

THE DAILY BEE OMAHA. Monday Morning April 3

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The moon is full. The steamer Tid Cloud is hourly expected at this point. Prairie fires lit up the horizon with a ghastly glare last night. The remains of Billy Doyle were interred yesterday in the Douglas Co. cemetery. The street car track, from Hancock Park to the depot, will be within two blocks of St. Mary's Avenue. Land agent Judd, of the U. P. has gone down into Missouri to bring up a big party of settlers for Montana. "Hazel Kirke" is certain to attract an immense house next Monday evening. Get your seats without delay. A row occurred on Tenth street last evening, in which one of the parties was lashed and kicked. No arrests. The Madison Square theatre company, who appear at Boyd's to-night, are registered at the Creighton and Metropolitan. The winter term of the public schools ended Friday afternoon, and a week's vacation is to be given to the school children. The remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Hume arrived Saturday night from the east, and were interred from the family residence at 2 p. m. yesterday. Parties interested in the re-location of county roads No. 181, 182, 184 and 185 will remember that they will be heard at 2 p. m., April 14th. Delay in securing your seats for "Hazel Kirke" will result in your inconveniences and perhaps disappointment, by being unable to gain admission. How many suffering maidens in this town will be comforted by "Hazel Kirke's" experience and ultimate happiness, as will be portrayed next Monday evening. Andrew Bazar, 1038 Farnam, agent for the Universal Fashion Company's Perfect Patterns. Spring styles now ready. New ideas. Catalogues free, mch27-6t. Fresh cows for sale—Two extra fine thorough-bred Jersey cows; two extra fine common cows, kind and gentle. Graham P. Browne, Nebraska Poultry Farm, West Omaha, wed-sat-wed. The overland train from the west yesterday brought in three empty coaches and a baggage car, extra, from the west to accommodate the anticipated rush of travelers this week. Yesterday was a gala day, the splendid weather, almost as warm as June, enticing everybody out of doors. A great crowd thronged to Hancock Park, which was crowded all the afternoon. We have had no time or space to explain why THE BEE proposes to assert its rights through the courts in the matter of publishing the applications for licenses to sell liquor in the city, but we will do so after the election. Regular meeting of Capitol Lodge, No. 9, A. F. & A. M., this evening, April 3rd. A full attendance is desired, by order W. M. The city jail was full last night, thirteen offenders being run in between Saturday night and Sunday night. In this number were three Slocums, three disturbers of the peace, one bearer of concealed weapons and six unadmitted tramps. It was a hard crowd. Three hundred and ten foreigners arrived during the month of March to settle in Nebraska. On Saturday and Sunday, the first two days of the month, over one hundred persons arrived, indicating that the immigration this month will be much larger than last. In the police court Saturday there was quite a batch of offenders. Three arrests had been made for disturbing the peace, of which one paid, one was committed and one discharged. One plain trunk was sent to jail. Two men, found sleeping in a box car and hauled up as tramps, were discharged, one proving to be an employe of the road, and the other a new arrival seeking work on the line. Billy Doyle, a man well known to the sporting fraternity of this city, and Council Bluffs, died in the city jail Friday at the age of about thirty years. He was subject to epileptic fits and while struggling through one of these was taken to the jail in a carriage and died about midnight. His remains were taken to Coroner Jacobs' and an inquest was deemed unnecessary. Doyle's mother is now living at Onawa, Iowa, and the news of her son's death in the papers will be the first intimation she receives of his melancholy end. The city physician visited the camp at Florence Cut-off on Saturday and found that there had been but one genuine case of small pox there, a daughter of Michael Griffin. This case was concealed for some time, and the whole camp more or less exposed to the contagion. The work has been completely broken up, but five men remaining where there were previously eighty-five. The superintendent, Mr. James P. Vincent, left last evening for Onawa, Iowa, and will return to-morrow. The case which called Coroner Jacobs to Elkhorn on Saturday turns out to be decidedly mysterious. The alleged corpse was alleged to have died at Bell Creek, to have lain behind a store four days before it was confined, and then taken to Elkhorn to be "waked" and buried. The corpse was that of a female cousin of Samuel Keating, and the lightness of the box said to contain it gave rise to the belief that in reality there was nobody in the coffin at all. Reports of foul play are freely circulated, and it is claimed that the woman had some money which made it an object to get her out of the way. Coroner Jacobs will probably order an investigation. Profit, $1,200. "To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $2000 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit."—N. E. Farmer.

