

THE DAILY BEE OMAHA. Monday Morning March 27.

LOCAL BRIEFINGS.

Yesterday was Passion Sunday. The Social Art club meets at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The rain has made Omaha the queen of mud again. The drunk yesterday kept out of the reach of the police. The Standard Club closed its season with a calico ball on April 19th. The democratic primaries will be held in this city on Thursday evening. Annie Pixley appears at Boyd's opera house, Tuesday evening, March 30th, in "Miles."

The Concordia Subscription Easter ball takes place a week from Monday night. The Red Cloud is expected to arrive from St. Louis to-day or to-morrow, bound for Benton. Beautiful Reidence Lots—$10 each, $5 down and $5 per month. Bemis, agent, 13th and Douglas streets.

It is estimated that the school census now being taken will show near 10,000 school children in Omaha. A woman fell at the crossing of Eleventh and Farnam streets Saturday night and cut her forehead badly. A quiet time has followed the recent excitement concerning the strike, but business is booming all the same.

The opening of the new brick on Douglas street, near Ninth street, was celebrated by "the boys" on Saturday evening. The Union Pacific train westward yesterday morning was a big one, being composed of nine coaches, all of which were well filled. The two boys arrested for stealing a revolver from the ninety-nine cent store have been discharged, no complaint being filed against them.

Leon Levi, sentenced to four years in the State's prison for receiving stolen goods, has taken an appeal to the Supreme Court, retaining Walter Bennett as counsel. The "Cannon-Ball" train was put on again yesterday by the old reliable Wabash road. This will be appreciated by none more than by the Omaha business men.

The "Union Spy" opens to-night at Boyd's opera house, and we venture to say will prove one of the most entertaining productions ever seen on an Omaha stage. The case of small pox on Sixteenth street is progressing favorably. One of the Sisters of Charity from St. Joseph's hospital went there yesterday and assumed attendance. Five hundred dollars cash will buy the stock and fixtures of the Michigan Tobacco Store, 1417 Douglas street. Business good, rent low. Satisfactory reasons given for selling. mar14-15

Justice Savage was at the court room this morning to take bail in the Van Norman case but the bondsmen did not appear at the hour set. Bail is fixed as in the other cases at $1,500. The remains of Wm. Grindell, the conductor who died on Friday, were sent by Undertaker Jacobs to friends in Plattville, Wisconsin, yesterday morning, having been brought to this city Saturday evening.

Seventy-five gentlemen and ladies of Omaha, and a battalion of regular soldiers from Fort Omaha, will participate in the production of "The Union Spy," by the immediate supervision of Col. E. B. Temple. The position of registrar of the Fourth ward, made vacant by the resignation of Captain John S. Wood, has been filled by the appointment of ex-Mayor Wilbur. Captain Wood enters upon his duties in the mail service to-day.

Dputy Sheriff Charles Linton, of Denver, on Wednesday last in that city arrested, on a requisition from Nebraska, J. P. McMillan, a vendor of elliptic patent spring bedsteads, who is wanted for certain alleged land swindles in Nebraska. Saturday afternoon a north bound freight train on the Omaha & St. Paul railroad was ditched seven miles south of Fort Calhoun, owing to the spreading of the rails. The engine, tender and six cars went into the ditch, the engine being badly wrecked.

Mr. A. Benzon and the B. & M. road are engaged in a controversy as to certain matters concerning a barn which stood on the condemned property now being graded and the road's attorney, Charlie Green, has sworn out a warrant charging Mr. Benzon with obstructing the streets. It would be interesting to have Mr. Green define wherein an obstruction of this character is more culpable than an obstruction by bayonet. The barn went like anybody any way.

A man named Richard Ryan, who said he came from the end of the B. & M. track, where he was engaged as a spike driver, and that he was on his way to this city, where he had friends, was picked up at the B. & M. depot at Lincoln yesterday and taken to the Infirmary, where he died a few hours later. He had said that he was from Pennsylvania, and came west about five years ago; that he was a single man, and his employer owed him a month's wages. About $45 in currency were found upon his person. Pneumonia was the fatal disease.

