COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Office: Room Five, Everett's Block, Broadway. H. W. TILTON, City Editor.

MINOR MENTIONS.

The snow went off speedily yesterday. Iowa Wyoming coal handled only by J. W. Rodefer, No. 26 Pearl St. D. F. Eicher was, last night, nominated by the democrats for alderman of the Second ward. Justice Baird yesterday tied a matrimonial knot, joining for life Andrew Watson and Miss Ella Curry, both of this city. The case of Slayter vs. Perry Reel was argued yesterday afternoon in the circuit court. It has been three days on trial. The Round Table met last evening, and had pleasing literary exercises, the gathering being in the rooms of Mr. J. H. Keith. The Cecilia club of this city has arranged to give Miss Fannie Kellogg a benefit concert at Dohany's next Tuesday evening. The Royal Arcanum dedicated its new hall last evening with appropriate and merry doings, in which members and friends participated. The late cold snap and the apparent desire of the council to spend money a little more slowly, has caused a general suspension of city improvements. The amusement announcements consist of Leavitt's minstrel to-night, Alice Oates' opera company Monday night, and the Fannie Kellogg concert Tuesday night. There never were better prospects for the city having a good council than for the coming year. Both tickets average up well so far as aldermanic nominations are concerned. Several of those concerned in the wagon bridge project went to Omaha yesterday afternoon, to join with those interested in making ready to draw up a needed bill to present to congress for passage. At the office of the clerk of the court yesterday marriages were issued to Abram Burbridge and Mary Ann Pierce, both of Council Bluffs; C. H. Brockman and Kate Larsen, of Avoca; Fred H. Branow and Martha H. Branow, of Boomer township. Vaughan has arranged for another meeting at the court house Saturday evening, at which he proposes to fill up the rest of his ticket. It is understood that the ticket will be made up of selections from the two tickets now in the field, with perhaps slight variations. Some sneak thief yesterday stole a saddle from a harness shop on lower Main street. As Crowell, the chronic plunderer, has been released from jail, suspicion naturally falls on him. If he is the one, other cases will speedily follow, as he is never satisfied with one saddle. Chief Fields shows with commendable pride the first half dollar he ever received. It was given to him fifty years ago by his grandmother, and through all the ups and downs of a varied life, he has clung to it as a memento. Few ever hang to a pocket piece for half a century. The indications now are that out of three candidates in the field for mayor, the real contest will be between Lawrence and Bowman, with great odds in favor of Lawrence. Vaughan's strength seems to weaken daily. He launched his halberd too early, and as it has sprung sleek, the supply of gas will hardly keep it aloft until election, though there may be enough of a supply to let him down easy. Something must all the Nonpareil. Old residents say it is the first time in its history when it has omitted to shout that it had triumphed in the primaries and convention, and to fling out its headlines, claiming a victory for the paper. The crank of the organ must be missing, for always before it has turned the old tune, "We've killed the bear!" It is evidently sad. Jo Spaulding proposes to run as an independent candidate for marshal. It is stated that some of his friends are urging him to change his mind and make the independent run for superintendent of markets. Jo's action in announcing himself as a candidate for marshal prior to the convention is the reason given by some of the delegates to the republican convention for not voting for him. They think he ought to have left himself in the hands of his republican friends. The colored voters lately held a meeting to protest against being ignored by the political parties, and insisting that they shall be recognized. The republican city convention recognized the colored folks by allowing them a voice and vote in the forming of a ticket. The democrats here recognized the colored folks by publishing a cartoon of the colored delegate and vilifying him because he dared to appear as a delegate to a convention. Which recognition do the colored voters like the best? The chief of police has been instructed by the council to notify the public not to throw ashes and rubbish in the streets or alleys, and in cases of a failure to comply the offenders are to be prosecuted. There has been a great laxity in regard to the street ordinance. Even along Broadway and other prominent business streets, ashes, papers, tin cans, decayed fruit, in fact the offal of stores and offices have been tossed into the streets. It is to be hoped that the proposed reform will not end in mere talk. Vaughan seems to have had work to get a befitting name by which to christen his party. It started out as the Independent party, but as it was found that there were others beside Vaughan men who favored improvements, the next move seems to have been to call it the workmen's party. This name is as much out of the way as the other, for the party comprises a small fragment only of the workmen. If Vaughan wants to get a name which will justly represent the purposes of the party he should name it after himself, as the whole bent, from beginning to end, is not to further improvements, not to help the working people, but simply to further and help Vaughan.

