COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Office: Room Five, Everett's Block, Broadway. H. W. TILTON, City Editor.

MINOR MENTIONS

The Light Guards dance to-night. The city council to meet again next Monday.

Work is going on at Union avenue and also on the creek. The bicyclists and plasterers meet to-morrow evening at John Lind's office.

One observant citizen took a census of the dogs on one block along Broadway yesterday and tallied 13.

The case of W. K. Cahran, charged with larceny, was yesterday continued by Justice Baird until to-morrow afternoon.

There are now six new Herdies in Bowman, Rohrer & Co.'s warehouse, waiting for the streets to get either dirt or paved.

The new four-wheeled horse wagon is ready in Bowman, Rohrer & Co.'s warehouse awaiting the completion of the new engine house.

Dohaney's opera house promises to be packed to-morrow afternoon and evening by those anxious to see Smith's double Uncle Tom's Cabin company, with Sam Lucas, the renowned colored comedian.

A Chinaman with an extra leggy cue was at the transfer a day or two ago, and satisfied the curiosity of some bystanders by allowing them to measure it. It proved to be over six feet long.

In the circuit court yesterday the case of H. Brant vs. William Plumer, was still on, it being a claim for damages for fencing up a highway. The case will probably draw to a close this morning.

Frank French, who has been lying in jail here for about ten days on a charge of larceny, has been discharged from custody, the man from whom it was said that French took $150 not appearing to testify against him.

Two women arranged for a meeting Wednesday afternoon at which they were to settle their differences by a chewing and hair pulling scrape. One party failed to come to time and the other sent her seconds away, and after waiting for a season withdrew in disgust.

The young man Bennett, who was killed by a falling bluff last Wednesday, was buried yesterday, it not being deemed advisable to wait for the possible arrival of friends from Indiana, who have been duly notified of the sad event.

One of the main reasons for the police station for fast driving. If the streets are getting in such good condition that fast driving is possible, it seems as if they must be almost good enough to permit of the Herdies starting up.

Mrs. and Mrs. H. H. Brown celebrated their wedding Wednesday evening in a highly brilliant and enjoyable manner. Many appropriate gifts were presented by the guests, who in turn were cared for in every way and wish in a generous and hospitable manner.

The charge of malicious mischief lodged against Con-table Fox and J. J. White has been withdrawn by Nat. Long, who was too fast in claiming that they broke open a stable door in securing a horse for which they had a writ. The case has been dismissed, but Fox and White do not propose to have Long let out of the matter so easy.

Chief Field has peculiar recollections of the day of which yesterday was the anniversary. Twenty-four years ago yesterday he started on foot before daylight and traveled twelve miles in the bitter cold to witness a hanging at Ravenna, O., the victim being a convicted murderer, who was then sent there swung into eternity.

Quite a crowd gathered on a street near Broadway yesterday, watching the laborers break off a projecting portion of the bluff. The killing of a man the day before seemed to add fresh zest to the watching, and especially as the shovels at work beneath the projection did not seem to realize the danger of a similar accident occurring again. The workmen as on the bluff got quite reckless.

Many here will be disappointed on finding that arrangements can not be made for having Miss Fannie Kellogg and the Omaha Glee club, appear in concert here, where the former is so well known. Arrangement has been made in part, however by arranging special rates by which the music-lovers of this city can attend their concert in Omaha on Monday evening the 20th, and a good portion of the house has been reserved for Council Bluffs, and the tickets placed on sale at Seaman's store.

It will take considerable shrewd engineering on the part of some of the candidates at the coming city election to cover all the claims. The organization insists on a pledge to support a plan for a city market. The colored voters insist of a pledge that their race shall be recognized in the distribution of favors, as they have two hundred votes. The financial question has to be met; the claim of the working people comes in for a share, in fact there are many questions to enter. The voters should, most of all, beware of the man who will give a "ye" to everything.

PERSONAL.

R. Vanderburg, of Keokuk, was in the city yesterday. C. M. Kittridge, of Leavenworth, was in the city yesterday a guest of the Ogden house.

John B. Manchester, of the Omaha glee club, was in the city yesterday, looking after the interests of their coming concert. Among the Iowans booked at the Pacific are: A. L. Avery and S. Jenkins; Neola; E. R. Caldwell; Dunlap; O. L. Smith and wife; Woodbine; Eli Crayton, Walnut, and A. Pettit, Atlantic.

