His transactions are felt in the exchanges of the world. He has lived here and hereabouts since his boyhood, when his father was carving his way to a monumental fortune, but aside from the regular drivers on the road it is doubtful if there are five hundred men in Manhattan Island who know that they ever saw this possessor of $200,000,-000. As the prematurely early spring pires to be. air was gradually changing to the normal temperature of a yet undeveloped March, Mr. Vauderbilt slowly left the unique portal of his solid home on Fifth avenue, squinted with one eye at the clouds that threatened wind from the east, buttoned his thick coas tight in the neck and leisurely passed toward the great cathedral. Of the ow men, woman, children, nurses and coachmen near him not one recognized or turned to look at him. He is apparently a few inches less than six eet tall, stout and heavy. His feaures are large and expressive. He wears long side whiskers and black clothes. A stranger would judge him to be about 58 years old, not over strong and good natured.