Amidst the various reverses the business of the Slaven Hotel had to contend against the past year, there was none so disastrous to it, as the late "small pox scare." Still its ever popular proprietor has been at work again lately renovating its numerous apartments, and now we find the house open once more for the entertainment of guests. In fact it is almost fully again. We learn from a reliable source that the city physician pronounced the house safe four weeks ago. Fancy Card Collections. WOMAN'S WRECK Of a Family That Was Once Believed to be Happy.

A Divorce Case in Denver Which Will Interest Omaha People in Many Ways.

The subjects of the following article are well known in Omaha. Mr. Sperry was for some time in the livery business here, a clerk in the postoffice, a councilman and deputy sheriff. He also resided in this city until he received the appointment of post trader. The article is from the Denver Tribune of Saturday morning, and runs as follows: The taking of the depositions of witnesses for the plaintiff in the sensational divorce suit of Sperry vs. Sperry was concluded yesterday morning before Sam Mil'ton, commissioner, and the sealed testimony sent at once to the plaintiff's attorneys in Yankton, Dakota. Several additional witnesses were examined, their testimony all being to the effect that Mrs. Sperry had lived with Daniel Gregory as his wife, and had been married to Gregory, the transaction having been, it is alleged, illegal in a double sense and that both had been guilty of other gross irregularities which would hardly fit either for a place very high in the religious or social circles in which the woman had once moved. Mrs. Willoughby, who came down from Morrison, testified that Gregory and the defendant had formerly roomed at her house, living together as man and wife. Julius Levy stated that Mrs. Sperry admitted that she was Gregory's wife when the latter was in jail charged with rape. All stated that she claimed to have been MARRIED TO GREGORY by Justice C. S. Eyster on the 14th of November, 1880. Stephen B. Hudson's testimony was similar to his confederates. Detective Joe Arnold related the fact of the arrest of Gregory when he found them together on Chatham street occupying the same apartment. In reference to the private character of Mrs. Sperry, the witness states that she was a completely wrecked mentally, physically and morally, and had been living in a tent with Gregory somewhere in the suburbs of the city. Witnesses stated that she drank continually and to the most frightful excess; that her associates were the lowest of the low, and that from being the happy and loved wife of a prosperous and influential man she had sunk to the slums where the streets had almost become her home and the gutter her bed, all through her own infatuation and foolishness.

She told one of the witnesses that she had tried Sperry for twenty years, and was now determined to stand by Gregory. After the examination a Tribune reporter met a former friend of Mrs. Sperry's, who knew all about her life and waywardness. The story of her life

READS LIKE A ROMANCE, or a page torn from a story of the slums of New York or Paris, and teaches nothing if it does not teach the fatality of the cup which a woman puts to her lips when she turns aside from the path of duty and turns from the calm but happy light of home to the forbidden fruit which hangs on either side. Twenty-eight years ago, on the 1st day of October, 1845, at Nashua, New Hampshire, Angelina C. Sperry, was married to her present husband, who is now applying for a divorce. It was a notable event in the little village when Angie Fuller was married to Charles C. Sperry, the prominent Boston merchant. Sperry had a branch store in Nashua, and there he met Miss Miller. She was young and pretty then and a favorite in the little town. Sperry was burnt out twice in Boston, and in a day when fires were not so profitable as they are now. He took his family west to Omaha, where he took a position as money order clerk in the postoffice, and soon began to retrieve his fortune. His wife was a leader in

HER OWN SOCIAL CIRCLE then, every Sunday she occupied her pew at Trinity church and no one would have guessed the sad denouement which has since brought her to a hovel and a nameless relationship with an unworthy man.

Sperry again engaged in merchandizing, made money, and was finally appointed Indian agent and post trader at Yankton, Dakota. Here his wife met and became infatuated with his clerk, Daniel Gregory, a common looking fellow whose occupation or vocation has never been above the grade of the most common laborer, and ran away with him, coming by way of Omaha and Kansas City to Denver. The couple arrived here two years ago in June, and have been here ever since. From HERE THE STORY HASTES rapidly to her downfall and degradations and is given as nearly as possible in the relator's own language. "Before Mrs. Sherry left Yankton she ordered, for $1,200 worth of dresses and fine underclothes and had them charged to her husband. But so improvident were they about money matters that she had to pawn her watch in Kansas City to get money to pay George's fare to Denver. On her arrival here her sister paid her extra freight on her baggage, and she went to the house with "Dan" and that inevitable dog Prince, with a sore leg, which is always with her. "What were her habits here?" "She laid drunk on the floor from morning until night beside the dog, and Gregory was not much better. The most horrible things are related of both of them. The woman would go out to the saloon about 10 o'clock at night and get more whisky, and she and Gregory would lay around the room from morning until night. The couple moved on its way from Chicago, and will make access to the second and the third floors easy. We wish the new firm all success, and they will undoubtedly win it.