"SHOOK INTO CONGRESS."

An Interesting Interview with One of Garfield's School Boy Friends.

Garfield's Superiority as a Rifle Shot, and How It was Tested. A gentleman named Marcy, who has been spending the winter with friends here, dropped into THE BEE office the other day, and in the course of talk the name of the martyred Garfield came in. "Well, sir, I've known Garfield ever since I was a boy. I could almost go blindfolded to the very spot where he was born. Know him? I should say so. It seems strange enough to hear him called anything but 'Jim,' for us boys used always to call him so, even after he had got to be a man full grown and began to get famous. We went to school together, and I can see him now as a schoolboy just as plain as I can see the leg of that table there." After chatting over some of the reminiscences of school life Mr. Marcy hit upon the time when Garfield was nominated for congress. "I've just been reading a life of Garfield, and I have to laugh at some of the mistakes and statements made. For instance, the book I've been reading tells about his being unanimously nominated the first time for congress. Now, it's no such a thing. I was a member myself of the convention, and I tell you we balloted over a hundred times. It was getting after sundown, and there were several candidates who stood just about even, and Garfield was one of them. Finally one of those who was among the leading ones, a man named Ferguson, withdrew his name. Just in front of me sat a delegate named Merrill. I had been working right hard for Garfield, and when Ferguson withdrew I did what I could to make the break count for Garfield, and I urged Merrill to cast his vote for him. Merrill had written a ballot for another candidate and was holding it in one hand. I gave him a Garfield ballot, and he held this in the other hand. He didn't hardly know which to vote. As the teller came around I saw Merrill hesitate, and leaning over I took hold of the hand which held the vote for Garfield, and sort of in fun shook it, and he let the ballot drop into the hat. When the vote was counted it was found that Garfield had just one majority. It was on this nomination that Garfield was first elected to congress, and afterwards he used to laugh and tell me that I shook him into congress. Talking of the sad ending of Garfield's life, led Mr. Marcy to recall the fact that Garfield in his early years was a wonderful shot, and especially with a rifle. One incident especially was fresh in his mind. He tells it thus: "Garfield was then teaching at Hiram, and I was living at Garrettsville, a lively little town only a few miles away. He was known far and near among the young fellows as the best shot in that part of the country. There was a young man named Hi Beecher, who kept a store in Garrettsville, and he was himself pretty good on the shoot, and he was, too. He had got him a new rifle, and had been practicing for months, on purpose to get ready to beat Garfield. He had a target back of his store, a distance of about ten rods, and he blazed away at this day after day. He used a dead-rest, and by steady practice got so that he could put almost every ball inside a bull's-eye as small as a silver quarter. When he thought he had got himself in good trim, he told me to see James and get him to come around to the store and shoot with him. James used to come down to Garrettsville on a Saturday, when there wasn't any school, so the next time I saw him I told him all about it. He told him what the game was, to get him to shoot at ten rods and a dead-rest, and that if he did that way Hi would surely beat him. "Well," said James, "according to all the rules of war and the code of honor, the challenged party has the right to name the distance and the weapons. I'll see to him." After a while, as Hi and I were standing in front of the store, Garfield came along. I hadn't told Hi about seeing him before, and he called out to him and told him that Hi was getting a little conceited about being a crack shot, and wanted to shoot with him. They went out back of the store, and Hi pointed at the target. "Pahaw!" says James; "that's no distance to shoot. That's too much like boys' play. Let's make it twice as far, anyway." Hi objected some, but James told him he was the challenged party, and had the choice, and they agreed to shoot at the fence, about twenty rods off when they commenced to fire. Hi was going to use a rest. "Oh stand up like a man and shoot off-hand," says James. This was another settler on Hi, but he had to do it, or back down. Well, they fired six shots a piece, and all of James' bullets were plumped in close together, while Hi's were straggled along over a string of three feet or so long. Hi's practice had not helped him much, and he had to own up beat. I never shall forget how Garfield looked as he went back into the store, and putting on his overcoat, stood for a minute so broad-shouldered and manly, and his face so good-natured as he smilingly said: "Well, Hi, wherever you just send for me to come down again, and I'll try to help you get rid of it," and he hurried out laughing, to catch the stage to go back to Hiram. —Every sort of a mishap or accident that occurs within a block of the corner of Broadway and Pearl streets is laid by the Nonpareil to the street railway track. Of course it is nothing but the petty outcropping of a boyish spite felt by the alleged editor toward the manager of the street railway. If it is half as honest in its desire to have the streets in good condition for driving as it pretends to be, it would clear away the old lumber, ash-piles and other obstructions which clutter the street alongside of its own office. The public is invited to look at the street railway track and then look at the piles of rubbish placed in the streets by the Nonpareil.