Webb's New Orleans minstrels to the number of twenty, are stopping at the Revere house. Their orchestra are rehearsing daily, and the organization promises to open strong.

Wm. S. Chatterton, agent of Smith's Uncle Tom's Cabin company, was here yesterday, stopping at the Revere house. The company, after appearing here on Saturday, will go to Omaha, then to Glenwood and Fremont.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.

Various Items Gathered From Among the Business Men of the City.

Some local capitalists are talking of joining with others in the establishment of a large distillery here, to be put in operation as soon as possible.

Many of the merchants and leading men of this city seem quite enthusiastic over the move for a bridge across the river, and especially so since they became conversant with the facts in the case as set forth in THE BEE.

The attempt made by the Nonpareil to deceive the public and excite opposition by presenting it as a purely Omaha scheme, and to make the people believe that it was to saddle a big financial burden on this city, has failed completely, and now that the business men understand the facts, they are anxious to have the matter pushed as vigorously as possible to a successful completion.

The committees of both cities will meet in this city one week from to-morrow, and further facts will be elicited then.

The memorial to the Iowa legislature to enact a law like that in Nebraska relative to exemptions, has stirred up some of the business men of this city, and action has already been taken looking to the defeat of the movement. It is claimed that the law proposed is instigated by the Union Pacific road, who object to being annoyed by garibanees on debts due by their employees, and that the prepared bill, while accommodating the Union Pacific, does away with the protection needed by those having credit. A committee of the board of trade of this city is now making up a report on the matter.

Those dealing in wagons used to get them shipped from Chicago here at $75 a car, packing twenty-eight in a car. Now that the railroads are doing more business than then, and can do it cheaper proportionately, the dealers are obliged to pay the same price for only twenty wagons. They justly wonder why this is thus?

Many of the property owners and business men of Main street are losing faith in the promises of the city council to have the lower end of that street filled in, so that business can be carried on. While they have been waiting for this improvement necessary to business, work has been pushed along on Union avenue. They say it should be the other way—business first and pleasure afterwards.

Mrs. Baldwin, the postmistress of this city, shows in her annual report that the sale of stamps, envelopes, postal cards, etc., together with the box rent of $2,537, footed up $24,346.86, and the expense account for the year amounts to $6,451. The total receipts for money orders was $122,950.35, and about the same amount paid out on money orders. The total receipts from all sources foot up $217,081.82.

Quite a business change is to be made at once at the corner of Broadway and Main streets. Justice Baird is to change his office one door further west and the room now occupied by him is to be used for the tailors of Oberfelder & Newman's establishment. The building now occupied by the tailors, in the rear of Officer & Pusey's bank, is to give place to a new one, which will also cover the two adjoining lots, the scene of the late fire. This new building is to be built by P. C. DeVol, and will be a brick warehouse with a frontage of sixty feet. These lots were talked of as the site of a new opera house, which Mr. Dohaney was figuring over, but the occupancy of the ground by this warehouse will prove a bar to any further hope of an opera house there.

BUNKO BUSINESS.

Another Case of Misplaced Confidence, in Which a New York Man Was the Victim.

Another case of misplaced confidence was reported to the police yesterday, it being a repetition of the occurrence of Monday, in which a Colorado man bound east was the victim. This time it was an eastern man bound west. He hailed from New York, and had a ticket through to San Francisco. Having heard all sorts of yarns concerning the wickedness of the western country, he had carefully sewed up his wealth in his shirt, and was on the sharp lookout for pickpockets. He was wonderfully glad when he formed the acquaintance of a pleasing gentleman who seemed to be honest. An alleged expressman soon tackled this gentleman friend for the payment of charges on some goods. The gentleman was sorry for he would have to wait until he came up town and get a draft cashed. The case was urgent, the express man impatient; couldn't his friend accommodate him—in fact it cost the gentlemanly New Yorker about $30 to get really acquainted with the gentlemanly stranger, and this amount he had to rip out of his shirt, where he had so securely fastened it. He bewailed his loss greatly and the police started out to see if they could find the two confidence men, but without avail.

School life and seal life. Teacher in public school of Council Bluffs to little boy in class. "Why does the dog always turn round and round after his tail before lying down?"

