GOOD INDIAN GONE.

Ute Jack Goes to Heaven at the Mouth of a Mountain Howitzer.

After Standing Off a Squad of Soldiers and Killing the Sergeant.

News was received by General Crook at the headquarters of the Department of the Platte yesterday, that Ute Jack, a noted Ute chief had been killed at Fort Washakie while attempting to evade arrest. Jack belonged to the Southern Colorado Utes which are under the department of the Missouri, commanded by General John Pope. When the remainder of his tribe were removed to the agency, Jack turned up missing. It was subsequently discovered that he was in the neighborhood of Fort Washakie, Wyo., ostensibly on a visit to his friends, the Shoshones and Arapahoes. As the Indian was a dangerous one, the Indian department was especially anxious to secure him and bring him back to his agency. All efforts to induce him to return having failed, the general commanding the department of the Platte was called upon to arrest Jack and send him back to Colorado. Orders were issued to Capt. Morton, of Fort Washakie some two months ago to arrest the Indians. A vigorous search failing to find any traces of Jack and reports being current that he had gone back to Colorado, Capt. Morton notified General Crook to this effect. Several days ago learning that Ute Jack had been seen prowling in the neighborhood, a sergeant and a squad of soldiers were detailed to make the arrest. On Friday he was found near the post and immediately arrested. While on the way to Fort Washakie he escaped from his captors, and reaching a ranchman's tepee, seized a gun and shot dead the sergeant who was in pursuit.

Upon being notified, Captain Morton sent a mountain howitzer to the scene, and as Jack refused to surrender, a shell was thrown into the tepee with considerable effect. When Ute Jack was swept up it was generally remarked that he was now a good Indian, and the war department was so notified.

ORDERED TO THE FRONT.

In addition to the transfer of several companies of the Ninth regiment to the front, orders have been sent to Colonel Gibbon, of the Seventh infantry, stationed at Fort Snelling, Minn., to hold his command in readiness to proceed to Arizona, and join the force now operating there against the Indians. This looks as if the trouble there might be more serious than was supposed.

ARNDT'S RELEASE.

He Reappears to Prosecute his Suit in the Federal Court.

The arrest of Aug. Arndt for the alleged offense of obstructing the course of justice by threatening the life of Judge Dundy, of the United States court, is still fresh in the minds of those who keep posted in Nebraska affairs. Arndt was under a cloud at the time, by reason of a groundless suspicion that he was connected with the murder of Col. Watson B. Smith, the clerk of the court, and his arrest and prosecution resulted in his conviction at the January term of the United States court at Lincoln, his sentence being to ninety days imprisonment. The term of the sentence has just expired, and yesterday Mr. Arndt returned to Omaha prepared to take up anew the case in which he and the Union Pacific railway company are the parties. It was believed at the time that the prosecution was instigated by the company he is fighting, who would be heavy losers should the suit be decided in Arndt's favor. The case was called and about to be tried when Judge Dundy objected to sitting through it on account of the receipt of certain information and letters which led him to believe that one of the parties had threatened his life, and that, consequently, he could not act without laying himself open to the charge of being prejudiced. The case comes up again to-day, and Mr. Arndt is present once more to prosecute his claim.

A Big Haul.

There was a big haul of small fry by the police for the two days ending the first spring month. Whether it was the effect of "bock" beer, which was put on tap Saturday, or not is not stated, but if it was, the "bock" downed a pretty big squaw. The register at the Hotel de Meville last night showed an unusual number of guests, a large proportion of whom belonged to the family of the notorious and disreputable individual known as John Doe, a feminine Doe being registered among the rest. Of the outfit who were docketed for an appearance in the city court this morning, numbering nineteen in all, there were two Slocombs, two traps, one for robbery, two petit larceny, one grand larceny, two for carrying concealed weapons, and one for disorderly conduct. Eight put up the dust for an appearance, and were released for the night.

Wholesale Liquor Merchants.

Pleasant Reception.

A reception was given Friday at the Standard club rooms to Misses Julia and Pauline Prince, sister of Mr. Sol. Prince, and late of Boston, who have come with their father to make this city their home. About fifty couples were present, and the affair was in all respects most enjoyable and calculated to be a pleasant one, both to the amiable and accomplished young ladies in whose honor it was given and to their friends.

ELI PERKINS.

He Discourses on the Subject of the Manitoba Fraud.