SHORT AND SWEET.

Such was the Special Session of the City Paternalia.

An adjourned special meeting of the city council was held Wednesday evening, at which there were present Ald. Fonda, Churchill, Spetman, Unthank, Phillips and Raine, the mayor presiding. The session was brief the regular order of business being hurried through with no wranglings or discussions. A batch of bills were presented and allowed. Notice was given that in the injunction suit begun in the district court, three amendments had been filed, making T. J. Evans, A. B. Walker and Charles Bond plaintiffs in the action against the city.

The matter of the condemnation of property, the ownership of which is claimed by Mr. Short, was reported on adversely to him, and was then referred to the city attorney.

The report of the committee of the whole, who inspected the improvement in progress on Main street, was deferred until the next meeting.

The action of the fire department was confirmed by a unanimous vote, making C. D. Voorhis and Peter Rykendale drivers for the Rescue steam-er and hose cart, and John Madden driver of the Bluff City hose cart, their pay to commence when actual service shall begin.

The supervisor was instructed to attend to several crossings and culverts needing repairs.

A new sidewalk was ordered on the west side of Fourth street between Willow and Fifth street.

Ald. Uthank was authorized to plant a lamp-post on Eighth street at the end of the sidewalk.

The question of selling the old hand engine to parties desiring to purchase it was informally talked over and it seemed to be the unanimous opinion of all that it was best to wait a bit and let the new council settle the matter.

Adjournment was then had until the next regular meeting one week from to-night.

Cutting Loose from Council Bluffs in Congressional Matters.

Straddling the Prohibition Question - Spirits of Prophecy in Demand. Correspondence of the Bee. CLARINDA, Iowa, February 21.—Now that the question of the number of representatives in congress Iowa will be entitled to seems to be settled, the next step among our politicians is the re-districting of Iowa. The state will now be divided into eleven districts, and as a matter of course will disarrange old district boundaries. The south side of the state wants to be cut loose from Council Bluffs lest in the scramble for congressional honors as a Bluffite might carry off the prize, leaving Page county's favorite son only a two-year old and postponing the chances of Col. Anderson Smith, McPherson, J. Y. Stone, L. T. McCann, F. M. Davis, Will Laughlin, Mr. Rowell and others who might wear congressional honors with credit to themselves and honor to the state. In order to accommodate the politicians of the south side, some of the aspirants favor cutting off a shoestring district two counties wide, extending from the Missouri river eastward half across the State. But this shoe-string system of districting has been found not altogether satisfactory in other States, and might not work well in Iowa. The next important matter coming before the public is the temperance amendment to the constitution of the State. Many of the people are striving to learn in advance which will be the popular side of the question, and none are more careful of expressing opinions on this subject than local politicians. In Page county we have eight republican newspapers, but of these only two can yet be counted in favor of the amendment. The county seat has four papers—The Journal, which has a pair of editors who respectively take different sides of the question; The Democrat, which opposes the amendment at every stage; The Daily Star, which is openly in favor of the amendment, and The Herald, the oldest paper in the county, whose editor is whistling while passing through the graveyard of doubt, to keep his courage up, and alternately quotes from the different sides, and seems to be praying "Good Lord, good devil," not being certain whose hands he will fall in, and wishing to keep his friends with both sides, and stand a good chance to lose friends instead of gaining.

