appear to meet with little encouragement. The movement has resolved itself into the care of a few self constituted leaders, who would have it appear that those for whom the boon of suffrage is asked are earnest advocates. The recent election of school officers throughout the state bears ample testimony to the oft repeated fact that great mass of women throughout the state neither ask nor care for the ballot. At the school meetings held in very district in the state, where women possess the same right of voing as the men, there were less than one handred ballots deposited by women. The great cry raised by the dvocates of female suffrage has been that the influence of women in public affairs would be beneficial. There is no phase of public affairs that women, as a class, so fully comprehend and upon which they could ex-ert an influence so wholesome and intelligent, as that relating to our system of public education. And yet, in Nebraska, where the great battle for equal rights and emancipation is going forward; just at that supreme m ment wi on patriotism in the female heart should have been ablaza, there could be mustered in the whole state fifty or sixty followers. The whole question has resolved itself into this: There are about fifty women in the state of Nebraska who wish to vote. Shall we amend the constitution of the state to accommodate this half century of females?

A Mournful Scene

New York Times, As a people we may sometimes be wanting in respect for our great and good men while they are living, but we are quick to recognize their virtues after they are dead. The late Mr. Jessie James, who was one of the ablest murderers and unquestionably the eading robber in the state of Missonri before he was assassinated by another leading robber hired for that purpose by the governor of the state, was frequently spoken of in disrespectful terms by Missourians who had left the state and did not intend to return to

it. Now, however, that Mr. James is securely dead, the honors which have been paid to his body and his memory show that the western people can appreciate true greatness at its real worth. The funeral of Mr. James was held at various houses on Wednesday last at the town of Kearney, the whole day being spent in funeral evercises.

The body lay in state in the morning at the Netherton hotel, where thoussands or people came to see it, and so deeply were even the habitually hard hearts of railway men stirred that the conductor of a train passing through the town stopped long enough to permit his passengers to pay a tribute of respect to the great man. Men and women gazed compassionately upon the corpse, and most of them expressd the opinion that the governor had 'played it pretty low down on the re-mains," and that the latter had.'t a fair show."

At noon the first part of the funeral was celebrated at the local Baptist meeting house. An ordinary honest citizen can usually be successfully buried by one able-bodied Baptist preacher, but on this occasion two were thought necessary, and one of them was no less a person than the "President of Liberty college"— wherever that may be. The body was carried from the hotel to the meeting house at the head of an imposing procession. The hearse was tollowed by carriages containing the family of the deceased; a detachment of mounted officers; a wagon containing representatives of the i reas, and finally by the "citizens generally," the later division consisting of an immense crowd on foot, horseback or in carriages. The minister met the cof-fin at the door of his establishment, and with the help of his clerical brother lavished prayers, hymns, and ser-mons upon the deceased hero, inadvertently urging his hearers not to neglect their salvation, and not to excite, the half-brother of the corpse who

be suited, call on Edholm & Erickson and get a pair of the genuine Starticated Spectacles or Eye Classes. From the meeting house the bode was taken by the pall-bearers only of whom was the aheriff, while the others were leading citizens, eminent either in respectability or crime—to the desolate home of the bereaved family. In spite of the elequent preacher's request that the half-brother, "Johnny," should not be excited, the corpse was taken into Johnny's room and laid by his bed where he could take a last fond look at it. The was lying at the point of death.

scene that followed was very touching, and there was not a dry eye in the house, but it is feared that "Johnny" cannot survive the excitement to which he was subjected, and that another valuable life will be lost,

At the grave there was some funeral-fresh Baptist preacher being em-Wahoo, April 13.—District court ployed, who prayed, sang, and exadjourned to day. The family of the deceased cannot be expected to feel reconciled to their sad loss, but it must be admitted that The organization of the Wahoo school district was changed at the mother and the widow its members annual meeting from that of the old show a truly christian spirit. The children nightly "pray to God that Uncle Frank—who is in all respects a worthy brother of the late Jessiemay be spared." Let us hope that he will be. A career of useful and brilliant crime like that hitherto followed by "Uncle Frank," ought not to be prematurely checked. The loss of one of the James brothers is probably all that the weeping community could bear.

In whatever light the story of the life and death of Jessie James is contemplated, it must fill every thoughtful man with hope for the future of The female suffcagists of Nebraska the rising generation of Missourians. Mr. James rose to eminence as a murderer and robber, and his exploits have long been the wonder and admiration of the small boy of Missouri and the rest of the union. He came to his death, not by the hands of the hangman, but by the shot of the as-sassin, of whom the governor of the state is an accomplice - unless he has been greatly misrepresented-a circumstance which has already, apparently, sanctified the outlaw's momory among his fellow citizens Finally, Mr. James' dead body was buried by more Baptist ministers, and with the sympathizing attendance of more peo-ple than could be got together to bury the best law-abiding citizens of Mis-souri. If, in the face of the teaching of this man's life and death, the Missouri small boys grow up to look murder and robbery as anything but the legitimate pursuit of men of spirit, juvenile education must have very little influence.
