DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

A Family Chloroformed and the House Burglarized.

The Rascals Miss Much of the Plunder They Are After.

Another bold case of criminality is reported from Stutsman street, the scene of which lays in the immediate vicinity of the assault and robbery last Monday night. The family who were the victims of this robbery are named Reife, their house being near Plattner street, and the family being the next door neighbors to Mr. Hubbard of the Nonpareil, whose wife was knocked down and robbed in front of her own door Tuesday night. The house occupied by the Reife family was burglarized last Friday night, but the matter was kept rather quiet, as the family thought they had a clue by which possibly they might solve the mystery and catch the thieves. It appears that some time during the night burglars succeeded in effecting an entrance and chloroforming those in the house, so that they had plenty of time to ransack the rooms. It is supposed that the burglars had become possessed of the fact that there was about $300 in currency in the house, for they hunted in almost every nook and corner. They secured, however, only about $55, that amount being in the bureau. There were two other rolls of money which they missed, however, one being hidden in one of the beds, where they could not find it, and the other roll was in the pocket of a pair of pants which was placed under another bed. Had the thieves found these bills their night's work would have been more profitable.

The family were very heavily chloroformed, and did not arouse and find their loss until late the next morning. Fortunately no serious results followed, and they soon recovered from the sickening effects.

A Movement to Organize a Branch in Council Bluffs.

A few weeks ago THE BEE chronicled the fact that there was some talk of starting a Young Men's Christian association in this city. Since that time the matter has been more fully agitated, and it is deemed by many not only advisable, but practicable. A meeting has therefore been called to be held at the Presbyterian church to-morrow evening, commencing at 7:30 o'clock, at which time and place the subject will be talked over, and some definite step decided upon. It is desired that all who are in any way interested will be present. The invitation is a broad one, and includes not merely young men, but business men, employers, in fact all who would like to see the young men of this city afforded better chances for social, intellectual and moral improvement.

It is desired that those who have any practical suggestions concerning this work should freely present them at this meeting, so that all the wisdom possible may be concentrated upon the initial movement.

Those who have thus far talked over the matter seem to favor a broad plan, by which the organization will not be merely for the purpose of holding religious meetings, though that is one feature of importance, but for arranging lectures, providing social and reading rooms, furnishing homes and employment, looking after strangers, and doing whatever will tend to make young men happier or better. There exists among many a sort of ill-defined and yet stubborn prejudice against this class of associations, deeming them only fit for what are sneeringly called "goodies," and claiming that they draw about them only a class of dependents and sluggish sort of fellows. In some places those prejudices are so strong that well founded, but the fault in these instances are not in the institutions, but in the manner of conducting it. If live business men, whose ability and wisdom as well as integrity of character command respect and confidence, are put at the head, and a good practical man is secured as manager, such an institution in this city can do a great good, and be a help to employers and employees, to citizens and to strangers. The start is therefore one of the all important things, and there should be such a great attendance, such a free expression of opinions, that no mistake may be made in the initial step.

THE CITY FINANCE.

They Seem to Have a Discouraging Look.

Some of the newly elected aldermen have been looking over the books, and with the assistance of Recorder Burke find that the total number of warrants issued to date on the general fund are enough to about exhaust the levy. The following is the showing of the general fund:

Assessment for 1881 $29,730.66
Warrants issued to date 25,784.4
Ten per cent. reserve $6,942.19
Balance $3,946.13

The ordinance requires that the warrant shall not need the full amount of the assessment by ten per cent. This leaves but a small balance for the new council to draw warrants against, to say nothing of the injunctions which reduce the available funds. There is nothing in the police funds, and the library and bonds funds are kept distinct.

Despised.

By the unthankful Burdock has been considered a weed, and its luxuriant growth, unpleasant smell, etc., has rendered it to those "not knowing its virtues" a nuisance, and yet the root has long been acknowledged by savants as most invaluable as a diuretic, aperient and blood purifier. Burdock Blood Bitters embody all its good qualities. Price $1.00, trial size 50 cents.

NIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY.

The Vault in Which Garfield Rests the Subject of Experiment.

