PRANCING PHYSICIANS.

Commencement Day Exercises at the Medical College.

Banquet to the Fraternity at the Withnell House.

A Big Day For the Students on the Hill.

The commencement exercises of the Omaha Medical College took place last evening at the college building on Mason and Eleventh streets.

HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE. In the fall of 1880 a few physicians of Omaha and neighboring towns inaugurated a preparatory school under the name of the 'Nebraska School of Medicine.'

The college building is pleasantly located on the southwest corner of Mason and Eleventh streets adjoining St. Joseph's Hospital. It is two stories high, and contains two large lecture rooms, chemist's room, library and museum, room, patients' room, dissecting and anatomical room, etc.

The faculty as at present constituted includes some of the brightest men of this profession in the city or state and is as follows: Robt. R. Livingston, president; George B. Ayres, M. D., secretary; Robt. R. Livingston, M. D., professor of principles and practice of surgery, Platismouth; Victor H. Coffman, M. D., professor of principles and practice of medicine; George B. Ayres, M. D., professor of anatomy, descriptive and surgical; Samuel D. Mercer, M. D., professor of operative and clinical surgery; P. S. Leisenring, M. D., professor of obstetrics and diseases of women; Jacob C. Denise, M. D., professor of physiology, and clinical lecturer on the eye and ear; Richard O. Moore, M. D., professor of materia medica and therapeutics; A. S. Y. Mansfield, M. D., professor of general pathology; Ashland, Douglas A. Joy, E. M. D., professor of chemistry, Ann Arbor, Mich.; G. H. Peebles, M. D., professor of diseases of children, and adjunct of diseases of women, David C. John, C. Cowin, professor of medical jurisprudence; H. P. Mathewson, M. D., professor of diseases of the mind; state hospital for insane, Lincoln; W. S. Gibbs, M. D., demonstrator of anatomy.

The lecture last night was held in the large east lecture room in the second story of the college. The seats are arranged in a semi-circle, rising in tiers one above the other. The pleasant room was comfortably crowded before 7:30 p. m., the hour advertised for the exercises to begin.

The first toast was: "Medical legislation for the protection of the people and for the benefit of the physicians." Hon. E. Rosewater responded.

It may be in accord with the eternal fitness of things that I should be called upon to respond to the toast. If I had been called upon some years ago, when I was connected with legislation of this character, I should have responded in the affirmative.

At 8 o'clock the president and board of trustees, accompanied by the faculty, entered the lecture room. The latter included: Edward Dietrich, of Omaha; Geo. V. Ellis, of Dakota; F. D. Halderman, of Iowa City; James E. Haddley, of Belle Creek; U. H. Norris, of Greenwood; Robt. Muntz, of Seward; J. W. Search, of Omaha, and Werner Hempstead, of Pappillon.

Dr. Coffman called the assembly to order and introduced Dr. S. D. Mercer, the president of the board of trustees, who was to confer the diplomas on the graduates.

There is no legislation worthy of mention yet, but you have made the first step. I hope Nebraska will soon have laws on this subject as well as other states.