LEVEL HEADED LABORERS They Desert the H(r)ascal of the Second Ward in a Body.

The Party of Law and Order Show a Full Hand. A Remarkable Demonstration By the Workingmen's Party. They Do Not Propose to Be Bamboozled by Anybody. The call for a mass meeting of the workingmen of Omaha, at the Academy of Music on Saturday evening, met with a general response, and it was evident early in the day that the house would be packed. Hascall and the Knight party had it all cut and dried to ratify a star chamber ticket, but the great body of the workingmen did not propose to have such a set of men foisted upon them, and expressed openly their intention of attending and in an orderly way expressing their disapproval of the scheme. It is evident that the Hascall party intended to raise a row if they were interfered with from the fact that Manager Halbert was given the following bond of INDEMNITY FOR DAMAGES which might result from a conflict which the good sense and manliness of the real workingmen's party did not allow to take place. In consideration of obtaining from J. S. Halbert the Academy of Music at a reduced price, I hereby agree to assume charge of said Academy of Music this Saturday evening, April 1, 1882, and be responsible for any damage to same, and to return it at the close of the evening's occupation of same in as good order as it was received in, and make good any damage it may receive during the evening. (Signed) J. S. HASCALL. At an early hour the Academy of Music was crowded to its utmost capacity. A couple of men stood at the door and inspected all who applied for admittance, rejecting such as were supposed to be in opposition to the Hascall-Knight party. Admittance to the stage was guarded even more closely, and Mr. E. Rosewater, who was an invited guest, and the reporter of THE BEE were not only refused admittance but, on asking for the president of the International Labor union, Mr. P. Murphy, were informed that he was not present, when, as a matter of fact, he was. BUSINESS BEGINS. After some delay on the part of the managers the meeting was called to order by Mr. S. S. Van Buren, who introduced Mr. P. F. Murphy as the first speaker. In the course of a short speech Mr. Murphy said that he supposed this was a political meeting and a workingman's meeting. He hoped that whatever they did would be orderly and dignified. Of course they were all sorry that a difference of opinion had lately arisen, but he thought that there had been very little difference of opinion among the mass of the workingmen of Omaha. The great mass of the men had been attending to their business, but a few had been about creating a division. Regardless of what a few had been saying, he thought the movement all over the country was looking up, and that success appeared in the ascendant. If they did not succeed in all their wishes at present, they would in the near future. There was A SPIRIT ABROAD to discard the party, and he was sorry to say that this same spirit cared very little about principle. All they looked to was the man. For his part he cared little about the man, he looked at principles. Mr. William Tuttle being called for, rose and made a few remarks. He said while he was not at all posted in politics, he would deposit his ballot with whatever the laboring classes took in hand that evening, and he would try to use what influence he had to cause others to do the same. [Loud cheers.] Mr. Stranight, the candidate for the council in the Sixth, rose and said he would be proud of the honor to be elected to the city council, and if elected he would do his best. His creed was honest work and fair pay. He believed in that, and the only way to secure it is to have harmony among the workingmen. The workingmen should stand together and vote as a unit. He cautioned them. NOT TO BE BULLDOZED by any few men who may make up officers round town as in the past. At this juncture in the proceedings Mr. E. Rosewater rose and said that before the programme was put through he desired to say a few words. Thereupon the chairman jumped up and called Mr. Rosewater to order. If Mr. Rosewater wanted to make a speech he could do so after the programme had been put through. [Loud cries were then raised from every part of the house for Rosewater.] Mr. Rosewater continued speaking, and said he had been invited to speak at the meeting and they had closed the doors on him. Some one in the hall sprang to his feet and said: "If Mr. Rosewater comes here with a gang of hoodlums to interrupt this meeting he will find he has made a mistake." Amid considerable uproar Mr. Rosewater proceeded to point out that this CUT AND DRIED PROGRAMME was simply gotten up to fasten upon them a disgraceful fight at the polls. The chairman jumped up and said if this interruption was to continue he would adjourn the meeting. Mr. Rosewater replied that if the meeting was called for the purpose of creating dissension among the workingmen they had better leave that hall. He had been battling for the people for the last thirteen years and he asked that harmony prevail. He rose that harmony prevail. Mr. Rosewater then started to leave the hall when the entire assemblage amounting to about eight hundred persons simultaneously arose and left their seats, with the exception of about thirty. The chairman made frantic efforts to persuade them to stop, but his efforts were unavailing. The brass band which had been engaged for the occasion also trooped out. Peace having been restored among the chosen few who