SMITH ON DECK. The Wheeler & Wilson Agent on His Way to Omaha.

Something New About the Robbery Racket, and Another Side to the Embezzlement Story.

Sidney Smith, the runaway general agent of the Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine company, is by this time on his way to Omaha from Little Rock, Ark., where he was arrested on a telegraphic request last week. Deputy Sheriff Crowell went after Smith on Friday, and it is expected, will return with him this evening. The statement in THE BEE that Smith was acting as the agent of the company in that city was partly incorrect, owing to the mistake in the dispatch sent from Little Rock. Smith was engaged in the sale of Wheeler & Wilson machines, but as a canvasser for the agent, whose name is Robbins.

It appears that the company have been cognizant of Smith's whereabouts for some time, but have continued to watch him until some facts could be arrived at which would establish a case on the charge of embezzlement. The amount for which Smith is claimed to be a defaulter is not known, nor can it be until the accused man produces the books which have been missing since his departure. These books will enable the company to learn their exact loss.

Among the causes for Smith's default is the robbery, which he claimed to have suffered about five weeks previous to his departure. At the time his robbery was alleged to have been committed, some doubts existed concerning the actual occurrence, but after developments show that Smith was doubtless victimized to the tune of two or three hundred dollars. He was known to have drawn $500 from the bank in the afternoon for the purpose of paying for certain furniture and carpets which he had put into the new office rooms in the opera house block. Instead of paying the bills mentioned, however, his evil genius, whisky, got the better of him and by night he was wandering around in the neighborhood of the dives on Tenth street, between Douglas and Dodge streets. He was inveigled into one of the dives, where a notorious colored woman known as "Slick Sal" hangs out. How long was there it is not known, but the city agent of the company states that Smith came to the office about 2 o'clock in the morning and said that he had been robbed. Although at first not definite as to where he had been "touched" at length his head cleared enough to enable him to remember where he had been. He then alleged that this "Slick Sal" had invited him into her place and had given him something to drink, after which she told him to lie down on the couch and go to sleep. He did so and while asleep, was faintly conscious of somebody's going through him, but was unable to move or prevent them.

After while he aroused himself and went out and steered for the office. While on the way he found that all of his money except $50 had been taken, but he had forgotten where he had been. When he finally recovered his mind he insisted that he had been doctored and the money taken from him by the negro women referred to. One of Smith's friends investigated the matter as thoroughly as he could the following day, and discovered that the negro woman had skipped out, but where she had gone no one would tell. It was afterwards discovered that she had gone to Sioux City with a negro gambler who was her "solid man," and that they together had spent most of the money there.

This unfortunate affair is stated by an employe of the office to have made Smith very despondent and he seemed to have entirely lost his grip. The affairs of the office went backward and three weeks slipped along without Skipped making a report. The result of this was the change of agents. Smith's after disappearance has been published heretofore, and the particulars of it are familiar to THE BEE readers. It is expected that when Smith is examined he may have some interesting statements to make concerning other parties who were in the office under his same time ago. The general opinion of those who know the arrested man best is that he did not intend to defraud the company, but that when he was "touched" he tried to make it up by extra sales, and then, being removed, resolved to skip out and take the books with him, in order to leave the affair clouded as much as possible.

BURGLARS MAKE A HAUL. The Residence of John Little, the Grocer, Robbed of $250. Valuable Gold Watch, Jewelry and Money Taken. A well executed burglary was committed Saturday night upon the house of John Little, the grocer, on South Nineteenth street. A gold watch of valuable workmanship and highly prized because of its associations, two gold breastpins, a pair of heavy gold sleeve buttons and about $50 in cash were stolen.