Party wire-pullers are also at a loss to know how to meet the question, as the democrats are not all in favor of the amendment, nor republicans all opposed to it. Many a politician would give much to be blessed with the spirit of prophecy, so as to discuss what will be the predominant theory in years to come.

St. Valentine's day was properly observed, and many were the quiet jokes played upon each other by the fun loving youngsters of our city. The small pox scare has almost entirely abated. No new cases have been reported for some time past, but it must be confessed the disease was terribly fatal in the families afflicted with it.

Brother J. W. Chaffin has been home for a few days arranging his business preparatory to removing to Council Bluffs. He and his partner, S. D. Street, Esq., will in a few days commence the publication of The Council Bluffs Weekly Herald, and his many friends here are pleased to know that his enterprise is starting out under very favorable auspices. Mr. C. will publish a good, live republican paper, and having located in one of the liveliest cities in the state, his opportunities for serving the public well as a journalist will now be better than ever before. Very many of the old patrons of The Clarinda Herald and his neighbors in our city regret to see us, but wish him success in his new paper and new home.

Railroad matters are very quiet, but the contractors use all the good weather and some of the bad in hurrying on the work on the H. & S. railroad, which, when completed, will bring you much nearer to us than now. When the H. & S. begins to carry mail over this route we hope to receive THE BEE by eight o'clock a. m. each morning. THURSDAY.

The mining product of Dubuque county last year was $34,000. The colored people of Corning are determined to have a church of their own.

The salary of Burlington aldermen is $1 for each meeting, and not to exceed $50 per annum.

The Brighton National bank has surrendered its charter, and will run hereafter as a private banking house.

The board of directors of the agricultural society of Louisa county has appropriated $100 to encourage an educational exhibition at their county fair, which will be held September 12th.

The Second Iowa cavalry will hold a reunion in Davenport June 13, 14 and 15, provided the surviving members so desire. All who were in the Second cavalry are requested to send name and address to the secretary of the executive committee, J. W. N. Rumpke, Marengo, Iowa.

The bonded debt of Cedar Rapids is now $33,000, and the floating debt about $8,000. The receipts of the city taxes have been about $9,000. The total debt of the city of all kinds at the time of settlement next month, will probably be not over $36,000.

The total indebtedness of Marshall is $55,000, which debt is part of the cost of the water-works, which the city own and are valued at $200,000, and out of which the city derives a revenue now of $1,000 more than the cost of maintenance per annum, without any cost of fire protection.

Hiram Van Raden, a German farmer, living five miles northeast of Carroll, was found dead in his bed last Sunday afternoon. A package or poisonous preparation, labeled, "Rough on Rats," was found near the bed, opened, and a part of its contents gone, the means of the unfortunate man's death. There is some question as to whether it was a case of murder or suicide, though it is believed it is the latter.

A newly married couple indulged in a wedding tour from Maynard to Quasqueton, and the bridegroom, who was not exactly a temperance fanatic, took so much wine and other stimulants for his stomach's sake as to forget the respect that was due his wife, and he conducted himself in such an outrageous manner that she became alarmed, and left the buggy, leaving her lord to pursue his lonely way to Quasqueton. She has gone home to her father, and the young man, at last accounts, had sobered completely and was unsuccessfully trying to persuade his wife to come and live with him.