remained, Mr. Hascall delivered an harangue. He said that if there were but three sensible people left in that hall he proposed to say what he had to say. He was BOUND TO GO ON the side of law and decency. It was very easy to get up a sensation and take people from a hall. Mr. Rosewater had taken those men out of the meeting because he could not run it. It seemed to him that the fight had been left to himself, but he was going to fight it out. While he admitted that Rosewater had quite a new paper and often said very good things in it, still he regarded him as a bigger crank than Guiteau was and a bigger crank than Fonda ever dared to be. He urged them not to be discouraged and above all things he cautioned them against associating or ALLYING THEMSELVES WITH A "MOR" like they had seen there that evening. Mr. O'Keefe rose, and said that Mr. Rosewater had upset the meeting. He denounced Rosewater and Walsh in unmeasured terms, and said that next Tuesday Walsh would find that he cannot rule in this city, nor should he ever rule as long as he remained in it. During the delivery of these speeches there were several interruptions, and quite a number of the few who had remained left. The chairman said that as there appeared to be another meeting going on outside, they had better adjourn, which they accordingly did. A MONSTER MEETING. In the meantime the audience which had left the hall at the beginning of the meeting assembled on the street in front of the Academy, where a temporary platform was constructed of store boxes. President Walsh made a short speech introducing Mr. Rosewater, who proceeded to speak at some length upon matters of interest. MR. ROSEWATER. Mr. Rosewater said he had been invited to speak at the Academy of Music, and had desired to appeal to the workingmen of Omaha, and he found himself locked out when he had inquired for Mr. Murphy, the president of the International Labor union, he was told by some of Hascall's strikers, who were at the stage door, that Murphy was not there. When he entered the Academy he found, to his surprise, that Hascall had posted two of his henchmen at the door to divide the working people into black sheep and white. Those who wore the badge of the Labor Union were crowded to the rear and packed like sardines, while men who were supposed to be friendly to Hascall and his clique were politely shown front seats. There was no design nor desire to break up the meeting, but since free speech was suppressed and the cut-and-dried program, gotten up for the purpose of foisting DISREPUTABLE TRICKSTERS and notorious frauds upon workingmen, it was best to let these parties have the hall to themselves. The fact that the entire audience had left the hall demonstrated that the working people of Omaha had no sympathy with this part of trickery. These parties that presumed to represent the back of headachin, weakness in reality men picked by Hascall and Hornberger and represented nobody but themselves. This Hascall is pretty well known in Omaha. His record as a public man is corrupt and disreputable. Six weeks ago, while in Washington, the speaker had received a letter from his associate editor that Hascall had in his absence called at the office and sought to bribe him for the purpose of suppressing reports unfavorable to the STAR ROUTE THIEVES, who were on trial then at Lincoln. Hascall left fifty dollars for this purpose. That money is still at the office in a sealed envelope. After being requested to call for it several times, Hascall did call and said he did not want the money. He was told that unless it was taken out of here before long it would be given to some charity. The curious part of this is that at the very time that this bribery was attempted the Republican had an article against the star route swindlers one day commencing "Fury, and the next day they took it all back and made out that the transaction was using disreputable means to convict the parties indicted. In "The Herald" office an article that had been written against the star route swindlers was suppressed and another inserted by order of Dr. Miller in support of the indicted parties. The query is, how many fifty dollar bills did Hascall and his pals leave at "The Republican" and "Herald" offices? The speaker held in his hand documents that SHOULD FOREVER BAR HASCALL and other parties on that ticket from the confidence of this people in any position of public trust. For nearly six months he had in his office the correspondence of Dr. Cushing with the Holly Water company, which disclosed a conspiracy in which Dr. Miller, Hascall and other parties were involved, to rob this community and force upon them a gigantic fraud. And yet, Hascall let the impudence to come, now to the taxpayers and citizens of Omaha and ask for their votes. The Hascall clique have endorsed McGivock, who is also endorsed by Thurston and his citizees; and across the street here we see a saloon downstairs and a gambling hell upstairs, but we are told the man who runs that house is a good man for workingmen to support. (Laughter.) The speaker commended the working people for their disposition to disapprove upon those who charged them with designing to put yellow dogs and damn rascals in the city government. They, in common with all business men, and all tax-payers, were interested in putting forward men who would give us an HONEST AND ECONOMICAL municipal administration. He went so far even as to say that if the workingmen had made no mistake in their nominations, to vote for the