History of the Courtship and Marriage of Caroline Leroy to Daniel Webster.

N. Y. Times, Feb. 28. On the main street of New Rochelle, about five minutes' walk from the deyears. She was confined to her bed ness and politeness. Those was were by an attack of rheumatic fever, which more intimate were often entertained oon developed into pneumonia. As by her anecdotes of her husthere was every indication that it was to be the venerable invalid's last sickness, her physician notified her surviving relatives, and they came to the old-fashioned mansion. The patient's death was perfectly painless, and it seemed to those who passed the last hour at her bedside rather as if she had fallen asleep than that she had died. Her last word was a request to her faithful maid, Miss Catherine Leonard, which that person could not obey before her mistress had passed away. At the beside were the brothers of the deceased lady, Daniel Leroy and William Henry Leroy, Mrs. Jacob Leroy, her sister-in-law, and Mr. and

Mrs. Robert Edgar. The funeral will take place to-morrow morning from Trinity church, New Rochelle, and the body will be buried in Woodlawn cemetery. The ervice will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Canady. Mrs. Webster was thoroughly American in education, tastes, and sentiments. She was Daniel Webster's second wife, and was born in New York City in 1797. Her father was the late Herman Leroy, head of the once famous commercial of the couths exiled, with their instruct ra house of Leroy, Bayard, McKiven & Co., who had a large trade in different parts of the world. Mr. Leroy was also the first Holland consul to the United States. Mrs. Webster's last Sunday. United States. Mrs. Webster's United States. Mrs. Webster's mother was Hannah Cornell, a daughter of the last of the royal attorneys general of the state of North Carolina. Caroline was one of eleven children, and inherited from her pachildren, and inherited from her pabirth and high connections. Even in a percentage of worshipers of 44 92. her girlhood days she was noted for a certain stately and impressive de meanor that caused her playmates to look up to her with deferential respect. She was sent to a fashionable boarding school in New Brunswick, N. J., where she received her advertion and on her received her advertion of any other city of equal numbers in her girlhood days she was noted for a Rew Brunswick, N. Her father's house at this period was at No. 76 Broadway, then one of the fashionable centres of the city, and it was here that, in 1828, she was first introduced to Daniel Webster, the introduced to Daniel Webster, the senator from Massachusetts. Those conversational abilities, which had harmed so many of the visitors in her father's house, soon captivated the distinguished senator, and, after only a few months' courtship, he married her. The ceremony was performed in Grace church in February, 1829, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage.

The bride went at once to Boston, where she was introduced to Mr. Webster's relatives, upon whom she appears to have made the same favorable impression she had wrought among her acquaintances in the Me-After a brief stay in Massachusetts, the couple went to Washington, where Mrs. Webster's receptions soon became talked of as the most brilliant of the social gatherings then held in the capitol. She was now in her favorite element, and shone to advantage as the hostess in numberless entertainments, which used to draw to Mr. Webster's house the elite of the capital, and foreigners of rank as well as distinguished American legislators. Ambassadors and literary men used to flock to the receptions and thus gave to Mrs. Webster an opportunity of cultivating at this time were Henry Clay, John C.