The Deluded Thousands Who are Answering the Canadian Pacific Pamphlets.

Among the arrivals at the Metropolitan yesterday was Eli Perkins (Melville D. Landon), who goes from here to Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco and Oregon on a journalistic trip.

When our reporter asked Mr. Perkins where he came from he said: "I've just come from St. Paul and Winnipeg in Manitoba."

"Is there much emigration up that way?"

"Yes, emigration into Manitoba is epidemic. Fifteen hundred people pass through St. Paul and Minneapolis almost every day."

"Are they pleased with Winnipeg?"

"Pleased? No, sir. They are very much displeased. The whole Winnipeg boom is a bubble. Twenty thousand poor emigrants are now suffering on the streets of Winnipeg. The town holds but 8,000 people. The emigrants have no place to stay. They sleep out doors. There is no work. Provisions are high. Pork is worth 50 cents a pound, hay $25 per ton, potatoes, there are none. A yoke of oxen is worth $200. The people are actually suffering there. Hundreds are now coming back into Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska."

"Why did they go there when there is so much better land in Nebraska, Iowa and Dakota?"

"Why, England, Scotland and Ontario have been flooded with pamphlets praising Manitoba. These pamphlets say any one can take $500 and buy and stock a farm in Manitoba. When they get to Winnipeg they find they have to go 250 miles westward to Ou' Appelle. Ou' Appelle is full of grumbling, suffering people. The land is bad. Snow covers the ground. Pork there is worth 40 cents per pound and other provisions are in proportion. The emigrant becomes disheartened. When if he had gone into Dakota or Nebraska he would have found a home."

"How long will the bubble keep up appearances?"

"The bubble has burst now. Car loads of Canadians are coming back into the states. The whole Manitoba boom is premature. They are going there twenty years ahead of time. There is no building there because they have no timber. A mechanic can get over $1.50 a day while it will cost him $2 to live."

"Where do you advise settlers to go to now?"

"The Spirit Lake country in Iowa is a good place. Then again all along the Chicago, St. Paul & Omaha railroad in Southwestern Minnesota land can be bought for from $4 to $6 per acre, which will be worth $25 within two years. Then out in Holt, Custer, Sioux, Antelope, Dixon and Pierce counties in Nebraska there is plenty of government land. It makes me sad when I see these poor deluded people go up into the bound Canada on poor lands, when such good lands are to be had so much nearer to market."

RAILROADS.

"Do you hear anything new about railroads in New York?" asked our reporter.

"Yes. Mr. Dillon told me the day before I left that the Oregon extension of the Union Pacific was to be hurried up. The policy of the Union Pacific people is to push on to Helena and all points in Montana, Alaska of the Northern Pacific. This will be good for Omaha, for if the channels of trade come to your city first, it will be hard to change them over to St. Paul and Minneapolis."

"Have you heard anything about the bridge across the river between Omaha and Council Bluffs?"

"I find there is a feeling among C. B. & Q. northwestern, and Rock Island men that another bridge will have to be built soon. These roads are bound to come to Omaha. They say that to come within two miles of a city of 40,000 people and stop is suicidal. Then they think that the new Missouri Pacific connection with Omaha will divert traffic away from the pool. They feel, for their own safety, that they must come to Omaha."

THE END.

No New Cases of Small Pox Expected This Season.

A Bee reporter met Dr. J. S. Leisner Saturday, and learned from him that no apprehensions are now felt as to the further spread of small pox on Capitol hill or elsewhere in the city. The patients are all convalescing and will probably get well.

There are now at the hospital Miss Anna Johnson and Miss Carrie Johnson, no relation, although bearing the same name. The former was taken out from her home on Leavenworth, near Eleventh. The two men, Conrad and Kreiselman, have been discharged as well.

In the city there remains two cases, Mrs. A. Gunn and her little son. The latter case was very bad indeed, but the doctor now thinks he will recover.

The steward was down town on Thursday and walking about the streets as in days of yore. His constitution does not seem to have suffered and in fact he has apparently become doubled in weight during his voluntary exile.

By the orders of the city physician the newspaper reporters, who secured a telephone line for the hospital, were cut out from communication with it for the alleged reason that the published reports were colored. THE BEE is probably specially referred to as it has taken pains to keep the public fully informed of the actual state of affairs.