best men. They had nominated some very good men, however. Mr. Thrane from the First ward was a reputable mechanic, and Fred Behm was a man that had everybody's confidence. Mr. Bushman is a business man against whom no one can say a word. In closing he alluded to the fact that while in common with all good citizens he deplored the trouble on the dump he rejoiced to know that Omaha workingmen had behaved so well since then. It is charged that this strike had political aims, but he knew that this was false. The political outcome has only been forced since the military occupation, and when the people who have been so alarmed get to their sober senses they will see that they have MADE POOLS OF THEMSELVES. He hoped the agitation would cease after the election, and contractors and builders would be able to make arrangements to give good wages and prevent further strikes during the building season. [Loud and prolonged cheering.] At the conclusion of Mr. Rosewater's remarks there were loud calls for COL SMYTHE, who responded by saying that he did not know of any greater honor that could be bestowed upon him than for these gentlemen to come here and howl for him in the way they had done on this particular occasion. He was not running for office and he had no particular views to advocate, but he wanted to say that he had a good, strong left arm, and that left arm had always been used in behalf of the working man. He had always possessed a half a dollar, and no workingman ever came to him in need but what he got it. He was entirely with the workingmen in their struggle for LIVING WAGES, and he desired to say publicly that he believed the action that had been taken by the officials of Omaha was quite unwarranted. When they brought the bayonets here they brought something that should never have been brought here. If at the dump Mayor Boyd had said, "I want one thousand of you men to protect the peace of Omaha," he believed they would have responded to a man. The workingmen of Omahahave their wives and families here, and all their interests are centered in the city. Could a man be found in the crowd before him that wanted bloodshed? (Cries of "Not one!") If he asked for a thousand workingmen he could get them, and with them he would protect Mayor Boyd and the city of Omaha, and he knew the men would stand by him. [Loud and prolonged cheering.] They had taken a wise course, and during all the labor troubles and so long as they pursued this course the citizens would stand by them until the troubles were ended. Mr. Walsh then made a few observations urging the laboring men to stand shoulder to shoulder on this occasion and in the end they would achieve a grand victory. "Hazel Kirke" to-night. W. R. HAYDEN. What a Successful Star Has Done, and What an Enterprising Manager is Doing—His Latest Venture. Mr. William R. Hayden, the manager of Thos. W. Keene, who is now recognized from one side of the country to the other as one of the great representatives of legitimate acting in this country, was Saturday met by a representative of this paper. "No," said Mr. Hayden, "Keene has not exceeded my expectations. When I made a contract with him two years ago I was confident that at once he would become a favorite as a star. It was with me a plain business question. I had watched often the effect of his acting upon an audience and that was enough for me." "But has Keene been popular from the start—has he drawn audiences since he began as large as he is drawing now?" "It is a difficult thing to make people who know the fluctuations of the dramatic business believe that during Keene's entire stellar career, he has never played to a week of losing business. The audiences of this season are scarcely larger than those of last, but the profits will be much larger." "Is not this a very extraordinary record for a star?" "No tragedian in the history of the stage has become so suddenly popular as Keene." "How do you account for it?" "Well, he acts with a vigor and vitality and an originality that gives to his Shakespearean roles novelty. Then he is an earnest and energetic actor, is thoroughly trained in all his business, and is a careful and an intelligent student." "Does he study much now?" "One would imagine," said Hayden, "that Keene now having attained his popularity would become less studious than he was at first; but this is not the case. Every day of his life he devotes three or four hours to study. He has always some new character under way." "What roles does he intend to add to his repertoire?" "He is studying King Lear and Louis XI. Probably he will add them to his repertoire next year." "I hear," said the reporter, "that you have become the lessee of the Grand opera house in Chicago?" "Yes," responded Mr. Hayden; "with Mr. W. J. Davis I have secured a ten years' lease of that property. By the terms of the lease we take possession of the house one year from next month." "There is some dispute over the lease, is not there?" "The dispute amounts to nothing at all. The present lessee thinks that the proprietor of the property has the right to rent it to whoever he pleases. The landlord thinks he has, and he made a lease with us openly." "What policy do you intend to pursue in the Grand opera house?" "That I haven't yet fully determined. Probably, however, we will run it on the combination plan." "There was a rumor that you intended to have a circus of your own this season?" "I am not prepared," responded Mr. Hayden, "to say anything upon that subject." Grateful Women.