One hand raised little boy answers: "The dog turns round before lying down to see if his tail is in the right place."

Another boy—"The dog turns round to see if his tail is coming after him."

If the force of this lesson will only stick by the boys until they get to be a larger growth, it will aid them greatly in solving the problem of life, especially about city election time when petty politicians flop around and around to see where the tail of the party is.

DEADHEADS.

Report of the Iowa Railway Commission on Free Passes.

DES MOINES, Ia., February 8.—In the house of representatives yesterday the railway commissioners made a report on the resolutions by Mr. Aldrich relating to the use of free passes by officials, editors, and others. The report is in a humorous and sarcastic vein, stating that they are a waste of time, and that they are a source of vexation. The commissioners understand that the passes are given to the office, not the man, as favors are never extended after he goes out of office. They defend the taking of half-fare tickets by the clergy, and think the passes of editors only pay for advertising, or an interchange of the goods which each has to sell. They think full state conventions are necessary in order to get proper candidates, and that railroads, by giving reduced fare to delegates, make more than otherwise by the increased travel. They decline to impugn the motives of

JUDGES OF COURTS AND STATE OFFICERS in accepting free passes, and think the free passes given to sheriffs of counties and police officers more than compensate the railroads by the additional protection against lawlessness. The commission recites that the practice of giving passes to public officers is as old as the railway itself, and probably antedating it, going back to packet and steamboat times. The earliest public notice of the pass system in the knowledge of the railway commissioners of Iowa is a letter from ANSEL BASCOM, ex-member of the New York house of representatives, from Seneca county, in 1846. Bascom's letter to the president of the Audubon & Rochester railway company (now part of the New York Central), in which he returned a passenger ticket, saying he was elected to represent the people of his county, not the corporation; that he went to Albany to make laws to check and control them; that proper and legitimate mileage was paid him by the state; that to accept a pass, would be a fraud upon the state and a restraint from corporation; that it was his duty in behalf of his constituents to watch and not allow the roads to infringe on the rights of the canals. At that time the subject of allowing the railroads to carry freight in the summer and the repeal of the law compelling them to pay canal tolls were being agitated. The commissioners cited the fact that the press of the time discussed Bascom's letter, and generally treated it as a bit of political clap-trap, written to give himself

CHEAP NOTORIETY. The effect of the letter was ephemeral, and Bascom dropped out of sight, and the reform of which he proposed to be the leader was interred. From that day to this the commissioners say the members of the legislature and state officers continued to regard the railway pass as a heritage. As an abstract proposition, the commissioners believe the pass system merely an exchange of courtesies, and think no railroads would be glad of a law prohibiting further passing, so that they could point all applicants to it. To make such prohibition effective it should be national. The commissioners thought if any legislation were attempted on the matter it should be radical; that no passes should be issued over any road, not even to officers of connecting roads.

IT IS THOUGHT PROBABLE the persons now using passes might compose 10 per cent of the travel. If free passes were taken away these persons would not travel half so much, thus making only 5 per cent to add to the price of the tickets of those who paid fare. It is claimed by the railroads that complimentary free transportation does not exceed 2 per cent of the passenger-fare receipts. The commissioners quote from the constitutions of Pennsylvania, Arkansas, and California, which have provisions prohibiting free passes, Pennsylvania prohibition being absolute to all, Arkansas only against passes to state officers, and California to all state officers except railroad commissioners. The board regard the California constitution as the best model for legislative enactment. The board understands that this legislation in other states is a dead letter, but warns the members of the Iowa legislature that from what the commissioners know of the temper of the Iowa roads, if such a prohibition is passed into a law in this state, it will be rigorously obeyed by the railroads. The legislative enactments of Pennsylvania to carry out the constitution do not apply to roads chartered before its adoption. No law is found in the Arkansas or California statutes to carry out the constitutional provisions. The reading of the report was received with considerable applause and laughter.

IOWA ITEMS. Several farmers in Dallas county have sowed wheat. Des Moines police officers made eighty-three arrests last month. Dubuque brewers have advanced the price of beer to $8 a barrel net.

The telephone line between Monticello and Anamosa is completed. The state encampment of the G. A. R. meets in Des Moines, February 23d and 24th.

Oskaloosa is to have a $75,000 court house, to be commenced at once, the contract having already been let.