It has published nothing that did not come directly from the Steward, who will bear out its statements. The order is nevertheless what might be expected only. Had the volumes of complaints and charges made against the authorities been published they could not have done too much to oblige the press, but do a favor always if you want the "grand shake."

GRAND LARCENY.

W. T. Seaman Once More a Victim to the Peculating Fraternity.

W. T. Seaman has probably had his full share of bad luck at the hands of safe blowers, robbers and thieves generally, and again he is to be recorded as a sufferer in that direction. For some time past he has had reason to suspect that one of his clerks, M. H. Perkins was getting away with his goods, and on Saturday evening affairs came to a crisis and he had the young man arrested.

Mr. Seaman had on several occasions discovered shortage in the cash account and this time he ascertained just what there was in the drawer before the clerks went to supper and left Perkins in charge. On examination afterwards he found two five dollar bills missing. He called the culprit up, in the presence of a clerk who came in, and said: "Give me those two five dollar bills which you took out of the drawer." Perkins at once handed them over, thus acknowledging his guilt. Mr. Seaman then asked him for the rest of the money which he had taken, but he stated that that was all he had got away with.

Mr. Seaman then accompanied Perkins to his room, on Dodge street, and made him deliver up a number of things which he had stolen from the store—several books, two toilet dressing cases, mottoes, picture frames and other articles, and then delivered him to the custody of Policeman Jacobson, who lodged him in jail.

Just what amounts has been plundered from the store is not known, as Perkins has worked in the store since December last, but it amounts to enough no doubt to make the charge of "grand larceny" which is set opposite his name on the jailor's book good. The man difficulty will be to prove that enough was taken at one time to constitute a felony or to succeed in convincing a jury that the several thefts can be combined into one offense and punished by a term at Lincoln.

SIGNAL SERVICE.

The Inspector Takes in Omaha on His Grand Tour.

Lieut. Charles E. Kilborn, of the Second cavalry, at present holding a very important position in the signal service, arrived in the city Saturday morning on his way east from a tour of inspection covering all the stations west of the Mississippi river.

Lieutenant Kilborn is a graduate of West Point and was for some years stationed on the Pacific coast, where he married his wife, who joins him here to-day after six months' visit to her old home. He was detailed last fall to inspect the stations throughout the west and has done so thoroughly, Omaha being the last on his list. He has been as far south as San Diego and as far north as Cour de Leon, Idaho, and Olympia, Wash., and has not only paid a visit to the station at Point Barrow, on the shores of the Arctic sea. He is now on his way back to Washington, unless he should receive some orders detailing him for new duty before he reaches the national capital. The inspector is a very pleasant gentleman, of unusual intelligence, and may yet succeed to the highest position in the service, that of chief, which place he certainly would do credit to.

LIZZIE BLACKFORD.

How a Reckless Girl Succeeded in Marrying Her Sweetheart.

Gath, in a letter to the San Francisco Chronicle, tells the following among other recollections of noted school-mates: "In my class was a young man, the son of a minister, whose sister, I think, became the noted Lizzie Blackford, who got some of the jewels of the royal family of Russia from an infatuated young grand duke. The person whom I take to have been the brother of this adventuresome was a very handsome boy, of a saddish feminine countenance, and seldom had anything to say. Lizzie was a pretty and forward girl who made way with her virtue in Philadelphia very quickly, and being 'fast' by nature saw in almost every man she came close to opportunities for flirtation or an intrigue. Being taken to West Virginia, she fascinated a disappointed young doctor there and persuaded him to follow her in the train of cars to Baltimore, and as they passed Oakland, Md., where the 'train dined,' the deceitful girl let her mother run past and she and the lover, procuring a minister, were married in the hotel parlor, and the wife of General Crook, of the United States army, who was then Miss Mary Daily, stood up with the couple. Mrs. Crook's father kept the hotel, and the reckless girl made it appear that she was the victim of family tyranny and was marrying her original sweetheart in obedience to her heart. Not very long afterward Blackford died, and some ascribed it to whisky and others to poison. The girl made him unhappy and then ran a muck of blackmail through Philadelphia, and the life of an American lorette in Paris, and made a conquest of the Russian duke."

A DOMESTIC STORM.

Mutual Charges by Eusband and Wife After Twenty Years' Union.

The Case Brought Into Police Court.