Mr. Richard Jahr, a young German chemist and photographer, has accomplished a great feat among photographers; he has succeeded in taking the first picture by moonlight. A few photographers and scientists, including the late Professor Draper, have taken photographs of the moon, but these are so-called "moonlight views," but they are taken at sunrise and printed dark. The Philadelphia Photographer of February, 1882, says moonlight photographs never have been taken, and the author gives it as his opinion that the feat is possible. Mr. Jahr is a native of Berlin, a pupil of the eminent German photographer Dr. Vogel. He came to America and New York in August, 1881, and to Cleveland about two months ago.

GARFIELD'S TOMB THE SUBJECT.

When he determined to attempt photography by moonlight, he selected a subject of sad national interest, the vault in Lake View cemetery which contains Garfield's body. He brought a letter of introduction from the Y. M. C. A. to Mr. J. E. Ryder, and the latter aided the young German by allowing him the use of apparatus. Mr. Jahr, one moonlight night about two weeks ago, took his camera to Lake View, and made an attempt to photograph the vault. He says a moonlight photograph is possible only with the new gelatine-bromide plates, which are very sensitive, and will take a picture fifteen times quicker than with the older process. The first night the plate was exposed three and a half hours, but no picture was obtained. The operator knew not how to proceed or what was needed, and before he attempted, but he saw several defects in his methods which at the next trial he was able to remedy.

The second evening he went out the moon was obscured by clouds, and he lingered in the cemetery for four hours in vain.

THE PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN.

On the evening of March 3 the young German made his third scientific pilgrimage to Lake View. The night was clear and very beautiful. He set up his camera a few minutes before 8 o'clock, and exposed his sensitive plate for seven hours to the moonlight. During that time he paced up and down the silent cemetery, with no companion but the equally silent soldier on guard. He contracted a severe cold and neuralgia, but at 3 o'clock in the morning he closed the camera, and behold! there was a shadow picture on his plate. The neuralgia was nothing then. He tramped back to town with his precious picture under his arm, developed his negative, and secured an excellent print.

HOW THE PICTURE LOOKS.

The photograph is peculiar. The sky is very white, the trees black. The vault is well taken, but the fact that the picture was taken by moonlight is made evident because the shadows fall in two directions. During the early part of the night the shadows fell to the west, and towards the morning to the east. The effect is peculiar. The negative was accidentally broken, but another can be taken from the one good print. Mr. Jahr expects to send a copy of his success to Mrs. Garfield, and other copies to the members of the Royal Family of Germany. He says this is a time of the year unfavorable for moonlight photography, but thinks that in the summer beautiful landscape views can be taken. He says that if anyone doubts that the picture was taken by moonlight, he can call the guard to testify.

MOVING JUMBO.

Futile Attempts to Get the Big Elephant on Shipboard—Brute Force Triumphed.

London Cor. New York Post.

Last Saturday night the first attempt was made to get the leviathan to the Persian Monarch, the steamship selected for the transfer of Jumbo to the "great moral show" of America. Two or three of Mr. Barnum's agents, well versed in the care and management of elephants, aided Mr. Scott in the enterprise. At first was thought necessary to impress on Jumbo the notion of restraint and subjection. At the outset a strong chain was strapped around one of his forelegs, and made firm to the walls of the stall. Jumbo viewed this innovation with evident concern, but without resentment. A second chain passed around the other foreleg excited his ire considerably, and when a third chain was passed around his head and backward between the forelegs he broke into open revolt. Trumpeting his rage he lashed about him with his trunk, strove to break his bonds and to dash at his tormentors. Jumbo's comrades in the elephant house joined their outcries to his, and the uproar continued until the mighty captive was exhausted and became comparatively quiet. Then he was led to the door of the elephant house. Near it there had been dug a slanting excavation. In the hole had been placed a great box on wheels, and up to the entrance behind slanted a set of stout gang planks. Up these Jumbo was led. He knew well enough what was wanted of him, but persuasion and force alike failed to induce him to enter. Several times the vast creature went up the ascent, but recoiled at the entrance. At last the big fellow's obstinacy triumphed for the time over human persistence, and Jumbo was led back to his stall.

