast, and would take the office as soon as Kirkwood decided a land case in which Sargent is interested. He said that Chaffee, of Colorado, could have had the secretaryship but declined because he did not want to rule on cases where he had interests.