The Creston citizens' convention, to nominate candidates for mayor, city treasurer, city attorney and assessor, meets to-morrow.

DeWitt has thirty canvassers in the field, obtaining signatures to petitions for the return of the county seat from Clinton to DeWitt.

The Dubuque Lumber company's mill will be lighted with electric lights when it begins operations, and will be run day and night.

The State Agricultural Press association asks the legislature to enact such laws as will effectually prohibit domestic animals from the ravages of dogs.

Davenport says $36 a year per street lamp for gas and consumers $3 per 1,000; Burlington, $25 and $3; Clinton, $50.50 and $3.50; Muscatine pays only $19.69 per lamp, and consumers $3.

Last Sunday morning the nude body of a newly born infant was found lying in the street in Iowa city partially devoured by dogs or some other animal who had discovered its hiding place and made it a source of prey. Undoubtedly the babe had been born during the previous night and had either died at birth or been murdered, or left in some out of the way place by unnatural parents to die.

The Clarinda Star says: "The OMAHA DAILY BEE is kind enough to exchange with the daily Star. It is a large first-class paper, enterprising as a honey bee, gathers news like honey for its readers and gets here the day of its publication. Many prefer it to the Nonpareil, and say it has many other depredations which exasperated the farmers in the southeastern part of the township, that they lately turned out to the number of thirty, with horses and dogs, and had a grand wolf hunt, which was successful in ridding that portion of the country of the plagues, but resulted in the wolves taking refuge in other parts of the township. The animals have been exceedingly bold and have not shrank from attacking people. As 'Uncle John,' whose dwelling is about two miles southwest of the city, was venturing his way home last Saturday evening, with a basket containing provisions on his arm, he was suddenly startled by the long doleful howl of a wolf but a short distance from him. This howl was soon answered by several short barks and grew more distinct each moment. In the basket was some fresh beefsteak, which had undoubtedly attracted the wolves, and 'Uncle John' stopped short to consider what it was best for him to do. The only available weapon of defense within his reach, was a heavy jack-knife which he carried, he having left his heavy cane that he always carries, in town. The wolves were gradually near and he began to feel the necessity of getting out of the reach of them. The only thing that offered any refuge was a fence which he proceeded to climb. The wolves by this time were close on his heels and were anxious to taste the steak. How to get out of the dilemma 'Uncle John' didn't know, but he proceeded to prepare to give his assailants a warm reception and grasped his knife with 'cow-boy' determination. After sitting on the fence trying to look his stubborn assailants out of countenance until his position became rather unpleasant, he concluded to satisfy the wolves' appetite with some of the steak; flinging them a few pieces, a brilliant scheme entered his mind, to light the paper around his provisions. This idea put into practice was effectual in driving off the wolves and restoring 'Uncle John' his liberty. He says his hair stood on end and he wasn't slow in getting home. You bet you don't catch him in the lots any more after dark."

CHASED BY THE WOLVES.

The Narrow Escape of a Red Oak Citizen From Being "Chawed Up."

Red Oak Express.

Uncle John Lawshe, a well known habitant of this town, had an experience last Saturday evening, which was far from pleasant, and which he says he does not care to have repeated. It is well known that wolves, during the present winter, have been very troublesome in the country surrounding this city, robbing poultry yards and making other depredations which exasperated the farmers in the southeastern part of the township, that they lately turned out to the number of thirty, with horses and dogs, and had a grand wolf hunt, which was successful in ridding that portion of the country of the plagues, but resulted in the wolves taking refuge in other parts of the township. The animals have been exceedingly bold and have not shrank from attacking people. As 'Uncle John,' whose dwelling is about two miles southwest of the city, was venturing his way home last Saturday evening, with a basket containing provisions on his arm, he was suddenly startled by the long doleful howl of a wolf but a short distance from him. This howl was soon answered by several short barks and grew more distinct each moment. In the basket was some fresh beefsteak, which had undoubtedly attracted the wolves, and 'Uncle John' stopped short to consider what it was best for him to do. The only available weapon of defense within his reach, was a heavy jack-knife which he carried, he having left his heavy cane that he always carries, in town. The wolves were gradually near and he began to feel the necessity of getting out of the reach of them. The only thing that offered any refuge was a fence which he proceeded to climb. The wolves by this time were close on his heels and were anxious to taste the steak.