Yesterday morning, a second attempt of a different kind resulted in equal failure. Jumbo, forlorn and despondent, was led out in the hope that he would take his way quietly to the steamer through the London streets. An early hour was chosen, so that the brute might not be alarmed by the traffic of the thoroughfares. All went finely until Jumbo was just outside the "Zoo" gates. Then he suddenly stopped, and finding himself on new soil and in an unfamiliar place, he fell on his knees with a piteous look of appeal to his keeper, and refused to budge. With some difficulty he was led back once again to his old quarters, where today I saw him weeping and gnashing his teeth with unabated appetite for the most abundant and stimulating peasant.

The next effort to circumvent Jumbo will be made a few days hence. The box trick will be tried on him again under easier conditions. The structure will be made stronger and set lower down on smaller wheels, so as to give less ascent and secure for the box on its way to the steamer a more stable equilibrium. When at the dock it will be hoisted bodily on board and partly sunk in a bathway, so that Jumbo will make his ocean voyage in the double character of saloon and deck passenger. This is the present plan, which may yet have to be revised and improved. But Jumbo cannot for long set his brute obstinacy against man's craft. An irritated Briton at the gardens remarked to-day: "The Americans will have him if they have to make a mummy of him."

Maine News.

Hop Bitters, which are advertised in our columns, are a sure cure forague, biliousness and kidney complaints. Those who use them say they cannot be too highly recommended. Those afflicted should give them a fair trial, and will become thereby enthusiastic in the praise of their curative. — Portland Argus, Mar 1-12w

Rosewater and the Alliance.
Editors Salline County Standard:

It is not my besetting vice to rush untidily into print on slight provocation, but there is such wide spread misapprehension by friends, and such persistent misrepresentation by enemies in regard to Mr. Rosewater's alleged connection with the Alliance that I think I am justified in devoting a few words to it. I would request all Nebraska papers which are interested in the subject or friendly to the Alliance to publish this item.

From the day the State Alliance was organized, in January, 1881, it has had a settled and well defined policy in regard to political action. The policy has not been heralded from the house tops, but it has been pursued consistently and steadily from that day to this. This policy was not inspired by Mr. Rosewater, was not the result of any conference with him, and has never been confided to him. Before the alliance was formed or thought of, THE OMAHA BEE, if I am rightly informed, was a consistent anti-monopoly paper. It continues to be so, and as such has my sincere respect. The publishers of THE BEE or its responsible editors, have the sole credit for that attitude. The alliance has never advised it, and is in no way responsible for it. In fact, the alliance has no manner of complication with THE BEE, nor with its responsible editor, nor THE BEE or its editor with the alliance. Each is as independent as though the other had no existence.

The Alliance has, at this time, no candidates for United States senator, or any other office, and is not compromised in any manner with any individual or any party.

Much puerile and vindictive criticism has been wasted upon the fact that Mr. Rosewater was present at the Hastings convention. The invitation to that convention, published in nearly every paper in the state, was sufficiently broad. It included all friends of the alliance, whether members or not. No formal invitations to that meeting were issued from this office. Rosewater, Gen. Viquah and others were informed that no formal invitations were issued, but that our friends who were present would probably be heard. Other officers of the alliance have invited many persons to the meetings. Mr. Rosewater as a pronounced friend of the alliance, and as a publisher and editor of a perfect right to be present, and the convention had a perfect right to invite him to address it, which he did. Other journalists were present, yourself among the number, without exciting any adverse criticism upon the alliance or themselves. I am perfectly well aware that the action of the convention in regard to the formation of a new party would have been precisely the same as it was had Mr. Rosewater not been present.

I make these statements solely to correct wide spread misapprehension. THE BEE is an able and consistent anti-monopoly journal, and has stood manfully by the alliance, while other leading papers of the state have treated it with contempt. If the alliance was not grateful for this support and did not reciprocate by supporting THE BEE, instead of such facile tools of the corporations as THE Republican, Herald and State Journal, its members would be strange people indeed.

While the misrepresentations I have alluded to are unpleasant, the alliance seems to be thriving wonderfully under the inflictions. There are now nearly four hundred subordinate alliances in the state, and the number is increasing daily. The farmers, whether members or not, are a unit on anti-monopoly questions, and will vote solidly on them, without being bluffed by ridicule or diverted by side issues.

Yours, etc.,
J. BURROWS,
Secretary of State Alliance.