On Friday night it was rumored down town that a case of suicide had occurred on Sixteenth street and a reporter investigated the matter but without result. On Saturday morning a complaint was filed in the police court against Henry W. Brown, charging him with assault with intent to commit murder, the complaint being sworn to by Brown's wife. The accused was arrested and by consent of both counsel was released on his own recognizance. On Saturday evening he was re-arrested on the complaint of his son-in-law and in default of bail was committed.

THE BEE had the pleasure, on Saturday, of a call from both parties, and from a view of both sides of the case it seems to be one of domestic difficulty which can not be bridged over. Mrs. Brown states that her husband has been for several years a drinking man and that when under the influence of liquor he is exceedingly ugly. She says he has repeatedly threatened her with bodily harm and that at one time she became so much in terror of him that she fled to Nebraska City where she remained for some time. He followed her and by specious promises induced her to return and live with him again, promising that he would let whisky alone. It was not a week, she says, until he came home drunker than ever, and from that time to the present trouble has been their lot.

On the occasion of the double tragedy in the Jonas family, Mrs. Brown said to her husband: "Well, I suppose from what you have said, that it is the way you and I will go off some time," and Brown replied in a manner intimating that it was, lately she has become terrified by his conduct, so that she has been in constant fear of some violence. She states that he stayed out late and then came home, and if the door was locked, forced his way in. On Friday night she went out for a walk, and on her return found that he had been there, and frightened the children nearly to death by his talk, after ordering them all to bed. This son-in-law, Joe Abbott, lives in the family, and he insisted in calling him up out of bed. On his appearance, in undress, Brown pulled a revolver out of his hat, and both Abbott and Mrs. Brown vacated the premises in a hurry, the latter screaming for aid. An officer was called, who, on his arrival in the vicinity, found Brown walking about coolly, as though nothing had happened. He let him go without arrest, and after coming down town and taking in several drinks, he returned home about 3 a. m., and slept the balance of the night up stairs. Mrs. Brown and her children meantime bunking on the floor at a neighbor's. Mrs. Brown fearing further violence, or as she says, that he would repeat the Jonas business, filed the complaint referred to, though she stated that that would probably make matters worse, as her husband had threatened to kill her if she ever had him arrested. On Saturday she was in terror of her life and inclined to leave town until the day of the trial.

Brown, on the other hand, accuses his wife of infidelity and says his son-in-law, Abbott, is more solid with Mrs. B. than he is. He says he has supported the fellow for a long time and paid for the coffin in which his child was buried and he is tired of it. His wife says this is an infamous lie. Both parties talk of a separation and divorce, which is probably the best thing for them to take.

FUN AT THE PARK.

The Spring Opening Results in Ducking a Male Quakotte.

The opening of the Hancock Park street car line yesterday drew a large crowd to that beautiful spot and besides the pedestrians there was a goodly display of vehicles and horse flesh, than which none can show up better than Omaha. During the afternoon a little episode occurred at the lake which created quite a sensation at the time, and had the water been deeper, might have resulted in a drowning.

A party of four young men, in kids, and with canes, struck a crowd of "kiddies" who were riding in a boat on the lake to rent the skiff for an hour. After some haggling about the price, forty cents was agreed upon as rent enough for a half hour's ride. The quartet thereupon took possession and pulled out for deep water, singing, "A Home on the Ocean Wave," between whiffs at their fragrant Havana cigars. When about half way out they found the boat beginning to dip, and one of the party, seeing the inevitable, jumped overboard, like Jonah, hoping to appease the Deity. The boat, however, continued to fill, and the first victim, who only went in up to his armpits, was followed by a second, who went in up to his chin. The third went down over his head, his cigar going out beneath the muddy waves and his hat alone remaining on the surface to mark the spot. The fourth also took to the water but his fate is not recorded. As they could not swim they all paddled ashore dog fashion and the banks being rounded up with no calculation for climbing on one of the boys had a difficult job in getting on dry land, even after their escape from a watery grave.

The spectacle was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic crowd, about two hundred carriages lining the sides of the lake, and as the unfortunate navigators landed, one of the "kiddies" was cruel enough to inquire: "Well, did you get your money's worth?"

Out of respect to the smoke we had at the victims' expense, no names will be mentioned.

The members of the Union Pacific base ball club held the first business

The following officers were elected: Manager and captain, Frank W. Bandle; president, Col. D. M. Selig; vice president, John P. Lord; treasurer, John G. Taylor; secretary, D. W. Haynes.
