

THE CALIFORNIA MAN.

How He Believed the Monotony of a Journey Across the Plains. Denver Inter-Ocean. My fellow-passengers in the trip east across the plains over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road were not very lively or sociable until we pulled out from Pueblo, and then they brightened up and began to lie to each other. We ran over a dog, which had the effect of making all the life-long friends for the time being. There are only two ways of making the monotonous ride of 500 miles across the plains endurable, and they are, either to become insensible before you start and remain so, or else to have a lively party to accompany you. Some of us tried to become insensible, and our efforts had the effect of making us a very lively party before we reached Kansas City.

same time, for they were one and inseparable. "We are nearing Florence," said the fat man, "and we stand a show of getting a very nice supper." "I think I shall just tackle a slight lunch," said the California man, "although I got myself into trouble once for bringing lunch on board." "How was that?" the drummer asked. "Why, it was down in Los Angeles, and I stopped off and drank a glass of milk at the lunch counter, and bought a doughnut. I brought the doughnut on the train, but the conductor would not let me keep it in the passenger car."

Half plaintive, half revengeful, "I'm around me. I felt for a moment as if I must have felt when I placed my money in its hiding place, and, in my word, although I had eaten on hearty dinner, I felt for a time as though I could eat a roasted mule." The old gentleman left yesterday afternoon for his home in Missouri. HIS GRATITUDE. 11th and Poplar streets, St. Louis, Mo., March 17, 1881. H. H. Bill Nye in a Meditative Mood, in which he Takes a Philosophical View of Life. Laramie Boomerang. Dear friend, do you ever stand in the doorway of memory, when the golden sun lights up the road over which you have traveled, through the dust and heat of former years, and while you look out over the field of your great struggles, and victories and defeats, do you ever wish your self back again beyond the hour when first ambition filled your heart and made your present seem distasteful, and poor and mean in your eyes? Did you ever figure your gains and losses and look with weariness and unrest upon your achievements? Does it not sometimes occur to you that you have clearly bought your position and wealth?

Des Moines letter in Keokuk Gate City. The political outlook around and about the capital has not yet assumed any definite shape. The chairman of the republican state central committee will communicate with the various members by mail in reference to selecting a day for holding the state convention, which will occur sometime in August.

At the old state-house there is no excitement.

Secretary of State J. A. T. Hull is now in Washington attending to state business in connection with the preparation of a report of the last census, the last general assembly having instructed the executive council to provide for the necessary expense. Gov. Sherman is also a sojourner in the United States capital. Auditor Lucas is portly as ever and will undoubtedly be one of the heavy candidates for congress in his district, although he has not, so far, announced himself as such. R. L. Chase, the present deputy auditor, and J. L. Brown of Lucas county, seem to be the only candidates in the field at present for the state auditorship. Capt. Hull and Maj. Conger have no competitors for the respective offices which they now occupy. There are numerous candidates for clerk of the supreme court, among whom are C. T. Jones, the present deputy, who holds from Washington county, J. C. Deitz of Jones, L. B. Prayer of Webster, H. L. Bonquet of Marion, and perhaps A. J. Hirschel of Scott.

An Old Man Comes to Little Rock and Finds a Treasury Hidden During the War. Little Rock Gazette. In the latter part of 1863, while General Steele was commander of the post at Little Rock, a Missourian named Robert H. Crowley, of Price's command, was captured here as a prisoner of war and confined temporarily in the state house. From here Crowley was taken to Camp Chase, where he remained until the close of the war. Yesterday Mr. Crowley, now an old man, arrived in this city. Going to the state house he searched for a time among the hall ways, and finally took a hundred dollar bill from a hole in the wall.