The entrance to the house was effected through a front bay window, which was left unfastened, so that the burglars easily pushed it up. The hour of the burglary is put by Mr. Little at about 4 o'clock, as he had been up about every hour previous to that time to attend to one of his children who was ill. When he finally sank to sleep it was to slumber very soundly, and the family did not awaken till late in the morning. Whether chloroform had been used or not he was unable to tell, as the odor of

THE UNION SPY. The Opening Night of the Grand Military Drama.

Other Dramatic Events Near at Hand

On Saturday evening the final rehearsal of the grand military and spectacular drama, the Union Spy, which will be presented for the first time this evening at Boyd's opera house, took place in that temple of Thespis with most satisfactory results. This drama has been in course of preparation for several weeks, under the supervision of Colonel E. B. Temple, the author, and is produced under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic for the benefit of the widows' and orphans' relief fund. The cast has been well and carefully chosen and the training thorough and constant. The consequence is that the rehearsal itself was a splendid entertainment, and with all the stage accessories, scenic effects and tableaux which will be added at the regular performance to-night it will be one of the most exciting and thrilling plays ever seen in Omaha.

Col. Temple has done some splendid work for the boys of Custer post, and it cannot but result in a great success financially. The appearance of a battalion of regulars in the flag presentation scene, the battle scene and the scene in the Andersonville prison, will each call forth the heartiest admiration, and for the tableaux and battle in which the dramatic boots appear and shell the woods are most effective. Col. Temple is himself an actor of rare ability, and he will be well supported in all the parts.

The securing of special low rates on all the railroads leading into the city will secure the attendance of a large number of visitors from abroad, and the entertainments of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinees will be all too few to accommodate the crowds who will desire to see "The Union Spy."

Following "The Union Spy," on Thursday evening the favorite actress, Annie Pixley, appear at Boyd's in "M'Lisa or the Child of the Sierras." "We have heretofore recorded our conviction of this gifted actress and pretty woman. In her line she is nonpareil, combining the frolic and chic of Lotta with the archness of Charlotte Thompson. We know no actress who could combine so much as does Miss Pixley, and we are sure our public will welcome her appearance here on next Thursday night."

On Friday and Saturday evening and in matinee Saturday afternoon, this great tragedian will appear at Boyd's playing Macbeth, Rigoletto, and Fool's Revenge. An exchange says: "Keene's conception of the ambitious Macbeth, like everything else that Mr. Keene does, is full of striking originalities. The Thane of Cawdor as presented by the tragedian, is a man of singular nobility, goaded on to unnatural deeds of blood by his lust for ambition, but with a moral weakness which palliates his purpose. Macbeth, when he has gained the throne, is tortured by the memories of his crime. The portrayal of the conflicting emotions of the character by Mr. Keene is said to be the acme of stage art. In the final scene of the play, a prominent critic says, 'Mr. Keene's Macbeth is the incarnation of despair. Like a lion driven into a corner, he turns upon his persecutors, fights with terrible energy, and dies most effectively.' The patrons of the Shakespearean drama have a rich treat in store for them. A company of universal excellence supports Mr. Keene this season."

HAZEL KIRKE. The great dramatic success "Hazel Kirke," will be given at Boyd's opera house, Monday and Tuesday, April 3rd and 4th. Mr. R. S. Wires, business manager of the Madison Square "Hazel Kirke" company, is in the city, making the necessary arrangements.

Economy. A fortune may be spent in using inefficient medicines, when by applying THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL a speedy and economical cure can be effected. In cases of rheumatism, lame back, bodily ailments or pains of every description, it affords instant relief. nch2-1w

A Care of Thanks. To Messrs. J. J. Dickey, Jay Northrup, C. K. Cradle and F. S. Smith, Committee. Allow me to extend to you my most sincere thanks for the interest you have taken in my behalf in originating and carrying out the plan for the complimentary concert tendered me. Through you I desire to express my heartfelt thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly took part in the entertainment and made it such a complete success. And to the press for the many courtesies extended to me in so thoroughly advertising the affair. Also to the public for the large attendance and kind appreciation. Very sincerely, LIZZIE CALDERWOOD.
